COUNCILMANIC STREET COMMITTEE'S POW-WOW

The Councilmanic street committee, together with Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, met last night in Mayor C. L. Fisk's office and informally discussed plans for the year. No decision was reached concerning work to be done, the consideration of plans being tentative. The members also talked about the appropriation to be asked for, but another meeting will be held before the amount is decided.

There was some talk about the brick pavement and as soon as the weather will permit, Contractor C. M. Meeker will be instructed to proceed with the necessary repairs. A sufficient amount of money was withheld from the contract price to cover these repairs, but winter came on and Mr. Meeker could not go on with the work. There will also be considerable street repair during the coming year and it is a question whether the committee will recommend the further use of patent preparations to preserve the macadam and keep the dust down. The committee decided to hold another meeting next week.

The play is now at the Broadway theatre, New York, where it has been having a highly successful run. Tickets are on sale at Kenney's and at Greer & Greenwood's stores.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

C. L. Becker, of the Woodland Golf Club, of Massachusetts, won the chief cup in the sixth annual mid-winter golf tournament at Pinehurst on Wednesday. He defeated L. A. Hamilton, of the Englewood Golf Club, in the final round by 2 up and 1 to play. Becker was dormie 2 standing in the seventeenth tee, and settled the question by halving the hole.

J. P. Gardner, of Chicago, won the consolation cup, while the other division winners were S. L. Brunbaugh, of the Philadelphia Country Club; J. H. Hawley, of Hackensack; W. G. Clark, of Woodland; Dr. E. Senseman, of Atlantic City, and R. A. Sasseen, of Fox Hills, Staten Island.

GENERAL SPORTS.

An exchange says Big Bill Edwards, the famous Princeton football player and "referee," has been appointed head of the D. S. C. Edwards always has acted as umpire. Such is renown.

Ralph Baker, the runner who scored for Swarthmore in the intercollegiate half mile races in 1906 and 1907, is in Pennsylvania and has begun to train. Baker is in his second year in the Penn law school. He will be a very useful man for the Red and Blue.

Oberlin will make an Eastern basketball trip. Syracuse, Colgate and Rochester will be met on February 4, 5 and 6, respectively, in this State.

Harvard vs. Yale, Cornell vs. Pennsylvania, Amherst vs. Brown, Williams vs. Wesleyan, M. I. T. vs. Syracuse and Harvard, 1912 vs. Yale, 1912, are some of the pairings for the Boston A. A. games on February 6.

Marion C. Robertson, who has been elected track captain at the Naval Academy, is a weight thrower. He succeeds Percy W. Northcroft, who resigned the place.

There is a chance the Navy basketball team may meet Georgetown in Washington on March 3, which will be the evening before the inauguration of Mr. Taft. Because the Navy men will be in Washington for the inaugural exercises it is believed permission will be granted for the game. Georgetown and the Navy have met twice at basketball thus far this season, each winning a game by a very small margin.

Stanford's rugby football players likely will get a match with the Wallabies, the crack Australian fifteen who played many successful matches in Great Britain. The Standard team recently won the international championship by beating Vancouver, but hardly hopes for a victory over the antipodeans.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is one of the leading institutions of the country in minor sports, apparently. In cross-country running, hockey and basketball, M. I. T. is as good as the best. Beating Harvard, Darthmouth and Williams is a good record for the basketball men thus far this season.

The athletic board at Wisconsin has declared in favor of retaining intercollegiate baseball as a sport at Madison and the whole matter now waits the return of President Van Hise to the university.

A schedule of twenty-four games for the upper class league has been arranged in the intracollege basketball series at Princeton.

Columbia and Johns Hopkins University are to meet in a four mile relay race at the Hopkins games in Baltimore on January 30.

The Missouri Valley conference of colleges has established itself as separate from the Big Eight. The University of Iowa, which belongs in the Missouri organization, is a member of the Big Eight and will have to make a choice. It is said the Missouri conference will sanction summer baseball playing.

The University of Minnesota will have steel stands put up on its athletic field. This will cost $40,000. Most of this money now is at hand.

Marquette University, which last fall began a memorable campaign to put "Milwaukee on the athletic map," is to have a fine new gymnasium.

England's Castles.

"Historic Castles in England" is the subject of a lecture to be given to the High School students next Saturday evening by George N. Cross, the well-known traveler and lecturer. "The best accomplished speaker in New Hampshire," as Mr. Cross is called, he was for twenty years the head master of Robinson Female Seminary at Exeter. Of late years he has devoted his time entirely to the lecture platform. The lecture will be illustrated by a profusion of beautifully colored views, many of which were difficult to secure and were taken specially for this address. The proceeds will go to the High School Oracle.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel V. Eckel, of Little York, have just celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage.

The Vineland Station of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad last year yielded a revenue of $70,000 for passenger tickets alone.

Officials of Atlantic City banks are joining a movement for a Saturday half-holiday. The banks are now kept open until the usual closing hour that day.

Catholics at Williamstown are taking steps for the erection of a new church rectory. The Presbyterian congregation is also raising a fund for a new edifice.

The approval of the high school course at Tuckerton by the State Board of Education is now practically assured by the employment of Miss Edna Seaman, of Allentown, Pa., as teacher. The board will now take up the matter of better school buildings.

Suit was instituted yesterday by Mrs. Jane B. Newsham, through former Judge Howard Carrow and William J. Kraft, to recover $10,000 damage against the Public Service Corporation. Mrs. Newsham was thrown from a trolley car and seriously injured.

Shot in the right leg by the accidental discharge of a gun while shooting the old year out and the new year in, Joseph Chapman, nineteen years old, of Ellisburg, died in Cooper Hospital, Camden, early yesterday. After the mangled limb was amputated gangrene developed.

The West Vineland Farm and Garden Club, organized forty years ago, is making preparations to inaugurate New Jersey day on February 1. A meeting has been called, to be held at the home of A. P. Arnold, to tell what New Jersey has done and what would be best for the future.

The installation of Rev. William A. Littell, the new pastor of the Smith Street United Presbyterian church, Paterson, will take place in the auditorium of the church tonight. The sermon of the evening will be preached by Rev. Robert R. Littell, of Newark, a brother of the new pastor.

The Camden Excise Board last night granted 151 retail license applications, all for old places, and laid over seventy-nine until tomorrow night. The board also granted twenty-eight wholesale applications and laid over six. The Law and Order Society was not represented at the meeting.

Accused of having defrauded Kirk Werkmeister, of Egg Harbor City, out of $1,000, Joseph Metzer was convicted and Arthur Reibal acquitted, in the Camden Criminal Court yesterday. Metzer and Reibal are president and secretary, respectively, of the Germania Brewing and Distilling Company.

Further steps looking to the purchase of the Haddonfield turnpike were taken by the Camden County Board of Freeholders yesterday, when a resolution was adopted authorizing the county collector to pay to the owners of the turnpike the purchase price, to be fixed by condemnation proceedings.

Anthony Wagner, of 48 Bloomfield avenue, Paterson, employed as a crane hand in the plant of the East Jersey Pipe Works, was struck on the head and rendered unconscious by a falling timber late yesterday afternoon. Though taken to the General Hospital he declined to remain in the institution over night when advised to do so. He is suffering from shock and severe contusions of the head.

COSTUMES IN THE CITY.

One sees so many new dress arrangements that is is often really difficult to decide exactly what is best worth telling; again, it is almost impossible to pick up a new idea that has any solid value in it. One of the newest little articles was a fur scarf of white, unmarked fur that rounded the neck, crossing under the chin. The tabs were about eight inches long and were trimmed with tiny fur ball fringe. The hat which matched this was a soft white fur trimmed with a plain band of black; the dres was black.

One of the dressy street costumes was a French model of fine wine-colored serge. The coat was not unlike the usual half-length, with plain sleeves and frog fasteners at the left side, but the skirt was quaint and novel. It was severely plain and close fitting to the knee line, and was trimmed beneath with a straight flounce of extremely wide inverted box pleats. These pleats were plain, straight, and the seam was distinctly outlined at the knee, with no attempt to cover it with a trimming. There was no button trimming. The collar fastened at the back and was headed with a wine-colored satin fold. The cuffs were trimmed with the satin fold, one inch wide.—Woman's National Daily.

Mrs. J. D. Runyon and her sister, Miss Anna Boice, of Park avenue, have gone to Braidentown, Fla., where they will remain until early summer.

J. T. Closson, of East Front street, who has been seriously ill with rheumatism, is now able to be about the house and his general condition is much improved.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Nothing great is ever done on doubts. All masterful influences are builded on faith.—Bishop William Quayle, Methodist, Chicago.

Value of Hard Work.

Hard work never spoiled anybody. It teaches independence, begets courage, fosters self reliance and inspires self support.—Rev. W. W. Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

Soul Growth.

The mind will not develop without thought and knowledge, and there can be no soul growth without God.—Rev. Guy Arthur Jamieson, Episcopalian, Tottenville, N. Y.

Guard Your Influence.

Nothing destroys your influence like wrongdoing, and nothing gives you more confidence and greater power with others than a clean life.—Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Soul Food.

The truth is food for the human soul, by which it grows and becomes strong and noble. Truth is instrumental. It is through a knowledge of the truth that we find freedom and peace and strength.—Rev. John W. Rowlett, Unitarian, Atlanta, Ga.

Life's Rich Tableland.

Most people look upon middle age as upon an oasis. They call it a rich tableland, harvest clad, sloping backward toward a desert named infancy, sloping forward toward on unproductive desert named old age.—Rev. Dr. N. D. Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Moral Law.

There is a moral law as truly as there is a law of gravitation, and this great law of laws will stand for no trifling with itself, and with both the individual and the nation nothing endures that does not rest on justice and decency.—Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, Universalist, New York.

What Love Will Do.

Love is the cornerstone of every truly happy home. It is the invisible bond, knitting heart with heart in an indissoluble union. It is the motive power which will send a father to exhausting labor for the sake of others. It is the inspiration of all that is noblest in art, in drama, in poetry and of all that is most heroic in history.—Rev. E. S. Woodring, United Evangelical, Philadelphia.

Secret of Perpetual Youth.

To learn is also to unlearn. To grow is to outgrow. In advancing we leave something behind. The soil is enriched by dead leaves and dead forests. Civilization has been enriched by old empires that are dead and buried. The old gods are mummies, and some of the new ones are being mummified. "We rise on stepping stones of our dead selves." To live and learn—this is the secret of perpetual youth.—Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ames, Unitarian, Boston.

The Church's Mission.

The church has no business in politics. Its business is to make men good. When it shall have done that it shall have done the full measure of its duty both to mankind and to the state. When all men are good there will be no need for the interference of the church in politics to better conditions. The mission of the church is to proclaim to all men the teaching of Christ, and its mission is divine, not political.—Rev. Percy S. Grant, Episcopalian, New York.

Love's First Duty.

Now, if the whole essence of love is to put the joys and the blessings and the happiness of others above all selfish happiness and joys and blessings, what is then in its crudest form the first duty of love? First, never to give another pain; never do anything which will bring the tear to the eye or the quiver to the lip or the sob to the aching heart. It does not take much to wound the sensibilities of another. And, if your first duty of life is to learn not to hurt yourself, so the first duty of love should be never to hurt or to wound the feelings of another.—Rev. Dr. Frank De Witt Talmage, Presbyterian, Los Angeles, Cal.

Not Enough Religion.

Benjamin Franklin once said, "Time is money," but it is much more. With some of us it is only money, for it is spent with money getting wholly in view. But what is money compared to nobler virtues and pleasures of life? At best time is short. It is important, therefore, that it be well redeemed, for the night cometh when no man can work. Not only should the young be actively engaged in their youth, providing thus in the springtime of life for a time when they perchance may be incapacitated for work, for, after all, when one is sick and has no money he is usually nothing more than an object of pity, so that some need to learn a lesson from the ant and provide for a time of need. Important as it is to provide for the body, it is still more important to make provisions for things eternal, the soul, which will survive the perishable body. When death knocks at the door it is too late to think about making such necessary provision. Religion that does not make a man or woman kind and loving in the home is a sham and a mockery. Shame on those who pretend to be Christians who in public life and in the church assume the smile of a saint and in the home wear the mask of the devil and, still worse, act like the evil one! There is too much pretense in this world and not enough of practical religion in everyday life. Some who kneel at the mourners' bench to point others to life eternal should first kneel there themselves and be saved before seeking to save others. This thing of being an angel on the street and a fiend in the house is all wrong.—Rev. Dr. L. M. Zimmerman, Lutheran, Baltimore.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 17, 1909

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—"Pilgrim's Progress" series.—I. Leaving the City of Destruction.—Acts xvi, 25-34.

One of the interesting features of the Christian Endeavor topics this year will be the study of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress." Next to the Bible no book ever written has had such a wide circulation and has resulted in the salvation of so many souls. Preparatory to this study every Christian Endeavorer should read the life of John Bunyan and in connection with it study carefully and prayerfully the wonderful story which represents the journey of a Christian through this sinful world. Bunyan has been called the "prince of dreams," and his greatest dream is the "Pilgrim's Progress," which is far more than an imagined dream, though related as one. Bunyan was confined at different times for about twelve years in Bedford jail for preaching the gospel contrary to the legal statutes of his day. Here it was, among other things, that he penned his imperishable dream or allegory, which we are to study. Like Paul and Silas, he was imprisoned for Christ's sake. But he was not disheartened. Like Paul and Silas, he praised God, and, like them also, he used the opportunity to lead souls to Christ.

The principal character in "Pilgrim's Progress" is called Christian. In his dream Bunyan first saw him as "a man clothed with rags, standing in a certain place (the City of Destruction), with his face from his own house, a book in his hand and a great burden upon his back." The "rags" represent human sinfulness. His "face from his own house" signifies that the convicted sinner must give up the dearest things in life rather than risk the loss of his immortal soul. The "book" in his hands is the Scriptures, which tell us of sin and of destruction unless we escape from them through Christ. The "great burden upon his back" represents the sense of guilt and the fear of wrath which press those convicted of this sinfulness by the Spirit of God. The entire picture is one of a sinner convicted of his sinfulness, fearing the wrath of God and yet not knowing what to do. And this conviction of sin must be experienced by every human soul before it can be saved. Unless convicted of our sinfulness no one will cry out as Christian did, as the Jesus on Pentecost did, as Saul of Tarsus did, as the Philippian jailer did, "What must I do to be saved?" If you have not felt this burden of sin, study the work of God, pray unto the Holy Spirit that you may feel it. Then you will have taken a great step toward the salvation of your soul.

The next step in Christian's experience was the telling of it to his family. They did not believe him, but "thought that some frenzy distemper had got into his head." By various ways they tried to cure him of it, but were most unsuccessful. His agony increased, and he wandered down in the fields, praying and reading. One day as he read he cried out, "What shall I do to be saved?" In his agony and crying a man named Evangelist came to him and said, "Wherefore dost thou cry?" In man's darkest hour of despair God sends him help. Christian explained the situation and his perplexity as to what to do. Evangelist gave him a roll on which was written, "Flee from the wrath to come." He pointed out a wicket gate and then a light, which Christian saw dimly. Evangelist told Christian to keep the light in view and run to the wicket gate, where he would receive instruction as to what to do. In spite of the cries and mockeries of his family and neighbors he ran toward the light. On the way he met two companions, Obstinate and Pliable. Obstinate represented self sufficiency and Pliable its opposite. The former tried to persuade Christian to return. Pliable was easily persuaded to accompany Christian, and thus he came to the Slough of Despond, our next topic. In this portion of the dream we see God's willingness to help the convicted sinner and the opposite influences that are brought to bear upon him in his start upon the Christian life. These are common human experiences, but should retard no one who has started from the City of Destruction toward the Celestial City.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. iii, 14-24; iv, 3-15; Ps. ii, 1-10; Isa. i, 1-6, with 16 to 20; lv, 1-7; Matt. xi, 28-30; John xiv, 1-6; Acts ii, 36-41; Rom. x, 8-15; Luke iii, 7, 8; Heb. x, 26-31.

Message From Dr. Clark.

Characteristic of the thoughtfulness of the founder of Christian Endeavor, Dr. Clark on the eve of sailing for his campaign in Europe sent this message to the biennial convention of the New York state union:

"I cannot be with you in Albany, as I would like to do, but I shall think of you and pray for you all, and I wish you would give my sincere remembrance to New York Endeavorers, and may I give as a special message to the convention the sixth verse of the tenth chapter of Ephesians, 'Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might.' May the coming year show how great things the Lord can do for the Endeavorers of the Empire State when they are 'strong in the power of His might.'" FRANCIS E. CLARK.

International Brotherhood Idea.

The deputation of German Endeavorers who visited England on the invitation of their English brothers did a lot of interesting sightseeing. The international brotherhood idea found expression on their departure by the whole company joining hands and singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

The colonel found a great deal about it. The paper was full of this munificent gift, amounting to many millions of dollars and filling (with most carefully and wisely-planned details) an almost absolute vacuum in the American scheme of education. The dignity and fame of the chairs and fellowships endowed were ample to tempt the best ability of the profession. The reader grew enthusiastic as he read.

"Why, it's immense! And we have always needed it!" he exclaimed.

"There are some letters about it, there"—Keatcham feebly motioned to a number of neatly-opened, neatly-assorted letters on a desk. "The doctor said I might have the letters read to me. Miss Smith got him to. For fear of exciting you, the doctors usually let you worry your head off because you don't know about things. I've got to carry a few things through if it kills me. Don't you see?"

"I see," said the colonel, "you shall."

The next time he saw the financier, although only a few days had elapsed, he was much stronger; he was able to breathe comfortably, he spoke with ease, in his ordinary voice; in fine, he looked his old self again, merely thinner and paler. Hardly was the colonel seated before he said without preface—Keatcham never made approaches to his subject, regarding conversational road-making as waste of brains for a busy man:

"Colonel, Miss Smith hasn't time to be my nurse and secretary both. I won't have one sent from New York; will you help her out?"

The colonel's lips twitched; he was thinking that were Miss Smith working for Atkins, she couldn't have a better chance to make a killing. "But I'll bet my life she isn't," he added; "she may be trying to save his life, but she isn't playing his game!"

He said aloud: "I will, Mr. Keatcham, if you will let me do it as part of the obligation of the situation; and there is no bally rot about compensation."

"Very well," said Keatcham. He did not hesitate; it was (as the colonel had already discovered) the rarest thing in the world for him to hesitate; he thought with astonishing rapidity; and he formulated his answer while his interlocutor talked; before the speech was over the answer was ready. Another trait of his had struck the soldier, namely, the laborious correctness of his speech; it was often formal and old-fashioned; Aunt Rebecca said that he talked like Daniel Webster's speeches; but it had none of the homely and pungent savor one might expect from a man whose boyhood had scrambled through miners' camps into a San Francisco stock office; who had never gone to school in his life by daylight; who had been mine superintendent, small speculator and small director in California until he became a big speculator and big railway controller in New York.

"You might begin on the morning mail," Keatcham continued. "Let me sort them first." He merely glanced at the inscriptions on the envelopes, opening and taking out one which he read rather carelessly, frowning a little before he placed it to one side.

A number of the letters concerned the endowments of the experimental chairs at the universities. Keatcham's attention was not lightened by any ray of pleasure. Once he said: "That fellow has caught my idea," and once: "That's right," but there was no animation in his voice, no interest in his pallid face. Stealing a furtive scrutiny of it, now and then, Rupert Winter was impressed with its mystical likeness to that of Cary Mercer. There was no physical similarity of color or feature; it was a likeness of the spirit rather than the flesh. The colonel's eyes flashed.

"I have it!" he exclaimed within, "I have it; they are fanatics, both of them; Keatcham's a fanatic of finance and Mercer is a fanatic of another sort; but fanatics they both are, ready to go any length for their principles or their ambitions or their revenge! J'ai trouve le mot d'enigme, as Aunt Becky would say—I wonder what she'll say to this sudden psychological splurge of mine."

"The business hour is up"—it was Miss Smith entering with a bowl on a white-covered tray; the sun glinted the lump of ice in the milk and the silver spoon was dazzling against the linen—"your biscuit and milk, Mr. Keatcham. Didn't you have it when you were a boy?"

"I did, Miss Janet"—and Keatcham actually smiled. "I used to think crackers and milk the nicest thing in the world."

"That is because you never tasted corn pone and milk; but you are going to."

"When you make it for me. I'm glad you're such a good cook. It's one of your ways I like. My mother was a very good cook. She could make better dishes out of almost nothing than these mongrel chefs can make with the whole world."

"I reckon she could," said Miss Smith; she was speaking sincerely.

"When my father didn't strike pay dirt, my mother would open her bakery and make pies for the miners; she could make bread with potato yeast or 'salt-emptins'—can you make salt-rising bread?"

"I can——shall I make you some tomorrow?"

"I'd like it. My mother used to make more money than my father; sometimes when we children were low in clothes and dad owed a bigger lot of money than usual, we had a laundry at our house as well as a bakery. Yet, in spite of all the work, my mother found time to teach all of us; and she knew how to teach, too; for she was principal of a school when my father married her. She was a New Englander; so was he; but they went west. We're forty-niners. I saw the place where our little cloth-and-board shack used to stand. After the big fire, you know. It burned us all up; we had saved a good deal and my mother had a nice bakery. She worked too hard; it killed her. Work and struggle and losing the children."

"They died?" said Miss Janet.

"Diphtheria. They didn't know anything about the disease then. We all had it; and my little sister and both my brothers died; but I'm tough. I lived. My mother fell into what they called a decline. I was making a little money then—I was 16; but I couldn't keep her from working. Perhaps it made no difference; but it did make a difference her not having the—the right kind of food. Nobody knew anything about consumption then. I used to go out in the morning and be afraid I'd find her dead when I got back. One night I did." He stopped abruptly, crimsoning up to his eyes—"I don't know why I'm telling you all this."

"I call that tough"—as the colonel blurted out the words, he was conscious of a sense of repetition. When had he said those very same words before, to whom? Of all people in the world, to Cary Mercer. "Mighty tough," murmured he softly.

"Yes," said Keatcham, "it was." He did not say anything more. Neither did the colonel. Keatcham obediently ate his milk and biscuit; and very shortly the colonel took his leave.

The next morning after an uneventful hour of sorting, reading and answering letters for Miss Smith to copy on the traveling typewriter, Keatcham gave his new secretary a sharp sensation; he ordered in his quiet but peremptory fashion: "Now put that trash away; sit down; tell me all you know of Cary—real name is Cary Mercer, isn't it?"

The colonel said it was; he asked him if he wanted everything.

"Everything. Straight. Without a chaser," snapped Keatcham.

The colonel gave it to him. He began with his own acquaintance; he told about Phil Mercer; he did not slur a detail; neither did he underscore one; Keatcham got the uncolored facts. He heard them impassively, making only one comment: "A great deal of damage would be saved in this world if youngsters could be shut up until they had sense enough not to fool with firearms." When Winter came to Mercer's own exposition of his motives and his design if successful in his raid on the kings of the market, Keatcham grunted; at the end he breathed a noiseless jet of a sigh. "You don't think Mercer is at all"—he tapped the side of the head.

"No more than you are."

"Or you?"

"Oh, well," the colonel jested, "we all have a prejudice in favor of our own sanity. What I meant was that Mercer is a bit of a fanatic; his hard luck has—well, prejudiced him—"

Keatcham's cold, firm lips straightened into his peculiar smile, which was rather of perception than of humor.

One might say of him—Aunt Rebecca Winter did say of him—that he saw the incongruous, which makes up for humor, but he never enjoyed it; possibly it was only another factor in his contempt of mankind.

"Colonel," said Keatcham, "do you think Wall street is a den of thieves?"

"I do," said the colonel promptly. "I should like to take a machine gun or two and clean you all out."

Keatcham did not smile; he blinked his eyes and nodded. "I presume a good many people share your opinion of us."

"Millions," replied the colonel.

Again Keatcham nodded. "I thought so," said he. "Of course you are all off; Wall street is as necessary to the commonwealth as the pores to your skin; they don't make the poison in the system any more than the pores do; they only let it escape. And I suppose you think that big financiers who control the trusts and the railways and—"

"Us," the colonel struck in, "well?"

"You think we are thieves and liars and murderers and despots?"

"All of that," said the colonel placidly; "also fools."

"You certainly don't mince your words."

"You don't want me to. What use would my opinion be in a one-thousandth attenuation? You're no homeopath; and whatever else you may be, you're no coward."

"Yet, you think I surrendered to Mercer? You think I did it because I was afraid he would kill me? I suppose he would have killed me if I hadn't, eh?"

"He can speak for himself about that; he seems—well, an earnest sort of man. But I don't think you gave in because you were afraid, if that is what you mean. You are no more afraid than he was! You wanted to live, probably; you had big things on hand. The Midland was only a trump in the game; you could win the odd trick with something else; you let the Midland go."

"Pretty close."—Keatcham really smiled—"but there is a good deal more of it. I was shut up with the results of my—my work. He did it very cleverly. I had nothing to distract me. There were the big typewritten pages about the foolish people who had lost their money, in some cases really through my course, mostly because they got scared and let go and were wiped out when, if they had had confidence in me and held on, they would be very much better off, now. But they didn't, and they were ruined and they starved and took their boys out of college and mortgaged their confounded homes that had been in their families ever since Adam; and the old people died of broken hearts and the girls went wrong and some of the idiotic quitters killed themselves—it was not the kind of crowd you would want shut up with you in the dark! I was shut up with them. He had some sort of way of switching off the lights from the outside. I never saw a face or heard a voice. I would have to sit there in the dark after he thought I had read enough to occupy my mind. It was unpleasant. Perhaps you suppose that brought me round to his way of thinking?"

The colonel meditated. "I'll tell you honestly," he said, after a pause, "I was of that opinion, or something of the kind, until I talked your case over with my aunt—"

"The old dame is not a fool; what did she say?"

"She said no, he didn't convert you; but he convinced you how other people looked at your methods. You couldn't get round the fact that a majority of your countrymen think your type of financier is worse than smallpox, and more contagious."

"Oh, she put it that way, did she? I wish she would write a prospectus for me. Well, you think she was nearer right than you?"

"I think you do; I myself think it was a little of both. You've got a heart and a conscience originally, though they have pretty well tanned out in the weather; you didn't want to be sorry for those people, but you are. They have bothered you a lot; but it has bothered you more to think that instead of going down the ages as a colossal benefactor and empire builder, you are hung up on the hook to see where you're at; and where you will be if the people get thoroughly aroused. You all are building bigger balloons when it ought to be you for the cyclone cellar! But you are different. You can see ahead. I give you credit for seeing."

"Have you ever considered," said Keatcham, slowly, "that in spite of the iniquitous greed of the men you are condemning, in spite of their oppression of the people, the prosperity of the country is unparalleled? How do you explain it?"

"Crops," said the colonel; "the crops were too big for you."

"You might give us a little credit—your aunt does. She was here to-day; she is a manufacturer and she comprehended that the methods of business cannot be revolutionized without somebody's getting hurt. Yet, on the whole, the change might be immensely advantageous. Now, why in a nutshell, do you condemn us?"

"You're after the opinion of the average man, are you?"

"I suppose so, the high average."

The colonel crossed his legs and uncrossed them again; he looked straight into the other's eyes; his own narrowed with thought.

"I'll tell you," said he. "I don't know much about the Street or high finance or industrial development. I'm a plain soldier; I'm not a manufacturer and I'm not a speculator. I understand perfectly that you can't have great changes without somebody's getting hurt in the shuffle. It is beyond me to decide whether the new industrial arrangements with the stock jobber on top instead of the manufacturer will make for better or for worse—but I know this: it is against the fundamental law to do evil that good may come. And you fellows in Wall street, when, to get rich quick, you lie about stocks in order to buy cheap and then lie another way to sell dear; when you make a panic out of the whole cloth, as you did in 1903, because, having made about all you can out of things going up, you want to make all you can out of them going down; when you play football with great railway properties and insurance properties, because you are as willing to rob the dead as the living; when you do all that, and when your imitators, who haven't so much brains or so much decency as you, when they buy up legislatures and city councils; and their imitators run the Black Hand business and hold people up who have money and are not strong enough, they think, to hunt them down—why, not being a philosopher, but just a plain soldier I call it bad, rotten bad. What's more, I can tell you the American people won't stand for it."

"You think they can help themselves?"

"I know they can. You fellows are big, but you won't last over night if the American people get really aroused. And they are stirring in their sleep and kicking off the bedclothes."

"Yet you ought to belong to the conservatives."

"I do. That's why the situation is dangerous. You as an old San Franciscan ought to remember how conservative was that celebrated vigilance committee. It is when the long-suffering, pusillanimous, conservative element gets fighting mad that something is doing."

"Maybe," muttered Keatcham. "I'll thoughtfully. I believe we can manage for you better than you can for yourselves; but when the brakes are broken good driving can't stop the machine; all the chauffeur can do is to keep the middle of the road. I like to be beaten as little as any of them; but I'm not a fool. Winter, you are used to accomplishing things; what is your notion of the secret?"

"Miss Smith Opened It! I Could See Her."

"Knowing when to stop exhausting trumps, I reckon—but you don't play cards."

"It is the same old game whatever you play," said the railway king. He did not pursue the discussion; his questions, Winter had found, invariably had a purpose, and that purpose was never argument. He lay back on the big leather cushions of the lounge, his long, lean fingers drumming on the table beside him and an odd smile playing about the corners of his mouth; his next speech dived into new waters. He said: "Have those men from New York got Atkins, yet?"

"They couldn't find him," answered the colonel. "I have been having him shadowed, on my own idea—I think he stabbed you, though I have no proof of it; I take it you have proof of your matter."

"Plenty," said Keatcham. "I was going to send him to the pen in self-defense. It isn't safe for me to have it creep out that my secretary made a fortune selling my secrets. Besides, I don't want to be killed. You say they can't find him?"

"Seems to have gone to Japan—"

"Seems? What do you mean?"

"I am not sure. He was booked for a steamer; and a man under his name, of his build and color, did actually sail on the boat," announced the colonel blandly.

"Hmn! He's right here in San Francisco; read that note."

Winter read the note, written on Palace hotel note-paper, in a sharp, scrawling, Italian hand. The contents were sufficiently startling.

"Dear friend Hoping this find you well. Why do you disregard a true Warning? We did write you afore once for say you give that money or we shal be unfortunately compel to kill you quick. No? You laff. God knows we got have that twenty-five thousan dol. Yes. And now because of such great expence it is fifty thousan you shall pay. We did not mean kill you dead only show you for sure there is no place so secret you can Hide no place so strong can defend you. Be Warn. You come with $50,000.00 in $100 bills. You go or send Mr. Mercer to the Red Hat; ask for Louis. Say to Louis For the Black Hand. Louis will come to you. You will be forgive all heretobefores. Elseways you must die April 15-20. This is sure. You have felt our dagger the other is worse.

"You well wishing Fren,
"The Black Hand."

"Sounds like Atkins pretending to be a Dago," said the colonel dryly. "I could do better myself."

"Very likely," said Keatcham.

"Does he mean business? What's he after?"

"To get me out of the way. He knows he isn't safe until I'm dead. Then he hasn't been cleaned out, but he has lost a lot of money in this Midland business. The cipher he has is of no use to him, there, or in the other things which unluckily he knows about. With me dead and the cipher in his hands, he could have made millions; even without the cipher, if he knows I'm dead before the rest of the world, he ought to make at least a half-million. I think you will find that he has put everything he has on the chance. I told you he was slick. And unstable. What do you anticipate he will do? Straight, with no chaser, as you say."

"Well, straight with no chaser, I should say a bomb was the meanest trick in sight, so, naturally, he will choose a bomb."

"I agree with you. You say the house is patroled?"

"The whole place. But we'll put on a bigger force; I'll see Birdsall at once. Atkins would have to hire his explosive talent, wouldn't he?" questioned the colonel.

"Oh, he knows plenty of the underworld rascals; and besides, for a fellow of his habits, there is a big chance for loot. Mrs. Millicent Winter tells me that your aunt has valuable jewels with her. If she told me, she may have told other people, and Atkins may know. He will use other people, but he will come, too, to my opinion."

"I see," said the colonel; "to make sure they don't foozle the bomb. But he'll have his alibi ready all right. Mr. Keatchem, did they send you a previous letter?"

AMUSEMENTS.

Thomas W. Ryley's great success, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," continues its sensational career at the Circle theatre, New York, and Paul M. Potter's play depicting the fast night life of Paris, promises to be a bigger money maker than even "Florodora," Mr. Ryley's production that gave to the stage its present elaborate musical comedies. While "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" is replete with sensations, its greatest is the "Apache" dance of the underworld of Paris. It does not take the American public long to judge the merits of "something new" and Joseph C. Smith and Louise Alexander are already famous for what is termed "the most artistic character dance the stage has seen for years." In the last week several well-known players have been added to the cast. Fletcher Norton now plays the part of Sacha, the young King of Orcania, around whose night of revelry the play is written. Grace Cameron plays the Princess Marotz. Isabelle D'Armond, George O'Donnell and Harold Kennedy are also among the principals. Two new songs have been added to the score and a new dance is in preparation that is said to be most sensational in its novelty.

At the Colonial this week ensuing, Percy G. Williams will present a fine bill at the head of which is Miss Henrietta Crosman, who will make her metropolitan debut in vaudeville, apeparing in her own playlet entitled "Peggy O'Connor." As the name suggests, Miss Crosman will appear as an Irish lass of the 17th century. Peggy's lover is a follower of Charles the second, who is a fugitive from Cromwell. Peggy hears and succeeds in frustrating a plot which endangers the life of the King. Miss Crosman has had a special production built in order to present her little play in suitable environment. The part provides her with an opportunity to don male attire and swing a sword in her own delightful and feminine swashbuckling style. For the first time in New York, Pat Rooney will present his new musical comedy in one act entitled "Simple Simon Simple." Another important event is the appearance of Bert Levy, the well-known cartoonist whose act is carried on through the medium of an ingenious electric apparatus and whose caricatures are selected from types with which he has met in his wanderings around the globe.

FOR DISTRIBUTION OF MAIN STEM TAX CASH.

Senator Harry D. Leavitt, of Mercer county, will introduce into the Senate, next Monday night, a bill providing for the distribution of the main stem taxes assessed against the railroad companies of the State for 1907 and collected during 1908. It is expected that the measure will provide for the distribution on May 1 next.

The bill will be similar to the Avis measure, passed last year, for the distribution of the main stem taxes of 1906.

Both acts were made necessary by the litigation of the railroad companies to test the constitutionality of the main stem taxing act, the taxes not having been paid when due, owing to the fact that the matter was in the courts.

The Leavitt bill will provide that the State comptroller be empowered to distribute the railroad taxes according to law, the distribution to be made within twenty days after the approval of the act.

The measure will expressly provide that all money distributed under it shall be held by the official to whom paid in trust for the support of the free public schools of such municipality. It will be provided also that no part of the money shall be used to discharge in whole or in part any obligation of the schools incurred before the date of the distribution, except such obligation was incurred in anticipation of the receipt of this money.

The aggregate amount of the taxes to be distributed is approximately $2,225,000. The distribution will be made upon the apportionment of the State Board of Education and each school district in the State will get its pro rata share.

SOUTH AMBOY MAYOR VETOES SALARY RULE.

Theresolution adopted by the South Amboy Council at a previous meeting, fixing salaries of certain city officials, was vetoed by Mayor Treganowan in that place in a message submitted to Council Tuesday night. He held that the salary fixed for City Attorney F. M. P. Pearse was excessive, and suggested $400 per year as a proper figure. He held that the city court could not be established by resolution, but that an ordinance must be passed creating the court and the office of city judge. He held that the city treasurer had not been properly elected. The salary provided was exorbitant, he claimed. A proper figure, the Mayor thought, would be $300 per year.

No action was taken to override the veto or follow the Mayor's suggestions.

THE BARRYMORE HOME.

Three little flats all in one make up the Barrymore home on West Fortieth street, New York. There is an apartment for Jack, now in Chicago, another one for Lionel, who is studying art in Paris, and adjoining these is Ethel's. Miss Barrymore's own living room, where are her books—everything from Luara Jean Libbey to Ruskin—her piano, covered with Grieg, Chopin, and ragtime, favorite bits of statuary—everything from a Dante to a Winged Victory—is a duplicate of a typical Japanese living room. It is done entirely in black and gold. And on all sides are books, books, and still more books, with only photographs of Lionel, Jack and Uncle Jack to give a little humanness to the place. The rooms for the boys are all ready for them should they ever drop in unexpectedly. Ethel Barrymore has mothered her brothers as long as she can remember. They are her only sweethearts. She is sure Lionel will make a great artist, and as for Jack—"think of the rapid advancement he has made." She talks of them with an enthusiasm that would be rapture if they were only friends, but seems almost ecstasy since they are her brothers. They are never in such good company as when by themselves—the Barrymores. They like to think of themselves as a singing and dancing trio. With Ethel at the piano, Lionel and Jack can do a very creditable serio-comic "When strolling in the lane act," at the end of which there is a lively clog dance in which Ethel, jumping up from the piano, joins in. When they were last together, Miss Barrymore wishing very much to do a little benefit performance for The Sisters of the Sacred Heart School, where she was educated, cabled Charles Frohman, then in Paris, an urgent request that she and her brothers be permitted to appear at a benefit performance as the "Three—Barrymores—Three, in an old fashioned song and dance act." Mr. Frohman's reply was,—"I am sure you would enjoy it, but would the audience?"

Papal Etiquette.

Most people know that it is etiquette at the papal court for women, whatever their rank, to appear in black, but few know that an exception to this rule is made for the Pope's sisters and niece, all of whom are privileged to wear white at the audiences and church ceremonies, but the old ladies do not avail themselves of the relaxation of an ordinarily rigid regulation, though the niece makes a point of wearing white when attending papal functions, her mantilla as well as her dress being as white as snow. Another little known point of papal etiquette is that women who come to the public or private audiences must keep the right hand uncovered; indeed, it is even more correct for both hands to be ungloved.—Lady's Pictorial.

FENCERS IN BENEFIT TO HELP ITALIANS.

One of the most skillful fencers in the world, Generoso Pavese, is to appear at an entertainment here, the proceeds of which will go to relieve the suffering of his countrymen in the earthquake zone of Italy. The exhibition will be given at Y. M. C A. auditorium, Tuesday night, January 19.

Pavese is holder of the Police Gazette championship belt and is the former fencing instructor of President Roosevelt. There will be present, also, to cross swords with him, Baron G. Rispoli, another expert in the art, who has been professor of the Magistral fencing school at Rome, Italy, for several years.

Another feature of the entertainment will be an address by J. Cashle, former United States secret service commissioner to Messina, Italy, under President Cleveland's administration. He will give an account of his adventures while stationed there, together with a description of the city and the cause of the earthquake.

ENGLAND'S FAMOUS CASTLES SUBJECT OF LECTURE.

George N. Cross, the well-known traveler and lecturer, is to speak tonight in the High School auditorium on "Historic Castles in England." A profusion of beautifully colored views will be shown, among them pictures of private rooms and treasures in Windsor Castle taken by special permission of His Majesty, King Edward VII. The speaker is a man of winsome personality, with a rich full voice that adds no little charm to his words.

It is all so beautifully told, enlivened by anecdote and story, that there is left an impression of permanent value to the hearer. The proceeds of the small admission will go to the High School Oracle.

SUPERINTENDENT'S PLAN FOR TEACHERS

At the last regular meeting of the Union County Principals' Association, held at the home of County Superintendent Savitz, that official reported that in his visits to schools he finds a great many teachers who do their work in a mechanical way. He said that they do not seem to be thoroughly alive or interested in their work. As a means of interesting and instructing teachers he is arranging to have conferences of teachers of the various departments for informal discussions. Arrangements are also being made to have some lectures given for the help of teachers. It is proposed to give especial attention to interesting pupils in school gardens during the present year. A county exhibit will be arranged for next fall and prizes offered for the best exhibits of flowers or vegetables raised by the children.

Brief reports were made by the various committees on the Union county course of study. At the next meeting the course for nature study will be presented more fully and discussed.

The following were present: Principals Johnson, of Cranford; Townsend, of Scotch Plains; Updyke, of Garwood; Soehl, of Kenilworth; Davis, of Roselle; Deyo, of Roselle Park; Woodfield, of Lyons Farms; Savitz, of Westfield, and Headley, of Linden.

HELD BELATED PICNIC IN CHURCH BASEMENT

Under the auspices of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church "A Belated Picnic" was held in the basement of the church, last night. The affair, a novel one, was in charge of the social committee, of which Miss Frances Weed is the chairman. She was assisted by Miss Martha Humble, Miss Edith Randolph and Miss Edna French.

The room was elaborately decorated with wisteria and made to look as near like a garden as possible. Numerous small trees were placed about the room to assist in carrying out the scheme. As the young people entered they introduced themselves to each other and in this way became acquainted.

The evening was spent in playing all sorts of outdoor games, including croquet, quoits, ten pins, bean bag, while picture puzzle games proved enjoyable to all. At the conclusion of the games refreshments were served while seated on the floor. More than one hundred young men and women were present and the social was considered one of the best of the season.

ATTENDANCE RECORD BROKEN AT LOCAL THEATRE

The attendance record at the New Plainfield theatre was smashed to smithereens, last night, when close to 1,600 admissions were recorded The attraction was the weekly "try-out," which has succeeded the amateur night of other days and which is proving more popular than its predecessor ever dared to be. People were so anxious to gain entrance, last night, that they accepted seats in the wings of the stage in preference to being turned away.

The bill provided by Manager Counihan was well worth the money as in addition to the moving picture and vaudeville program he has been providing during the week, there were fourteen "try-out" artists. The latter are given every opportunity to do their best, instead of getting the "hook" of amateur days, and some of them present a commendable act. Arthur Nelson, of New York, the well known vaudeville agent, arranged the bill and it gave entire satisfaction.

In the professional part of the show, Miss Marie Elmer, who has been making a hit all the week with her high class ballads and imitations, was given an enthusiastic reception and recalled several times. The pictures and vaudeville will be the attraction at the theatre this afternoon and tonight.

Third Trial Against P. S. C.

The case of Mrs. Helen Meyers against the Public Service Corporation will be called for trial in the Union county court on Monday. Robert Newton Crane and Winfield S. Angleman represent Mrs. Meyers, while Alvah A. Clark is counsel for the company. There have already been two trials of this cause, one terminating in a disagreement and the other was a mis-trial because of illegal action on the part of certain jurors.

LOVE THE PRETTY SNAKE

Such is the Advice to Boys by the N. Y. Ophiolopist, A. S. Williams.

LADS FONDLE LIVE ONES.

Suit Case of Specimens from Bronx Zoo Displayed by Lecturer at Y. M. C. A.—Stereopticon Views.

An audience of boys was given an object lesson on the lovable qualities of snakes at the Y. M. C. A. last night. Allen S. Williams, an ophiologist, of New York, had a suit case full of live ones, and exhibited stereopticon pictures of a great many varieties found in different parts of the world. He professed a fondness for the snake, declaring it to be a much maligned and misunderstood animal.

He said that to touch one would have a tendency to allay the natural fear and dread that a person has on seeing a snake, and taking a wriggling two-footer from a bag he carried it through the audience allowing all to caress it as prescribed. In an effort to get to cover it almost became lost up one lad's sleeve, but by the time it had gone the rounds it had made a friend of every boy in the room. This friendly specie was known as the "Jersey Pighead," because of its peculiarly shaped head.

A youth selected from among the spectators bravely submitted to being entwined with snakes from four to seven feet in length and was pronounced the official snake charmer of the evening. The lecturer said he had borrowed them from the Bronx Zoo, and doubted whether they had ever been handled before except when they were captured. His views included the poisonous southern moccasin, diamond back rattler and the copperhead. These were said to be the only venomous snakes in North America, all others being harmless. The bite of the black snake, the largest in this country, would be as harmless as the scratch of a pet kitten.

As an explanation of the cause of so many deaths from snake bites in India, the belief of the natives in the transmigration of souls was given. They believed that each reptile was the transfiguration of a dead relative and feared to bring upon themselves the wrath of the departed, by resisting its attack.

The ugly cobra, the huge python and anaconda, and the coral, which is the most beautiful snake in the world, were shown in the pictures. There was a picture of a King snake swallowing a whipsnake. He declared that after the photograph was taken and the whipsnake had disappeared, except its tail, it had turned its head about and came out again, thus cheating the king of a meal. Newspaper snake stories were often true, he said, though seemingly unbelievable. He had heard of a rattlesnake showing its gratitude to a man who had saved its life when about to be killed by another man. The snake followed him home and coiled itself under the bed. When a burglar entered the room, one night, it hung its tail out of the window and rattled for a policeman.

The chief point that the speaker endeavored to bring out during his lecture was the harmlessness of the ordinary snake and to emphasize the absurdity of running for a stone or club, with which to kill it, when one was seen. They were useful in destroying rodents and damaging insects and some varieties, such as the king snake, fed upon the venomous reptiles.

Miss Ida May Tier Surprised.

Miss Ida May Tier, of Bank place, was given a "ruching shower" at her home, last night, the affair being a complete surprise. Everyone who attended brought various lengths of ruching and Miss Tier found herself well supplied with this useful neckwear. The young people spent the evening playing games and enjoying vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a box of paper ruching, of various colors. On the edge was printed the inscription "To Ida from Bill." There were about thirty-five guests.

CITY NOW TO RETRENCH

Economy to Be the Keynote of Local Administration This Year.

CITY FATHERS SO DECIDE.

Mayor Fisk Approves of Going Slow With Expenditures—Informal Discussion Held Last Night.

Economy was the keynote of the first of the series of conferences held last night by the members of the Common Council with Mayor Charles J. Fisk, and it was the general opinion that great care must be exercised this year in the expenditure of money not only for improvements, but for the maintenance of the various departments. The necessity for this was impressed upon the city fathers by Chairman Herbert Buxton of the finance committee and they agreed with him.

It was during an informal discussion about the annual budget that the finance committee suggested that all the departments practice economy in making up the various amounts to be asked for. It was a little too early to decide on the amount to be raised for all purposes, but some progress was made in this direction. It is safe to say that each committee will place the figures as low as possible so that the general amount will come within what is considered a reasonable figure.

The consideration of matters of finance took up practically the whole evening, and several other questions to be presented by Mayor Fisk were left for another conference. Mr. Fisk assured the Council that it would have his hearty co-operation in conducting the city government on an economical basis. The members were gratified over the statement of the finance committee that this year's taxes were paid promptly and the delinquent list is unusually small. The financial condition of the city was reported to be most satisfactory.

COURT PLAINFIELD ENTERTAINS BIG CROWD

Complete success attended the annual entertainment and dance of Courut Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., last night. Saengerbund hall, where the affair was held, had a capacity crowd in attendance from early in the evening until well after midnight and if the gathering included anybody who didn't have a good time it's no fault of the committee.

The entertainment was opened by an overture by Heinemeyer's orchestra, of Elizabeth, and was followed by professional artists from H. R. Thorn's vaudeville company. They comprised Frank King, billed as "The Irish Count," who tickled the risibles of his auduience with Celtic wit; Emil Closs, the pantomimist and entertainer, who is well known to Plainfielders; Professor Donar, magic mystifyer; Beach and Bechler, musical team; and Eddie Clark, the comedy juggler. All the acts were well received and the performers had no complaint to make about lack of applause.

After the vaudeville numbers, the floor was cleared for dancing and it was continued until 2 o'clock this morning. Louis J. Feiring was the efficient floor manager and he was ably assisted by Frederic D. Wilbee, James M. Smith, James T. McCarty and Charles J. McCarthy.

The committee in charge of the affair included Edward J. McCue, chairman; Louis J. Feiring, James M. Smith, Frederic Breem, John R. Cline, Thomas Monsell, Henry Hansen, Charles J. McCarthy and Frederic D. Wilbee.

Will Visit Earthquake Zone.

Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, were among the passengers sailing on the Steampship Konigi Luise, of the North German Lloyd Line, today for Naples and Genoa. They will be abroad about four months and during their travels Mr. Randolph will collect valuable material for lectures which will be heard upon his return. He will visit Sicily and Algeria, also the scene of the recent earthquake in Southern Italy. A number of relatives and friends were at the pier today to wish Mr. and Mrs. Randolph bon voyage.

Dr. J. F. Hasbrouck to Lecture.

Dr. George Voorhees, of Somerville, has been elected a member of the Plainfield Dental Society. The society has secured Dr. James F. Hasbrouck, of New York, to deliver an address at the February meeting. It is also the intention of the society to have Dr. Herbert L. Wheeler, of New York, a guest during the winter.

LIE TALKS ON NORWAY

Gifted Artist Speaks Interestingly on Land of Bjornson, Ibsen and Grieg.

AT THE PLAINFIELD SEMINARY.

He Varies His Lecture With Some Folk Song of his Native Land Pictures Its Beautiful Scenes.

A lecture on Norway, of unusual interest and charm, was given before the pupils of the Plainfield Seminary yesterday morning by Jonas Lie. The public is already familiar with this artist's power of interpreting upon canvas the solemn and tragic beauty of his native land; but those who listened to him yesterday realized that his word-pictures were hardly less graphic; though modified by a temperament which combines poetic imagination with delicate and fanciful humor.

Mr. Lie did not attempt to give the conventional tourists description of the land of Bjornson, Ibsen and Grieg. It was rather as though his audience were privileged to take the leaves of a travellers' sketch book, in which glimpses of ice-locked fjords; of snow-capped mountains and gloomy forests, were mingled with the picturesque variety and color of peasant life. They heard the shrill notes of the wedding fiddle rising above the rhythmic sound of the dancer's feet; listened in the security of the ingle-roots to tales of trolls and ocean demons, as the July snow drove over the whitened landscape; bade farewell to the summer sun, and watched the Northern lights stream across the sombre heavens; or looked over the illumitable wastes from Gjendin, where Peer Gynt leaped on the maddened stag to the depths below.

Mr. Lie varied his lecture with six folk songs, which were characterized by the plaintive, minor harmonies that haunt the music of the great Norwegian composer. The interest of the morning was further enhanced by the presence of Mrs. Lie, who wore a gaily colored Hardanger dress, which illustrated one of the many peasant costumes to be found by the traveller, who visits the remote country districts.

SCHOOL BOY'S SUCCESS AS A COMPOSER OF MUSIC.

Clarence R. Lawrence, of East Front street, has just published a composition in the form of a song and those who have heard it have no end of praise for this useful aspirant in the musical field. The song is entitled "When Stars Are in the Quiet Skies," and is very melodious, showing good taste and style. It is dedicated to John Leal.

Mr. Lawrence is the son of Mrs. M. J. Lawrence and is but sixteen years of age. He attends Leal's School as a junior and is captain of the best basketball team the school ever had. He is a brother of Russell Lawrence, the crack athlete, who has been breaking many records during the past year. He is also talented as a violinist and has been heard as a soloist on different occasions. His friends are pleased over his achievements. Mr. Lawrence is a violin and harmony pupil of George C. M. Smith, of Crang place.

VESTED CHOIR LIKELY AT CHURCH OF HEAVENLY REST

Improvements are now underway at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, which will make that edifice more attractive and comfortable. The interior of the church was greatly improved last fall by redecorating and carpeting, through the gifts of friends who worship there. A new brass altar rail has been given in memoriam, new red velvet seat cushions and hassocks to match have replaced the old gray cushions and noisy knee benches, while a coat of varnish gives a finish to the interior.

New altar linens for use at the communion service, as well as some new ones being made by the ever-faithful altar guild, are greatly appreciated by the worshippers there. The church is now looking forward to having a vested choir in the near future.

Big Demand for Tickets.

The Plainfield Merchants' Association has found it necessary to call in all tickets not sold for the banquet. The demand has been so great for them that there was no trouble in selling a number to meet the accommodations of the Hartridge School auditorium, where the banquet will be held.

Will Elect Officers.

The directors of the Plainfield Trust Company will meet Thursday afternoon, January 22, for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

RECKLESS BOY SHOOTS GIRL WITH AN AIR RIFLE

Rosie Easoldi, a little Italian girl living in the East End, appeared in the city court, this morning, as complainant against George Perrine, 14 years old, of Jackson avenue, Netherwood, who she charged with deliberately aiming an air rifle at her and shooting her in the back. The bullet struck her just below the left shoulder and caused her to scream with pain. It left a mark that was still in evidence today.

The Perrine boy admitted the charge and offered as an excuse that he and his brother had shot at each other and he didn't think it would hurt the girl to make her a target. Judge Runyon looked at the offense in a serious light and placed him on probation for an indefinite term. He will have to report at headquarters each Saturday. Chief Kiely gave instructions to his sister to take the rifle back to the store where it was purchased and have the dealer refund the money. In case of his refusal, she was told to bring it back to headquarters as under no circumstances would George be allowed to keep it.

The Chief declared after the hearing that the small boy and air rifle combination is getting to be a serious proposition and unless more care is exercised in the use of the weapons he would have his officers confiscate every one in sight.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD'S FIREMEN ARE IN DEBT

The monthly meeting of the Middlesex volunteer fire company was held at South Plainfield last night. Reports were received from the auditing and ball committees. The auditing committee reported the company to be in debt to the extent of $109.50. There is now $120 in the bank and of this amount $100 was generously given by A. C. Bechstein toward the fund for the purchase of an apparatus.

The ball committe reported receipts of $105.67, disbursements of $32.62, leaving a balance of $73.05. The resignation of Charles Brantingham was accepted and in view of the fact that he was a charter member, his name was placed on the honorary roll. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee was also elected an honorary member. The names of E. J. Springer and Ellis Shive were dropped from the roll. The company is hopeful of being able to purchase a suitable apparatus within a short time, the recent big fire at South Plainfield showing the great need for proper means to combat conflagrations in the future.

Y. W. C. A. DOMESTIC SCIENCE CLASSES' WORK

The classes in domestic science at the Young Women's Christian Association are making great preparations for the exhibit of their work which is to be held at the association on Monday afternoon and night. The dressmaking classes, under Miss Scarborough, have completed a satisfactory term of work as their hand made garments show. The millinery class and the pupils in embroidery have also splendid showing of hats and embroidery

The enthusiasm of all the classes has led the educational committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. William D. Murray, to continue the courses under the same alble instructors. It has also been possible to arrange with Miss Capron, the millinery teacher from New York, to give some of her time to teaching individual pupils. At the same time that the exhibit is open in the evening, will also occur the annual meeting of the association. Miss Helen Alling Davis, the city secretary for the associations of New York and New Jersey, will speak. She is most interesting and on inspiring speaker and has many friends in Plainfield, who will be glad to welcome her here.

"She" in Moving Pictures.

Among the features at Proctor's theatre on Monday will be the presentation of Rider Haggard's famous novel "She" in moving pictures. There will also be a complete change of specialties in vaudeville acts. The Humanescope continues to score at every performance. There will be an entire change of moving pictures today. "Little Tilly," a favorite, will remain until next Thursday.

WANT TO BE CITY FATHER

Five Candidates and There May Be Some More for the Single Vacancy.

UP TO THE ORGANIZATION.

The "Who's Who and Why" May Guide You—Election by Common Council in March.

Here are the candidates for vacancy in the Common Council when Robert E. Hall tenders his resignation at the February meeting as city father from the Second ward:

Robert H. McCready, publisher, Denmark road.

Edward E. Iremonger, dry goods, Belvidere avenue.

William L. Alling, hosiery, East Seventh street.

William M. Clark, lawyer, South avenue.

Sidney S. Schuyler, broker, Belvidere avenue.

Now take your pick. They are all running well and each one is bound to win, so their respective boomers tells us confidentially. We'll let you in on the secret, announcing at the same time that there is some reason to believe that when the proper time arrives a man who has been friendly to the Republican organization, who has shown some interest in city and party affairs and who is capable of discharging the duties with credit will be agreed upon.

You want the "who's who and why?" Here you have it.

Robert H. McCready is a favorite among the political bookies and is in splendid form with good chances to win. In fact the odds are on him. McCready is vice chairman of the Republican City Committee. He is well and favorably known; is an organization man, and has shown marked interest in the city's life and prosperity.

Mr. Iremonger—you all know him—is an active organization Republican. He has long been conspicuous here and has a bunch of friends that anyone would be proud of. "Ed" was until recently worshipful master of Anchor lodge, F. & A. M. and like McCready owns his own mind. Either one of 'em would be "one best bet."

Here's another good fellow in the person of Mr. Alling. He's sound as a dollar politically and otherwise, and he's an organization man too. Had he said the word, he could have been a city father long ago, but they say that he is rather timid about assuming such responsibilities although he would make a "crack-a-jack" municipal legislator.

Mr. Schuyler has many admirers. He hasn't mixed much in politics for stocks are his long suit and he generally takes the "jack-pot" in that game. Some say he will win. If he does, the city will not be the loser. It will take the "kitty" for he is a level-header adviser.

Lastly, there is Mr. Clark. You don't know him for he's a quiet fellow, but "my word for it," he's got a chance. "Bob" Hall sprung his name on the city fathers last night at the "tete-a-tete" held by the administration. Like "The Big Stick," Mr. Hall has started to campaign for the man he would like to be his successor. But Mr. Hall's brother, Henry L., is just as active for "Ed" Iremonger, and the said Henry L. knows how to turn a trick.

"So there you are."

P. S.—Tush! A friend of a friend of ours, who says he has a friend on the inside tips us off that he knows the winner. Possibly he'll tell us soon. But that's another story.

Workmen Officers Installed.

Past Grand Master Frank Tussey, of Camden, installed these officers-elect of Columbia Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., last night: Master Workman, J. W. A. Bauersachs; foreman, William Demarest; overseer, R. V. Kinney; recorder, R. H. Loughlin; financier, Frank Putnam; receiver, Henry Leifke; guide, John Calder; inside watchman, S. H. Schelif; outside watchman, Michael Kohler. The business and installation was followed by a dance and supper.

Famous Preacher Coming.

Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson, known as the eloquent preacher of Tremont Temple, Boston, will be preacher at the First Baptist church tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Dr. Henson represents the Northern Baptist Convention for world-wide evangelization. No appeal for money will be made. A cordial invitation is extended to al to hear this distinguished preacher. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will occupy his pulpit in the evening.

Of Interest to Autoists.

Owners of automobiles and anyone interested in machines will find in the supplement in tomorrow's New York Herald, a complete description of the automobile show to be given in Madison Square Garden, January 18-23.

COAL CARS DASH OFF PIER INTO BOAT BELOW.

To look up from his cabin and suddenly see three coal cars shoot off the end of the pier above him and drop upon his barge, was the experience of Captain Charles Maynard, of New London, Conn., at South Amboy yesterday morning. Strangely, neither cars nor barge were sunk, although badly smashed.

The cars, loaded, were being forced along Westmoreland Pier. Three escaped control and rolled off the pier. The barge, Wheeler and Howe, lay tied to the piling, twenty feet below, loaded wtih coal and would have gone out on the rise of the tide. Maynard came upon deck to fill a pail with water, and suddenly saw the cars shoot through the air and strike the barge within twenty-five feet of where he stood, and half bury themselves in the coal. A crane was employed to raise them to the tracks today.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GENERAL SPORTS.

The London Rugby Union has made the Stanford team a member of its association.

Brown has a smal swimming squad but the men are showing good speed in their work.

Harold Iddings, the half-back and pole vaulter of the University of Chicago; has registered for the course in medicine and has retired from athletics.

It was Bucknell that called the attention of Pennsylvania to the ineligibility of Pauxtis. Now Penn has dropped Bucknell from its football schedule.

The Williams Record has introduced a novelty in all-something or other teams. An all interclass basketball team has been selected, following the close of the interclass series.

A party of Baltimore City College will walk twenty-six miles from Baltimore to Annapolis to see the basketball game between their college and the Naval Academy today.

Tommy Thorp, the former Columbia athlete, is showing his versatility now as an official. He was a first rate football referee, and now he is delivering the goods as a basketball official.

Even the Daily Princetonion, after two seasons, has the name of the track coach as Copeland. It has been a well nigh hopeless struggle for Copland to be written down right.

Capt. Rand, De Selding, Merrihew and Foster probably will make up the Harvard relay team to meet Yale in the Boston A. A. games. Rand is about the fastest of them for 390 yards, the relay distance.

Yale meets Pennsylvania twice at basketball and Harvard twice too. Thus it will be possible to get a line on the intercollegiate championship, even though custom keeps Harvard and Pennsylvania apart.

It is the impression at Leland Stanford that Wisconsin will be one of the contenders in a four cornered boat race on Lake Washington this season. According to the report the Badgers will meet Washington, California and Stanford.

Keinath played a great game for Pennsylvania against the Cornell basketball team in Ithaca. That Crosby failed to score more points from fouls than did Keinath was even more remarkable than that Keinath made all Pennsylvania's 17 points.

Harry H. Thurlow of Buffalo, has been elected captain of the University of Virginia track team to succeed James A. Rector. That makes it look as if Rector had quit the game. Thurlow comes from Brown University. He is a half miler and belongs to the Irish American A. C. of New York.

The heaviest man who reported for the Yale freshman crew weighs 186 pounds. The lightest, outside of candidates for coxswain, weighs 125 pounds. The youngest is 16.6 years and the oldest 23 years old. There are two lads who are 6 feet 3 inches tall and one, who is trying for tillerman, is 5 feet 2 inches in height.

BOWLING.

The members of the Park Club bowling team, prospective winners of the Central Journal Bowling League tournament, is planning to entertain the officers of the league at a "spread" to be given at the clubhouse in the near future. At that time the various prizes will be awarded.

YOU DISLIKE TO MEET.

She who makes it a point to say, "Why haven't you been to see me?" Your excuse may be good or bad, but you prefer to offer it unforced.

The girl who is ever hunting trouble. Some people are like the porcupine; they go around with bristles out.

She who has the staring habit. There are girls you hate for no other reason than because of the roving eye. To be taken in from head to foot in a five-minutes' conversation is more "creepy" than a shower bath with the thermometer at zero.

The girl who rubs in her invitations. You may have turned down Jack's invitation indifferently, but to have the other girl say with an air, "Jack has just asked me for supper at the dancing class" gives you a spiteful desire to let her know she was second choice.

The girl who croaks. What if you have lost ten pounds or your complexion has gone back on you! You would rather meet the flatterer who says, "How well you are looking"—even though you know she is dallying with fact.

Needs Filling.

The heiress who marries a man to reform him may make good by using plenty of the gold cure.

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., will install its officers elect Thursday night, January 28.

WIFE READ NEWSPAPERS; "GOT HEP" TO HUSBAND.

Mrs. Bertha Beckers, of Weehawken Heights, recently saw a story in the newspapers that Alexander Beckers was named as the co-respondent in a divorce suit. Her husband's name was Alexander, and she instituted an investigation. It proved that the man mentioned as co-respondent was the one to whom she was married. She promptly sued for divorce. Special Master in Chancery Linn advised a decree and the Court of Chancery has now granted it.

The suit which prompted Mrs. Becker's petition for divorce was brought by Henry Wellman, of New York, against his wife, Lydia Wellman, also of New York. The New York courts granted a decree of divorce.

ITS CROP.

September brings
A host of things,
Apples and pears and plums.
And in mild June,
So runs the rune,
A wealth of roses comes.

But pauper Jan.,
Show little can;
No fruits or posies bud.
It has to stop
At just one crop,
A bumper yield of mud.

Cleaning Wall Paper.

The spots that find themselves on wall paper more frequently in summer than at any other time can be quickly and easily removed by making a stiff dough of graham flour and boiling water, knead the dough thoroughly and break into small pieces.

As each piece is used it should be doubled i on itself so there is a clean surface at each rub. When one piece is soiled throw it away and take a fresh one.

Always rub the paper in one direction and do not go over the same surface twice.

Will Hold Special Meetings.

Rev. W. W. Newberry, of Brooklyn, conducted the Gospel service at the W. C. T. Handicapped

"Handicapped." I think I hear you say, "that is the central note of my life." It is encouraging, however, to read of the many people in the world who have had handicaps in life and yet who have been successful in spite of them. The man who accomplished more than any one of the other disciples was Paul who labored against a serious handicap to his usefulness. So great was this disability that three times in his ministry did he petition the Lord to remove it. He prayed. "Lord, I am so burdened with this thorn in my flesh that I cannot perfectly do the work Thou hast given me to do." I do not know what that thorn was. There is a strong probability, however, that it was defective eyesight. Whatever it was, it seemed to stand in the way of a perfect ministry. This is the way the Lord answered his prayers. "Paul, I recognize the fact of your bodily affliction, but it is better for you to bear with this thorn. I will make you more effectual with it than without it, for "my strength is made perfect in weakness." Then this handicap was not the worst thing that could have happened to Paul. God used it as a means of giving his servant greater power. The continued presence of that thorn made him more effectual for God. Paul was naturally a presumptuous and daring man, a Pharisaic aristocrat, and he needed just this disability to keep him humbly dependant on God and, give the proper balance to his life. He learned afterwards to glory in it, for it meant that God's power would rest on him in greater measure.

The story of Paul and his thorn is a story for the man who feels that he has been handicapped in life by some great infirmity. The fact is that the world's greatest men have accomplished their great tasks in spite of some physical defect.

Darwin said: "If I had not been such a great invalid, I could not have done nearly so much work." Carlyle spoke of Dante's miseries as the basis of his greatness. "Had it not been for them" says Carlyle, "Florence might have had another prosperous Lord Mayor, but the world would have lost the Divine Comedy." It was the death of his dear friend, Arthur Hallam, that caused Tennyson to write his wonderful poem, "In Memoriam." One of the greatest of the world's historians was Prescott, who was blind from his boyhood. George Eliot and Mrs. Browning were invalids throughout their lives. Lous Pasteur, at forty-six, had a stroke of paralysis, but in the twenty-seven years that followed, he developed those theories "of bacterial infection and inoculation which have revolutionized medical and surgical sciences."

Dr. Luther Gulick says "one of the loviest women I ever knew was an epileptic hunchback. She goes through life with what appears to be complete unconsciousness of her physical deformity. It is not that she does not know all about it, but she has simply placed it in the background of her mental life. She is doing her part in the world's business; her work interests and fills her heart. She has periods of intolerable pain, then she simply goes to bed, and gives up everything, but when she is on her feet again, she plunges directly into her work without any loss of time. Her life is predominantly happy. It is victorious and beautifully." She had her disabilities but she had likewise her abilities and she used these to the utmost. What shall therefore be our attitude to the handicaps in our lives? Put them as this woman did in the background. Our impediments do not constitute the whole of our existence but only a part. Let us not, therefore, keep the thorns forever before our mental vision. Paul even learned to account his a blessing, for the reason that it was the means of making him a stronger man. There are some of us whose main business in life is the "pursuit of health." Such is certainly not the noblest ambition. Paul had defective vision but his whole time and thought was not spent in consulting eye specialists. Think of the many great souls in this world who have achieved their greatness in spite of the thorns of their lives.

Yes, you are handicapped. We know that. But you are not the only one in that predicament. You are not handicapped in every part of your being. Therefore use your ability to the utmost and forget all about your disability. It is said of the birds that their wings were first weight. The weights were transformed into wings as the birds struggled to lift them. That was true of Paul's infirmity. Was not God's strength made perfect in his weakness? What about your infirmity?

The Temple Baptist church will unite with the First Baptist church at the morning service tomorrow, when Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson will preach.

Mrs. Raymond F. Martin, of Netherwood avenue, has recovered from a severe attack of quinsy.

A CLEVER GIRL WITH A PAINT BOX.

There is a dainty work quite interesting to the average girl who enjoys making little trifles such as her own cards, menus, calendars and other articles which are quite expensive when purchased in the stores.

To make leaf prints, it will first be necessary to purchase a few oil paints—probably only leaf colors need be bought—and it will also be necessary to get a rubber roll. This is a cheap article that can be purchased for a few cents at any art store. The roll is frequently used in mounting pictures. The roll is three inches long and is attached to a handle. If you have any pressed leaves, such as a small grape, oak, skeleton geranium or chrysanthemum, you can easily make beautiful prints. The small ferns are equally pretty.

Put a little paint upon a small piece of window glass—say one of the eight by ten panes—mix it with a little turpentine, then rub the roller back and forth on the glass to get it evenly coated with the ink. Place the leaf to be used as a subject upon a piece of paper, with the vein side of the leaf uppermost, then hold the stem firmly with one hand and roll the roller over the entire leaf and stem. Pick up the leaf, lay it with the painted side upon the card. Put over it a piece of paper or thin cloth, press the leaf with the fingers or hold an iron on it for a second and when the leaf is lifted it will leave a perfect outline. With a fine tracing brush, the veins and outlines can be touched and made more realistic. Gold paint can be used for the purpose.

Another method of making place cards with the color scheme is to lay a blank piece of paper (for the space on the card) on the cardboard, put a leaf on the card and then stipple over both. Lift the leaf and piece of paper and you will have a perfect leaf space in which the menu and name can be written. To stipple, use a cheap bristle brush. Black and white subjects are made with India ink, diluted with alcohol, or printer's ink thinned with benzine. The latter is better for glace card designs, but paint or India ink can be used on a porous paper.

In making leaf patterns, the designs can be transferred to thick white or colored silk and fashioned into attractive candle or lamp shades.—Woman's National Daily.

COUNTY TAX BOARD "O.K."

Governor Fort's Suggestion to Abolish Present Plan is Unpopular in Union.

MR. ACKERMAN IS INTERESTED.

Senator Regards Union's Board as Excellent Body—Attorney Connolly Favors It.

During the past few days there has been considerable comment in official circles anent the recommendations of Governor Fort with a bearing on county tax boards; and the discussion started a year or more ago as to the efficiency of such boards has been revived. In this connection the Union County Tax Board occupies an unique position in that it is supported almost unanimously by those competent to discuss tax affairs. It is contended that any official dereliction or irregularity in other counties throughout the State should not result in the elimination of a board with which Union county is satisfied and which has carried on its work acceptably in the face of many confusing situations. On these grounds any definite movement to have the present county boards deposed and the tax matters adjusted under the old regime will undoubtedly meet with strenuous opposition throughout the county.

"The ratables of Union county are more fairly fixed now than they have ever been in the past in my opinion," said City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, yesterday, "and I am certain that we could not improve matters by wiping out the present system. The Union county board has obtained excellent results in a general way and I believe that it will continue to do so."

It has developed that Senator Ackerman has directed many questions bearing on the tax matters of Union county and the operations of the board to City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, who has furnished all the information possible in each instance. Seantor Ackerman has displayed a deep interest in the tax matters of the county, and, it is understood, with other representatives, he regards the Union county board favorably. More than a year ago Senator Ackerman made inquiries into the results obtained under the existing board in Union, and he has since secured all the data obtainable along the same lines.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Salvation Nell" Moves.

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company in "Salvation Nell," will begin their final week at the Hackett theatre, New York, Monday evening. The following week the production will be transferred intact to the West End theatre to give the inhabitants of Harlem an opportunity to see this graphic play of slum-life, while the following week Mrs. Fiske will appear in Brooklyn. In "Salvation Nell," Mrs. Fiske scored the greatest hit of the present season. Her performance of a scrub-woman surrounded by vice in its most terrible form, into whose life comes the redeeming power of a great love, has been universally recognized as one of the finest achievements of her career. The Manhattan Company supporting Mrs. Fiske numbers fifty people, every one of whom was chosen because of his or her peculiar fitness for some particular part. Unlike most plays of low-life, all the characters in "Salvation Nell" are indigenous to the slums, and to this fact the piece owes not a little of its gripping power. Not in years has a play enthralled its audiences. The teaming life of the tenements and streets is depicted with unequalled faithfulness, and not a detail that makes for realism has been omitted. "Salvation Nell is an animated crosssection of East Side life. The setting of the play represents the highest attainments in stagecraft. Particularly is this true of the street scene of the last act which pictures five-story tenement houses with their over-laden fire-escapes, squalor, misery, and basement shops while the multifarious population of the East Side throng the streets.

David Warfield at Academy.

David Belasco announces a limited New York engagement at the Academy of Music of David Warfield who is reappearing for short period in the tender, human play, "The Music Master." The present engagement at the Academy marks Mr. Warfield's first appearance in New York this season. Last season at the Belasco Stuyvesant, the distinguished star was seen in "The Music Master" and "A Grand Army Man," which again will be seen during his engagement at the Academy. Mr. Warfield has just returned from a trans-continental tour which began early last August in Denver, and included several cities of the west where he appeared for the first time since his early starring days under Mr. Belasco's direction. And in that territory where "The Music Master" was presented for the first time, he was greeted with loud acclaim, and he received from the people ovations not unlike the welcome with which returning popular heroes are greeted. In the Academy of Music two seasons ago, where he played "The Music Master" for four weeks, he established records for attendance, which made new history for the American stage. When Mr. Warfield began his Academy engagment last Monday night. He was supported by the same company of distinguished players whom Mr. Belasco selected for the original New York production.

An Evening Coiffure.

A neat style for dressing the hair for evening is to arrange all over a circular mount, which must be supplied for this purpose. The hair can be curled after or before this arrangement is made. The round pompadour in front is one good model, though the hair slightly parted at the right or left gives a youthful appearance. Fasten the loose ends a little below the crown of the head to cover the coils with the loose curled ends of hair, then pin each strand of hair with small invisible pins. The hair, if scant, should be decorated with small hair puffs. These puffs are inexpensive, and at present are seen on the most stylish coiffure. If one has sufficient hair, it will be necessary to even pad the little rolls, which are more substantial in appearance than mere curls. The rest of the hair may be lose and wavy, though the coils and puffs are securely fastened. Any desired hair ornaments may be worn, though set pieces are neatest.

SICK KIDNEYS the CAUSE

So Called "Female Disorders" Unknown Where Kidneys are Well.

The very ills women suffer from are often identical with those which men have to endure, because when the kidneys go wrong everything goes wrong, with women as well as men. Menk's Reno Pills aid nature, because they help the kidneys do their work of removing all impurities from the blood, leaving the entire urinary system in a healthy condition and able to perform its proper function. Where women take Reno Pills regularly remarkable results are secured, and prompt relief from exhaustion, bearing down pains and other feminine ills follow, proving a marvelously efficient regulator of the system. For sale at drug stores or send fifty cents to CHARLES W. MENK, Newark, N. J., for a box of Reno Pills postpaid and prove these facts.

Trixie Friganza and Robert Dailey, in scene "Won't You Forgive Me," with "American Idea," at New Plainfield Theatre Monday night

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Geo. M. Cohan's musical frivolity "The American Idea," comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night direct from the New York theatre. This is Cohan's youngest hit, and it is announced as a riot of boisterous but catchy music to which the audience unconsciously keeps time. A large, attractive and well gowned chorus, numerous ballets, each outdoing the other in pretty stage pictures, and a number of original theatrical effects which culminate in a rousing, riotous, rafing "American Ragtime" song and dance as the curtain falls at the close of the second act. A series of amusing complications from the plot, which consists of incessant and entertaining action. Everything is straightened out with the aid of the "Mysterious Man" and the "Mysterious Girl," who keep in the limelight throughout the piece, the former reciting, as it were, passages from a dime novel, which describe the incidents being enacted while he is on the stage. It is an effective Cohan novelty which never fails to call forth laughter. "The American Idea" as stated in the piece, is "to work all winter to get money enough to spend the summer in Paris." The piece is a satire upon title-hunting Americans abroad and Mr. Cohan takes delightful liberties with the French aristocracy and American millionaires. George Beban heads the cast in the role of the French count; with him are such sterling comedians as Trixie Friganza, Robert L. Dailey, Gilbert Gregory, Mark Hart, Rose King, Lola Merrill, Carrie Bowman and many others. The company numbers 100 people and travels by special train.

Always on the lookout for novelties for his theatre, Manager Counihan has secured the exclusive right for Plainfield of the new talking picture device, the cameraphone, for next Thursday night. It is a mechanical device which accurately reproduces the voice of the actor, and the accompanying music is exactly timed to the action of the pictures. By the aid of immense concert graphophones every sound is projected to the audience in realistic tones, and by the aid of perfected moving picture devices, interesting scenes, dialogues and songs are given. In other cities where entertainments by the cameraphone have been given, they have attracted unusual attention. The bill for Thursday will include Blanch Ring, Mme. Dazil and an all star bill.

In "Peggy Machree," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre Monday night, January 25, Joseph O'Mara has a vehicle that is all that one wants in Irish comedy. It has a strain of romance, a pretty love story most deftly told, a most witching heroine, and in Joseph O'Mara a lover as brave and handsome as ever stepped out of the pages of an Irish novel. Into this play Mr. O'Mara has interpolated some old Irish favorites, such as "Believe Me," "The Birds Fly South," "The West's Awake," "The Exile's Return" and "The Wearin' of the Green." Messrs. Joseph Brooks and A. W. Dingwall, managers of Mr. O'Mara, have surrounded him with a lavish scenic production and a strong supporting cast, including: Adrienne Augarde, Katharine Moran, Jennie Lamont, Marc McDermott, Morens Moraitity, Dan Fitzgerald, John O'Hara and Arthur Wynee.

Details are about completed for a concert to be given at the parish house of St. Stephen's church the last week in the month. The rector, Rev. Morgan Ashley, is in charge of the program.

The Record in Plainfield Is a Unique One.

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ill and is looking for relief and cure, better depend on the only remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve quickly—cure permanently. Plainfield citizens testify to this. Here is a case of it:

A. C. Lazzi, 44 Elm place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for five years and from my experience feel that I cannot give them too much praise. I have to do a great deal of stooping at my work and I think that my kidneys became weakened in this way. I suffered from a dull, grinding pain in my back, and also had attacks of rheumatism. Another source of annoyance was the irregular action of the kidney secretions. While suffering from a spell of this trouble, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy and shortly after I was well again. Since then hard work has brought on one or two slight attacks of backache but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to give me instant relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

LEARNING TO COOK

SOME SIMPLE DISHES FOR THE BEGINNER.

Sunday Dessert Perhaps More Easy to Prepare Than Most Others—Apple Tapioca Is Good to Start With.

It is far better for the girl who is employed during the day to learn a little about cooking now and then, when she has few household responsibilities, than to wait until she assumes the role of housekeeper in her own home. A few dishes well made and made often enough so that one undertakes the recipe with ease will prove of great value later on.

The best way for her to be assured of all due appreciation when serving the results of her first attempts in the mysteries of the art of cooking is to have it understood that she will be responsible for the Sunday dessert or for one dish for the Sunday night supper.

Now that apples are fairly reasonable a dish that is generally liked is:

Apple Tapioca.

Saturday night remember to soak three-quarters cup of pearl or coarse tapioca. If the tapioca is very fine, three hours of soaking will suffice. If you wish the pudding hot, one hour before dinner drain off the water for the tapioca and place it in a double boiler with a quart of hot but not boiling water. Let it boil until the tapioca becomes transparent—30 minutes is the usual length of time. Stir it several times and add one-half teaspoonful of salt just before removing from the fire.

Pare and core about seven apples, or the apples may be quartered and then added. If cored, place in each apple a generous teaspoonful of sugar and squeeze a little lemon juice if desired. Add a dot of butter to the top of each and pour the tapioca from the double boiler around or over the apples. Bake until soft, usually 30 or 40 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream or sugar or any preferred sauce.

Plain Pudding Sauce.

One pint boiling water, one tablespoonful butter, two tablespoonfuls flour, one cup sugar. Salt and flavor with lemon, vanilla or nutmeg. Mix the flour with a little water and free from lumps. Add the butter, sugar and salt, and then the smooth flour and stir till clear. Take from the fire and flavor. The yolk of one egg can be added to this; if so, it must be done very gradually as you stir quickly, or it will cook before it mixes with the boiling mixture and show in strings. After adding the flavoring, stir in the whites of the egg beaten stiff and it will cook as it is stirred in and then preserve its shape as froth. It is well to remember that, whenever a hot pudding calls for the whites of eggs, they should be beaten stiff and stirred into the boiling mixture just as it is removed from the stove. Thus all such puddings are made flaky and more attractive in regard to both looks and taste.

Spanish Cream.

Soak one-half package of calves' head gelatine in one quart of milk ten minutes, then put on the stove in a double boiler. Beat the yolks of three eggs and one cup of sugar light and stir it into the milk, when it is good and hot. Cook a few minutes, then remove from the fire and add the whites of three eggs beaten stiff and a teaspoon of vanilla. Pour into a mold or bowl, first wet in cold water. Make the day before serving. This will serve six or eight, but I have no trouble disposing of it when there are only three or four at table. Serve cake with it.

Useful Cooking Hint.

Most people understand that the placing of a marble in a kettle prevents furring, but few seem to know that a large, clean marble boiled in milk, porridge, custards, sauces or stews will automatically do the stirring as the liquid cooks. Any chance of burning will be prevented and thus the fatigue of constantly stirring and the cook's time can be saved, as by this means the cook can be attending to other things instead of having to give her whole time and attention to one.

Lemon Queen Cake.

One and a half cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of butter, half a cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, three eggs beaten separately, rind and juice of one lemon and 1½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat butter and eggs till light and creamy; add yolks, lemon rind and juice; next flour and baking powder; then milk, and beat well. Add whites, well beaten, last of all. Paper your pan, bake three-quarters of an hour. This recipe was recently received from a Vermont housekeeper nearly 90 years of age.

Banana Marmalade.

Put into a porcelain saucepan two cupfuls of sugar and one of water. Cook until it spins a thread when poured from the tip of the spoon. Now stir in slowly the crushed pulp of four or five bananas with a tablespoonful sweet cider or lemon juice and simmer about 20 minutes until thickened. It is wiser to keep an asbestos lid under the pan so there will be little danger of burning.

"Oh, dear no; that's only part of the game; makes a better story. So is using the hotel paper; if it throws suspicion on anybody it would be your party; you see Atkins knew Mercer had a grudge against me as well as him. He was counting on that. I rather wonder that he didn't fix up some proof for you to find."

"By Jove!" cried the colonel; "maybe he did."

"And you didn't find it?"

"Well, you see I was too busy with you; the others must have overlooked it. Hard on Atkins after he took so much trouble, wasn't it?"

"I told you he was too subtle. But it is not wise to underrate him, or bombs either; we must get the women and those boys out of the house."

"But how? You are not really acquainted with my aunt, Mrs. Rebecca Winter, I take it."

"You think she wouldn't go if there was any chance of danger?"

"You couldn't fire her unless out of a cannon; but she would help get Archie away; Mrs. Melville and Miss Smith—"

"Well—ur—Miss Smith, I am afraid, will not be easy to manage; you see, she knows—"

"Knows? Did you tell her?" asked Col. Winter anxiously.

"Well, not exactly. As the children say, it told itself. There has been a kind of an attempt, already. A box came, marked from a man I know in New York, properly labeled with express company's labels. Miss Smith opened it; I could see her, because she was in the bathroom with the door open. There was another box inside, wrapped in white tissue paper. Very neatly. She examined that box, with singular care and then she drew some water in the lavatory basin, half opened the box and put the whole thing under water in the basin. Then I thought it was time for me and I asked her if it was a bomb. Do you know that girl had sense enough not to try to deceive me? She saw that I had seen every move she had made. She said merely that it was safe under water. It was an ingenious little affair which had an electrical arrangement for touching off a spark when the lid of the box would be lifted."

"Ah, yes. Thoughtful little plan to amuse an invalid by letting him open the box, himself, to see the nice surprises from New York. Very neat, indeed. What did you do with the box?"

"Nothing, so far. It only came about an hour ago."

"Do you reckon some of the Black Hands are out on the street, rubbering to see if there are any signs of anything doing?"

"Perhaps; you might let Birdsall keep a watch for anything like that. But they hear, somehow; there is a leak somewhere in our establishment. It is not your aunt; she can hold her tongue as well as use it; the boy, Archie, does not know anything to tell—"

"He wouldn't tell it if he did," interrupted the colonel; and very concisely but with evident pride he gave Archie's experience in the Chinese quarter.

Keatcham's comment took the listener's breath away; so far afield was it and so unlike his experience of the man; it was: "Winter, a son like that would be a good deal of a comfort, wouldn't he?"

"Poor little chap!" said Winter. "He hasn't any father to be proud of him—father and mother both dead."

Keatcham eyed Winter thoughtfully a moment, then he said: "You've been married and lost children, your aunt says. That must be hard. But—did you ever read that poem of James Whitcomb Riley's to his friend whose child vegufead? It's true what he says—they were better off than he 'who had no child to die.'"

Rupert was looking away from the speaker with the instinctive embarrassment of a man who surprises the deeper feelings of another. He could see out of the window the lovely April garden and Janet Smith amid the almond blossoms. Only her shining black head and her white shoulders and bodice rose above the pink clusters. She looked up and nodded, seeing him; her face was a little pale, but she was smiling.

"I don't know," he said, "it's hard enough either way for a man."

"I never lost any children"—Keatcham's tone was dry, still, but it had not quite the former desiccated quality—"but I was married, for a little while. If it's as bad to lose your children as it is to lose the hope of having them, it—must be hard. You lost your wife, too?"

"Yes," said Rupert Winter.

At this moment he became conscious that Keatcham was avoiding his gaze in the very manner of his avoiding of Keatcham's a moment ago; and it gave him a bewildering sensation.

"I wanted to marry my wife for seven years before we were married," Keatcham continued in that carefully monotonous voice. "She was the daughter of the superintendent of the mine where I was working. I was only 18 when I first saw her. I was 25 when we were married. She used to give me lessons; she was educated and accomplished. She did more than is easy telling, for me. Of course, her parents were opposed at first because they looked higher for her, but she brought them round by her patience and her sweetness and her faith in me. Six months after we were married, she had an accident which left her a helpless invalid in a wheeled chair, at the best; at the worst, suffering—you've known what it is to see anybody, whom you care for, in horrible pain and trying not to show it when you come near?"

"I have," said Winter; "merry hell, isn't it?"

"I have seen that expression," said Keatcham; "I never recognized its peculiar appropriateness before. Yes, it is that. Yet, Winter, those two years she lived afterwards were the happiest of my whole life. She said, the last night she was with me, that they had been the happiest of hers." The same flush which once before, when he had seemed moved, had crept up to his temples, burned his hollow cheeks. He was holding the edge of the table with the tips of his fingers and the blood settled about the nails with the pressure of his grip. There was an intense moment during which Winter vainly struggled to think of something to say and looked more of his sympathy than he was aware; then: "Cary Mercer needn't think that he has had all the hard times in the world!" said Keatcham in his usual toneless voice, relaxing his hold and leaning back on his pillows. The color ebbed away gradually from his face.

"I don't wonder you didn't marry again," said Winter.

"You would not wonder if you had known Helen. She always understood. Of course, now, at 61, I could buy a pretty, innocent, young girl who would do as her parents bade her, and cry her eyes out before the wedding, or a handsome and brilliant society woman with plenty of matrimonial experience—but I don't want them. I should have to explain myself to them; I don't know how to explain myself; you see I can't half do it—"

"I reckon I understand a little."

"I guess you do. You are different, too. Well, let's get down to business, think you some way of getting the women out of the house; and get your sleuths after Atkins. It's 'we get him, or he gets us!'"

The amateur secretary assented and prepared to go, for the valet was at the door, ready to relieve him; but opposite Keatcham, he paused a second, made a pretense of hunting for his hat, picked it up in his left hand and held out the right hand, saying: "Well, take care of yourself."

Keatcham nodded; he shook the hand with a good firm pressure. "Much obliged, Winter," said he.

"Well," meditated the soldier as he went his way, "I never did think to take that financial bucaneer by the hand; but—it wasn't the bucaneer, it was the real Edwin Keatcham."

CHAPTER XVII.

In Which the Puzzle Falls Into Place.

While the colonel was trying to decipher his tragical puzzle, while Edwin Keatcham was busied with plans that affected empires and incidentally were to save and extinguish some human lives, while Janet Smith had her own troubles, while Mrs. Rebecca

"It Was a Strange Man's Voice."

Winter enjoyed a game more exciting and deadly than Penelope's Web, Mrs. Millicent Winter and the younger people found the days full of joyous business. The household had fallen into normal ways of living. Although the secret patrol watched every rod of approach to the house, the espial was so unobtrusive that guests came and went, tradesmen rattled over the driveways; the policemen, themselves, slumbered by day and loitered majestically by night without the Casa Fuerte portals, never suspecting. Little Birdsall had his admirable points; they were now in evidence. To all outward seeming, a pleasant house-party was enjoying the lavish Californian hospitality of Casa Fuerte; and black care was bundled off to the closet of the family skeleton, according to the tradition of mannerly people. Arnold had opened his garage and his stables. There was bridge of an evening; and the billiard balls clinked on the pool table. Archie could now back the electric motor into almost any predicament. The new Chinese chef was a wonder and Tracy was initiating him into the possibilities of the Fireless, despite a modest shrinking on the part of the Oriental artist who considered it to be a new kind of bomb.

Millicent, encouraged by Arnold, had had Mrs. Wigglesworth and two errant daughters, whose husbands were state regents for Melville's university, to luncheon and to dinner; the versatile Kito donning a chauffeur's livery and motoring them back to the city in the limousine, on both occasions; all of which redounded to Millicent's own proper glory and state.

Indeed, about this time, Millicent was in high good humor with her world. Even Janet Smith was no longer politely obliterated as "the nurse," but became "our dear Miss Janet;" and was presented with two of Mrs. Melville's last year's Christmas gifts which she could not contrive to use; therefore carried about for general decorative generosity. One was a sage green linen handkerchief case, quite fresh, on which was etched, in brown silk, the humorous inscription: "Wipe me, but do not swipe me!" The other was a white celluloid brush-broom holder bedecked with azure forget-me-nots enframing a complicated monogram which might just as well stand for J. B B. S. (Janet Byrd Brandon Smith) as for M. S. W. (Millicent Sears Winter) or any other alphabetical herd. These unpretending but (considering their source) distinguished gifts she bestowed in the kindest manner. Janet was no doubt grateful; she embroidered half a dozen luncheon napkins with Mrs. Melville's monogram and crest, in sign thereof; and very prettily, she being a skilful needle-woman. On her part, Mrs. Melville was so pleased that she remarked to her brother-in-law, shortly after, that she believed Cousin Angela's sisters hadn't been just to Miss Smith; she was a nice girl; and if she married (which was quite possible, insinuated Mrs. Melville, archly), she meant to give a tea in her honor.

"Now, that's right decent of you, Millie," cried the colonel; and he smiled gratefully after Mrs. Melville's beautifully fitted back. Yet a scant five minutes before he had been pursuing that same charming back through the garden terraces, in a most brotherly frame resolved to give his sister-in-law a "warning with a fog-horn." The cause of said warning was his discovery of her acquaintance with Atkins. For days a bit of information had been blistering in his mind. It came from the girl at the telegraph office at the Palace, not in a bee-line, but indirectly, through her chum, the girl who booked the theater tickets. It could not be analyzed properly because the telegraph girl was gone to southern California. But before she went she told the theater girl that the lady who received Mr. Makers' wires was one of Mrs. Winter's party! This bit of information was like a live coal underfoot in the colonel's mind, whenever he trod on it in his mental excursions he jumped.

"Who else but Janet?" he demanded. Put by degrees he became first doubtful, then daring. He had Birdsall fetch the telegraph girl back to San Francisco. A ten minutes' interview assured him that it was his brother's wife who had called for Mr. Makers' messages, armed with Mr. Makers' order.

Aunt Rebecca was not nearly so vehement as he when he told her. She listened to his angry criticism with a lurking smile and a little shrug of her shoulders.

"Of course she has butted in, as you tersely express it, in the language of this mannerless generation; Millicent always butts in. How did she get acquainted with this unpleasant, assassinating, poor white trash? My dear child, she didn't probably; he made an acquaintance with her. He pumped her and lied to her. We know he wanted to find out Mr. Keatcham's abode; he may have got his clew from her; she knew young Arnold had been to see him. There's no telling. I only know that in the interest of keeping a roof over our heads and having our heads whole instead of in pieces from explosives, I butted in a few days ago when somebody wanted Mrs. Melville Winter on the telephone. I answered it. The person asked if I was Mrs. Melville Winter; it was a strange man's voice. I don't believe in Christian Science or theosophy or physics, but I do believe I felt in my bones that here was an occasion to be canny rather than conscientious. You know I can talk like Millicent—or anybody else; so I intoned through the telephone in her silken Anglican accents, 'Do you want Mrs. Melville Winter or Aunt Rebecca, Madam Winter?' I hate to be called Madam Winter, and she knows it, but Millicent is catty, you know, and she always calls me Madam Winter behind my back. The fellow fell into the trap at once—recognized the voice, I dare say, and announced that it was Mr. Makers; Mr. Atkins, who had left for Japan, had not been able to pay his respects and say good-by; but he had left with him an embroidered Chinese kimono for Prof. Winter, whom he had admired so much; and if it wouldn't be too much trouble for her to pay a visit to her friend—one of those women she had to luncheon, who's at the St. Francis—he would like to show her several left by Mr. Atkins, for her to select one. Then in the most casual way, he asked after Mr. Keatcham's health I believed he was improving; had had a very good night. I fancy it didn't please him, but he made a good pretense. Then he went off into remarks about its being such a pity Mr. Atkins had left Mr. Keatchem; but he was so conscientious, a southern gentleman I knew; yet he really thought a great deal still of Keatcham, who had many fine qualities; only on account of the unfortunate differences—Atkins was so proud and sensitive; he was anxious to hear, but not for the world would he have any one know that he had inquired; so would I be very careful not to let any one know he had asked. Of course I would be; I promised effusively; and said I quite understood. I think I do, too."

"They are keeping tab on us through Millicent," fumed the colonel. "I dare say she gave it away that Arnold was visiting Keatcham at the hotel; and it wouldn't take Atkins long to piece out a good deal more, especially if his spy overheard Tracy's 'phone. Well, I shall warn Millicent—with a fog-horn!"

The way he warned Millicent has been related. But from Millicent he deflected to another subject—the impulse of confession being strong upon him. He freed his mind about the stains on Cary Mercer's cuffs; and, when at last he sought Millicent he was in his soul praising his aunt for a wise old woman. After justice was disarmed by his miscomprehension of Millicent's words, he took out his cigarette case and began pacing the garden walks, smoking and humming a little Spanish love song, far older than the statehood of California.

La noche esta serena, tranculio el aquilon,
Tu dulce centinella te guarda el corazon
Y en al as de los cefiros, que vagan por doquier,
Volando van mis suplicas, a ti, bella mujer!
Volando van mis suplicas, a ti, bella mujer!

De un corazon que te ama, recibe el tierno beso de amor,
No aumentes mas la llama, piedad, a un triste amor
Y si te niegas a instinto eterno padecer,
Cruel te acuso, amante bella sirena mujer!
Cruel te acuso, amante, bella sirena mujer!

So still and calm the night is,
The very winds asleep,
My heart's so to its sentinel
Its watch and ward doth keep.
Yet sweeter now than all will,
And on the wings of zephyrs soft
To thee, O woman fair, to thee
My prayers go fluttering still.

Oh, take the heart's love to thy heart
Of one that doth adore!
Here I add net to the flame
That burns thy troubadour!
And if compassion stirs thy breast
For my eternal woe,
Oh, as I love thee, loveliest
Of women, love me so!

The words belonged to the air which he had whistled a week ago. Young Tracy came on and caught up the air, although he was innocent of Spanish; he had his mandolin on his arm; he proffered it to the colonel.

"Miss Janet has been singing coon songs to his nibs, who is really getting almost human," he observed affably; "well, a little patience and interest will reveal new possibilities of the Fireless Stove! In man or metal. Shall we get under his nibs' window and give him the 'Bedouin Love Song' and 'I Picked Me a Lemon in the Garden of Love' and the Sextette from 'Lucia' and other choice selections? He seemed to be sitting up and taking notice! let's lift him above the sordid thoughts of Wall street and his plans for busting other financiers."

The soldier gave this persiflage no answer; his own thoughts were far from gay. He stood drinking in the beauty of the April night. The air was wonderfully hushed and clear; and the play of the moonlight on the great heliotrope bushes and the rose-trees, which dangled their clusters of yellow and white over the stone parapets of the balconies, tinted the leafage and flickered delicately over the tracery of shadow on the gray walls. Not a cloud flecked the vast aerial landscape—only stars beyond stars, through unfathomable depths of dim violet, and beneath the stars a pale moon swimming low in the heavens; one could see it between the spandrels of the arches spanning the colonnade.

"Looks like a prize night-scene on the stage, doesn't it?" said Tracy. "Jolly good shadows—and aren't these walls bulging out at the bottom bully? I used to know the right name for such architectural stunts when I was taking fine arts four—dreadful to neglect your educational advantages and then forget all the little you didn't neglect, ain't it? I say, get on to those balconies—that isn't the right word for the mission style, I guess; but never mind; aren't they stunning? Do you see the ladies up there? Is that Archie sniggering? What do you think of the haunted house, now, colonel?"

Tracy's gay eyes sought the other's gaze to find it turn somber. Winter couldn't have told why; but a sudden realization of the hideous peril dogging the warm, lighted, tenanted house, submerged him and suffocated him like a foul gas. Let their guards be vigilant as fear, let their wonderful new search-light flood rock and slope and dusky chaparral bush; and peer as it might through the forest aisles beyond; yet—yet—who could tell!

But he forced an equal smile in a second for the college boy; and chatted easily enough as they climbed up the stepped arches to the balcony and the little group looking seaward.

A Cake Filling.

If you have wearied of the different fillings for your cup cake, instead of using currant jelly or chocolate try spreading the layers thickly with green gage jam. Cover the top with a thick boiled icing, or, if the cake is to be eaten the same day that it is baked, the top can be covered with whipped cream, beaten very stiff.

A Safe Model.

"You have invented an airship?"

"Yes."

"What advantages has it?"

"Well, for one thing, it is absolutely safe. I can't even persuade it to take a chance by leaving the earth."—Washington Star.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL FIVE MEETS FIRST DEFEAT

The girls' basketbal team from the Plainfield High School played its most exciting game of the season on the local court, yesterday afternoon, with the girls' team from the East Orange High School. It was the first defeat for the Plainfield girls in two years and naturally there was much gloom and disappointment not only on the part of the team, but its many supporters. The game was witnessed by the largest crowd of the season and there was constant cheering.

The Plainfield team suffered greatly by the loss of its captain, Miss Helen Moody, who was not able to play, and the fact that the locals were obliged to conform to the East Orange custom of using two centres, also materially affected their work. The best work for the Plainfield team was done by Dorothy Merrill and Barbara Fleming.

The East Orange girls gave a fine exhibition, their passing being qiuck and accurate. F. Dewson and E. Butts were the star players for their team. At the end of the first half the score was 7 to 5 in favor of P. H. S., but at the end of the second half the tables were reversed and the final score was 10 to 8 in favor of East Orange. Charles B. Morse refereed the game. The lineup:

P. H. S.		E. O. H. S.

WON IN LAST MINUTE FROM HOPE JUNIORS 12 TO 10

The N. P. H. S. seconds and Hope Chapel Juniors ran a close race last night. At the end of the first half the score stood 6 to 6 and up to the last minute in the game, it was 10 to 10, when Dunning dropped one in the basket, winning the contest for N. P. H. S., 12 to 10.

The line-up:

N. P. H. S.		HOPE.
Bailey		H. F. Firstbrook
Dunning		Mundy
	forwards.

HOLY CROSS WINS FROM N. P. H. S. SOPHOMORES.

The sophomore class tea mof N. P. H. S. was deefated by the Holy Cross five last night by the score of 39 to 0. Those in the game were: Holy Cross: forwards, Kenyon and McCarthy; centre, Mosher; guards, Taylor and Thorne. High School, forwards, Krewson and Wyckoff; centre, Schwed; gaurds, Jackson and Kumble. Referee, Nash; timer, Townly.

Games Tonight.

Two basketball games will be played at the Y. M. C. A. gym tonight. The minor association team meets Arrow B. B. C., and Hope chapel plays the First Baptists.

Banquet Committee Meets.

A meeting of the Board of Trade banquet committee was held in the office of Secretary Herr last night and all committees reported favorable progress. Chairman Newcorn presided. Following the reports of the various committees a general discussion was held in regard to arranging the minor details of the affair. The dinner will be held in Truel Hall on March 11. Chairman Henry L. Hall, of the speakers' committee, reported that he could not make public the names of those to respond to toasts as yet, but assured the members that one of the most attractive features of the dinner will be provided by his committee.

Warren Chapel Meeting.

NEWARK'S CELEBRATION TONIGHT A HUGE ONE

If the weather indications can be believed the South Broad Street Merchants' Improvement Association of Newark will have an auspicious night for the opening celebration of Newark's Great White Way. All preparations have been completed and all the thirty-six 9,000 candlepower arc lamps are ready to be turned on as the sun goes down.

An additional improvement was made by the Public Service Corporation yesterday when thousands of colored electric lights were strung across Broad street between Market and Court streets, which will improve the spectacular sight of the street.

All the business houses in that section of the city have been beautifully decorated and their store windows will be a flood of light. Many of them have large electric signs and all of them will have a special sale.

Big preparations have been made by all the hotel and restaurant keepers who expect large crowds. They have enlarged their orchestras and have laid in a big stock of all kinds of good things to eat.

Many out-of-town visitors are expected. The Central Railroad of New Jersey has arranged for excursion trains to this city from points all over the State and the return trains will leave Newark at a late hour tonight. The trolley company has also made the necessary arrangements to handle the crowd and has late cars running to all the suburbs.

Sweet's Band of twenty-one pieces has been engaged by the association and will play popular music marching up and down South Broad street, and in adition to that another band of forty-five pieces will give a concert in front of the Newark City Hall and Beck's bakery, or wherever the association may desire. This band of Professor Matt, through A. S. Hoffman, the proprietor of Beck's bakery, has offered its services to the association free of charge. They will arrive at the Central station in Broad street at 7:30 o'clock, where two big automobiles of the Manhattan and Essex Auto Express Company will be waiting. V. S. Richardson, the manager of the auto company, has given the services of his automobiles free of charge to the association.

The original idea of having a short reception on the steps of the City Hall, with speeches by the Mayor of Newark and other officials was abandoned, because it is believed that most of the members of the association will be busy in their stores. Instead of that, it is planned that some members of the association will wait upon the Mayor in his office in the City Hall and that a few appropriate speeches will be made there.

Takes a Fine Position.

Oliver A. Reed who, for the past four years, has been employed by Mr. and Mrs. Percy Stewart, of West Seventh street, has resigned to take a position of responsibility with the DeDion Bouton French Automobile Company, of New York. Mr. Reed formerly devoted his time to automobile racing, having made several fine records, and he gave that up to enter the employ of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart in the care and operation of their automobile.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Annotated List of Non-Fiction Books

Brooks, John Graham—As Others See us: a study of progress in the United States. "Here are woven into most readable and intertaining form the opinions by way of approval, of censure, or of warning, which visiting critics have expressed concerning America since the beginning of national life. In the light of these objective estimates the author discusses topics and problems which bear upon present-day progress."

Fagan, James O., The Confessions of a Railroad Signalman. "Mt. Fagan's confessions are the outgrowth of his experience as a signalman during twenty years. His shrewd observations and logical deductions regarding mismanagement of railroads and incompetency of employes may well cause railroad officials disquieting moments. The book aims to stimulate reform. He does not content himself with an idealist's statement of what ought to be, but takes into account existing conditions in the operative departments of our great railroads, and attempts to show how with all the recognized difficulties of administration there may yet be worked out a scheme that will assure a far smaller proportion of fatalities in the running of our trains."

Ferrero, G.—Greatness and Decline of Rome. "It is well that the translation of this great work, a study of Roman history, is coming from the press simultaneously with Professor Ferrero's lecturing tour in this country. Any person who attends his lectures or reads his book will find the means at hand of understanding him thoroughly, of comprehending his largeness of vision, his soundness of scholarship, his sense of proportion, his power to measure life that has been by his observation of life that is, his possession of the true historical sense."

Flint, Josiah—My Life; with an introduction by Arthur Symons. "The self-written life of the man, who, instinct with human curosity, sounded the depths of the under-world and brought back experiences which he casts in the document form. His early life, his rebellion against order, his days in a reform school, his escape and early tramping experiences, his voyage to Germany as a coal passer, his life and wanderings in Europe, the friendship with Arthur Symons whom he called his literary god-father, his meeting with Tolstoy are full of human interest."

Greenslet, Ferris—Life of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. "Material from a wide range of sources has entered into the structure of this biography. While letter memorials form the ground work of the sketch, the authors personal knowledge of Mr. Aldrich, gained during a period of close friendship, form the basis for estimates concerning his career, temperament and character, which narrative is supplemented by reminiscences. The biography in addition to being an authoratative 'life,' sets Aldrich among a group of his contemporaries."

Hubbard, Nina Benson. Woman's Way Through Unknown Labrador: an account of the exploration of the Nascaupee and George rivers. "To correct and misleading accounts of Mr. Hubbard's ill-fated expedition organized for the purpose of exploring the Northwest river, draining Lake Michikamau, and the George river draining the northern slope of the plateau to Ungava bay, his wife went over the same ground in a more favorable season. This is a record of her journey, to which she adds her husband's latter-day diary and a narrative by one of his party, Geo. Elson."

Lucas, Edward Verrall—Over Bemerton's: an easy-going cronicle. "Naturally the whole narrative saunters through a bookish atmosphere at a pace of leisured ease, with here a gleam of gentle humor, alternating with nice points of observation and kindly human touches."

Mackaye, Percy Wallace—Mater; an American study in comedy. "It is a little too fine, perhaps, for the popular theatre, but will surely appeal to the reader of taste and intelligence. Its satire is keen, and the character of 'Mater' has unusual charm."

Pennell, E. R. and J.—Life of James McNeill Whistler, with over 120 plates in half tones and photogravure, 2 vols. "Mr. and Mrs. Pennell speak with authority of Whistler as a man, as well as with full appreciation of him as an artist, and it is not too much to claim that this book has artistic and human interest such as few biographies have."

Schurz, Carl T.—Reminesciences, 3rd vol. "The third volume completes this magnificent biography and brings Mr. Schurz's life down to its close. Gen. Schurz died while this volume was being written, leaving, however, behind him a great number of notes intended to assist him in its completion. The delicate task of concluding the work from the middle of Grant's administration has been successfully undertaken by the historian, Francis Bancroft, who enjoyed Mr. Schurz's confidence and to whose thoroughly competent hands the voluminous material was intrusted by Mr. Schurz's son. This third volume, therefore, completes one of the most remarkable and most noble lives lived upon American soil."

Taft, William Howard—Present day problems; a collection of addresses delivered on various occasions. "Matters of public policy and public interest are discussed in Mr. Taft's informed and persuasive style, and whether one is for or 'agin' the administration and its policies, the collection provides valuable and interesting reading."

Wendell, Barrett — Priviledged Classes. "In the four essays that make up this volume Professor Wendell discusses the deeper problems of higher education in their relation to present-day American life."

Winter, William—Other Days; being cronicles of the stage. "His volume will be a welcome addition to every dramatic library. It is full of fresh and illuminative detail, of analytical character studies, of sound theatrical philosophy, of witty comment, eloquent appreciation, and wholesome scorn."

Satin Much Used With Cloth.

Among many of the very elaborate costumes will be seen a lovely combination of cloth and satin. The beautifully decorated skirt of cloth is extremely plain, and cut with a view to snugness around the hips, though the lower portion of the garment is wide, flaring and machine stitched. A coat of contrasting color is made of satin in the Directoire patterns, and every imaginable kind of lace adornment is a part of the artistic trimming. Naturally a costume of this kind is for afternoon wear, and is completed with a felt hat elaborately trimmed with rich satin ribbon. One suit of this kind was a very dark green, the trimming a copper-green lace, a shade between gold and tanished green. Another suit of exceptional beauty was buff. The coat was trimmed with ecru lace and gold buttons.

Bands in Favor Once More.

"We had to bring back ornamental bands," explained a clever modiste, "for too many frail dresses were too plain without this trimming. Now, here is a dress I have just finished for a young girl. It is square-meshed net, trimmed with bands of embroidered tulle and lace. Yet the blue satin sash does look girlish on this dress, also that narrow bit of blue satin that heads the collarless yoke, but only a very young girl could wear a color scheme like this."

JERSEY'S GREATEST ENEMY

Consumption the Most Fatal of All Diseases, Carries Off Thousands

PLAINFIELD'S RATE IS 17.25.

In Union County 15.12 and in Somerset 12.15—Elizabeth 17.07—New Brunswick 16.81.

Some suggestive mortuary statistics are given in the annual report of the State Board of Health. A chart showing the death in New Jersey from certain diseases for the last twenty-nine years indicates that consumption is the most fatal of all maladies. Next in order of fatality come diarrhoeal diseases of children, the deaths in the same period numbering 83,984. Then follow diseases of the heart and circulation, 63,360; digestive and intestinal disease, 42,887; renal and cystic diseases, 41,751; violent deaths, 38,175; diphtheria and croup, 35,172; cancer, 22,417; typhoid fever, 15,020; scarlet fever,, 11,845; puerperal fever, 7,637; whooping cough, 6,810; malarial fever, 4,866; measles, 4,515.

Deaths from consumption in New Jersey for the last seven years numbered 21,314. Of these deaths 352 occurred to children under one year of age. The largest number of deaths from this disease during this period occurred to persons between the ages of 20 and 30 years, being 6,606. The net sized number was between 30 and 40 years, being 6,292; between 40 and 50 years the number was 4,057; then from this period there is progressive decline from decade to decade, there being 145 deaths from this disease to persons more than 8 years of age.

Deaths from consumption in New Jersey have not increased at all in proportion to population. In 1879 the percentage from consumption for each 10,000 population was 27.32, in 1889 it was 24.50, in 1899 it was 19.31, in 1907 it was 16.67. The decrease of fatalities from this disease has been progressive, and it is believed by sanitarians to be due to the general dissemination of modern theories for its successful treatment, particularly with reference to fresh air and sunlight.

The percentage of deaths from consumption for each 10,000 of population in different municipalities in this state is illuminating. In Atlantic county last year the percentage was 11.65; in Union county, 15.12; in Bergen county it was 10.03; in Englewood, 10.48; in Burlington county, 15.09; in Bordentown, 19.71; in Burlington, 7.23; in Camden county, 17.46; in Cape May county, 12.06; in Essex county, 20.89; in Somerset county, 12.15; in Plainfield, 17.25; in Bloomfield, 4.81; East Orange, 10.50; Irvington, 12.58; Montclair, 9.81; Newark, 23.68; Orange, 25.66; Gloucester county, 10.98; Hudson county, 20.95; Bayonne, 16.93; Harrison, 22.60; Hoboken, 24.15; Jersey City, 23.03; Kearny, 40.90; Town of Union, 13.53; West Hoboken, 13.03; West New York, 21.34; Hunterdon county, 10.99; Mercer county, 13.96; Princeton, 7.27; Trenton, 18.50; Middlesex county, 12.12; New Brunswick, 16.81; Perth Amboy, 8.91; South Amboy, 17.68; Monmouth county, 12.19; Asbury Park, 8.33; Morris county, 15.06; Ocean county, 11.25; Passaic county, 14.43; Paterson, 15.52; Passaic city, 16.01; Salem county, 14.30; Salem city, 23.89; Sussex county, 10.43; Elizabeth, 17.07; Rahway, 11.19; Warren county, 13.27; Phillipsburg, 10.91.

Excise Bill Ready.

The most drastic suggestions contained in the majority report of the Excise Investigating Commission for the regulation of the liquor traffic have been incorporated into a proposed law which was submitted to Governor Fort today. The work was done by a special committee composed of Chairman Charles J. Fisk of the commission; Peter Backes, secretary, and J. Kearny Rice. Under the title "An act to regulate the traffic in intoxicating liquors," the proposed law covers the entire field of excise legislation. It retains all the elements of the Bishops law with many added restrictions, calculated by the commission to correct abuses with which they dealt in their report to Governor Fort.

Capacity audiences witnessed Saturday's entertainment.

OLD ENGLAND'S MARTYRS; THEIR CASTLES AND CELLS

An instructive pictorial lecture under the title, "Historical Castles in England," was given by George N. Cross at the Plainfield high school auditorium Saturday night. Numerous views were shown of the famous London Tower, both inside and out, bringing to mind the awful tragedies enacted therein during the struggles of England's early Kings and Queens centuries ago.

The tower, still standing, is used as a museum, and in it are gathered many relics of those days. Mr. Cross had been permitted to photograph the exhibits as well the dungeons and other interiors of the prison in which England's martyrs had been confined.

The gorgeously furnished rooms of state of Windsor Castle, said to be the finest king's palace in the world, were depicted on the screen in their actual colors. Other famous castles were shown and described by the speaker. Two more entertainments will be given by this lecturer at the high school. On next Saturday night the subject is to be "Queen Victoria," and on Saturday January 30, "Abraham Lincoln."

AMERICANS, AROUSED, HALT WEALTH'S MISUSE

The attitude of the American people toward the dominating power of great wealth was discussed by Edward Russell Perry, of New York, at the men's meeting yesterday afternoon at Y. M. C. A. hall, under the suggestive title, "Sampson Aroused." The money kings had not secured their enormous wealth by labor or by industry, he said, but by legislation in their favor, and that this power to influence law-making was rapidly being overcome. The American people were composed to Sampson, who when aroused, arose in his great strength and slew all before him.

It was not greed which prompted men to amass wealth beyond their needs, but the desire for power. The lesson he drew was that every man should live an honorable life and thus do his share towards making America a nation of honest, sincere people. He declared that this country today is in exactly the same stage as regards riches as was Rome before the fall, but had no fear that we would meet the same fate as the Americans were not given to luxury and vice as were the Romans.

As an excuse for Sampson's predisament, the speaker explained that it was due to his love for the young Philisistine girl, and what man would not yield to the entreaties of the girl of his choice. "A woman is weaker than man," said he, "and a weak woman can worry a man into doing anything."

DISCOURSES ON UNREST

Rev. Dr. Henson Says People Need Grace of God Not Legislation or Reform.

PREACHES TO THE BAPTISTS.

"They Cannonade the Preachers of Today and After They Are Dead They Canonize Them.

Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson, one of the best known preachers in the Baptist denomination, occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning. Despite the inclement weather there were between 300 and 400 in the congregation, including members of the Temple Baptist church and of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, who gave up their services for the morning to hear the distinguished divine.

Dr. Henson had a continuous pastorate for fifty-five years, his last charge being at Tremont Temple, Boston, which he resigned to represent the Northern Baptist convention for world evangelization. The object of this convention is to organize all of the various Baptist societies under one head and to undertake the evangelization through united co-operation. The purpose is to raise a million and half dollars for this work.

After briefly outlining the work he has undertaken, Dr. Henson said that he would preach a sermon, that being the purpose of his visit to Plainfield. He took his text from Hagai 2-7: "The Desire of All Nations Shall Come." This text he interpreted to mean that Christ is the desire of all nations, yet when he first came to earth he was not wanted, in fact he was despised and persecuted. But He was what the world wanted and today He is wanted more than ever.

"You find people today who are forever complaining that the old days were the best, that there was no political corruption then, that the preachers were far ahead of those of the present day. This makes me weary. I think such people should by remanded to the old days for awhile and then I think they would be glad enough to come back again. They cannonade the preachers of today and after they are dead they canonize them. The trouble with the people of today is that they are restless. They feel as though the iron heel of oppression is on their necks even in this country where we have so little government that we don't know we have one.

"This feeling of unrest is demonstrated by a demand for shorter hours on the part of workingmen and an increase in wages, but there is no limit to the demands made. When I was in Chicago an Anarchist was hanged, a pitiful sight, but that did not terminate anarchy. I think that there are just as many Anarchists in Chicago as ever. It is not legislation, reform movements or politics that the people want, but it is the power of the grace of God. The individual soul needs Jesus Christ. He it is that tells us all we want to know."

The building will occupy the entire frontage of the lot.

MRS. CHARLES CAMPBELL DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Charles Clement Campbell died suddenly at her home on lower Central avenue, yesterday morning about 11 o'clock. Although she had been in poor health for several years her condition was not considered critical. Death was due to a clot on the brain and Mrs. Campbell passed away within an hour after the attack.

Mrs. Campbell, who has been a resident of this city, two years, was the daughter of Mrs. T. A. Traber, of Cincinnati. She was a native of the latter city and lived there for a number of years. She also travelled extensively and for several years she lived abroad, principally in India. She was a communicant of Grace church, and always attended the services when her health permitted.

Mrs. Campbell's husband holds a position of great responsibility with the Standard Oil Company, being connected with the London office of the big corporation. He is now on his way home and is expected to arrive soon. Besides a husband, Mrs Campbell leaves a son, C. L. Campbell and a daughter, Miss Theo B. Campbell, both of this city.

Funeral services will be held from the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the body will be placed in a receiving vault prior to its removal later to Cincinnati for burial in the family plot.

Will Form Mission Study Class.

Recognizing the necessity and the advantages to be derived from such an organization, Rev. John Y. The matter will be discussed at further length later, when a regular time for meeting will be fixed and the plan of study decided upon.

CLOSE LIGHTING PLANT

Electricity for Plainfield Consumption now Comes from Cranford Station.

P. S. C. ANNOUNCES CHANGE.

Connection with Metuchen Plant to Be Maintained—Considered an Improvement.

Electricity consumers in Plainfield and South Plainfield beginning with today, will be served from the enlarged plant of the Public Service Corporation at Cranford instead of from the local generating station with the assistance of the Metuchen plant at times, as formerly. The power station equipment has been installed and has been actually operating for several days, but it was deemed advisable to make a few minor changes before the plant was regarded as finally completed.

With the operating of the Cranford plant the Plainfield station will be closed and current will be supplied from Cranford to the Plainfield district direct. A connection with the Metuchen power will be maintained, and the Plainfield plant, although closed, will be kept in condition to be started at a moment's notice. This will provide against all emergencies, so far as future service is concerned for the lighting district will have three plants instead of one to rely on, the stations being tied together so that current from any one may be sent to any part of the territory served by either.

In the equipment of the Cranford station there were installed three new boilers, a turbine generator of 2,000 horse power, condensing apparatus, a new switchboard, and transforming apparatus making it practically a new plant of nearly sevently per cent greater capacity than the old equipment. With the facilities now available the company will be able to give better service without the temporary drawbacks which were unavoidable when it was necessary to change the load from one plant to another before the improvements were made.

The damages, however, will not correct faults due to improper interior wiring, and actual investigation has demonstrated that there are a number of houses in Plainfield that are wired inadequately for the number of lights installed. Incidentally, the operation of the improved plant will be a fullfillment of the promises of better service made by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation, in a speech at the Plainfield Board of Trade dinner two years ago. Another benefit that will accrue from the change will be the elimination of the soft coal smoke from the present Plainfield plant.

BONJULATTI'S FRANKNESS COST HIM A $3 FINE.

Joseph Bonjulatti, an Italian living on East Fourth street, evidently believes an honest confession is good for the soul, but it proved expensive to him today. He was arraigned in the city court, this morning, on Patrolman McDonald's charge that he was rendered helpless, Saturday night, through lingering too long over the cup that cheers and gives headaches. When Judge Runyon asked him if the officer's statement was true, Joe said:

"Sure, Mr. Judge, I was drunk; I had a good bun on."

The magistrate opined that it wasn't a nice thing to get intoxicated but inasmuch as the defendant had been truthful in telling about it that he would suspend sentence provided he promised not to repeat the offense.

"Oh, no," Joe answered up quickly; "I get drunk again next time I'm dry."

"Well, in that case," said His Honor, "We'll make it $3 or 10 days now and double the dose whenever you come back."

From the look on Joe's face as he was led away it was apparent that he and truthfulness would have an immediate falling out.

Given Another Chance.

Walter Foster, the colored boy who was recently remanded pending his removal to the Jamesburg reformatory, was arraigned in the city court, this morning, and given another chance at his father's request. TURKISH COLLEGE HEAD PREACHES ON HIS WORK

An address of unusual interest was delivered at the Congregational church, last night, by President John E. Merrill, of the East Turkey College, at Aintab, Turkey. It was a masterly address and Mr. Miller being a brilliant speaker was able to present an exceptionally clear view of the present-day situation in Turkey from a missionary, educational and political point of view.

He dwelt at some length on the politcal revolution which has been in progress in Turkey and he predicted that it would open the way for the missionary in a way never dreamed of, and would afford a rare opportunity to reach the Mahammedams. Mr. Miller has been president of East Turkey College for ten years and during that time has been in close touch with every phase of life in that country.

He speaks in the highest terms of the students at the college and their ability to grasp the most difficult studies. At the same time there has been a strong religious wave sweeping through the country, which has been a source of much encouragement to the missionaries. He says that the hope of Turkey today lies in the young men and they will undoubtedly be in control of affairs.

HOLY CROSS CLUB IS PROSPEROUS NOW

Reports from various committees and a discussion of general matters made the meeting of the Holy Cross club one of interest Saturday night. Its membership is now 94. The secretary reported new property acquired by the club as follows: Pool table and equipment, valued at $250; gymnasium mats, two pairs of boxing gloves, basketball, medicine ball, twelve new volumes for the library, six new banners, also many periodicals.

Arrangements are being made for an indoor athletic meet to be held Saturday night at 7:45 o'clock at the parish house. The events will include a fifteen yard dash, running high jump, standing broad and high jumps, shot put, pole vault and potato race. The competition will be divided into three classes—A, B and C, to be ranked according to size and ability. There will be no handicaps. The club medal and other prizes will be awarded. There will be first, second and third prizes in each class, the scoring to be based on the total number of points. About twenty-five entries have been received.

The dancing class, which meets Thursday night, now has a membership of forty. The special committee reported on the plans for the minstrel show to be held within the next month for the benefit of the library and general fund. A vote of thanks was extended to Edwin S. Hooley for the Christmas dinner and entertainment given to the boys. The club now supports three basketball teams, two baseball teams and two football teams. The house and rules committee in charge of the clubrooms has arranged to keep the rooms open Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons and all day Saturday. There is a good sized balance in the treasury.

Wild West Quartet Arrainged.

At this morning's session of the city court, the four boys whose wild West expedition was rounded up by the police, Albert Vail, Harry Ashton, Merle Todd and Louis Fulton, were arraigned before Judge Runyon. They were given a heart-to-heart talk by the magistrate who afterward turned them over to Captain Irwin, the assistant probation officer. He will keep tabs on them for a year, because of the fact that young Todd stole $2 from his mother and Vail purloined $3 from a sister.

Y. W. C. A. Second Annual.

Monday night, January 25, the annual gymnasium exhibition will be held at the Y. M. C. A., where the accommodations are better for this work.

SCHUYLER THE FAVORITE

Broker Will Succeed R. E. Hall as a City Father Unless Unforseen Happens.

WHAT KNOWING ONES SAY.

Iremonger Not a Candidate and McCready Stock Goes Down—Clark Is Not In It.

Within the course of a few weeks, the "Who's Who and Why in Plainfield" may contain this item of interest:

"Sidney Schieffelin Schuyler, member of the Common Council, New York Stock Exchange broker; has one of the finest homes in 'The City Beautiful' at No. 792 Belvidere avenue; native of Hudson county; resident of Union county ten years and of Plainfield six; staunch Republican, and an 'organization man;' thirty-second degree Mason, member of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, of Plainfield, and of Mecca Temple (New York), Ancient and Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine; senior partner in the Stock Exchange firm of Schuyler, Chadwick & Burnham, No. 100 Broadway, New York."

They say that two things are certain—death and taxes. But politics is also an unknown quantity for in it the "x, y, z's" are plentiful. As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Schuyler is said to have a "cinch" so far as his chances of succeeding Robert E. Hall in the Common Council are concerned. Counting noses there are at least five of the eleven members of that most august body favorable to him, according to a friend of a friend of ours who says he is on the inside in politics.

Edward E. Iremonger, who loomed up strong for the job, has withdrawn in Mr. Schuyler's favor. To be more exact the genial Edward never was a candidate, although his friends tried hard to make him one. To the man on the inside he is reported to have declared yesterday that he did not seek the position and would not take it even if offered on a silver platter garnished with roses. Mr. Iremonger takes to Mr. Schuyler's candidacy like a duck takes to water and like many others he believe he has hit on a sure thing."

Among the others who are already placed in the 'also ran' class are Vice City Chairman Robert H. McCready, Wm. M. Clark and W. M. Alling. Alling has never said that he would become a candidate, although his friends have boomed him strongly and he would make a first rate man for the place. And it is said, that as for Mr. Clark, he won't even get a look in to make use of the significant slang. When it comes to Mr. McCready, our friend says that he is seriously handicapped. You know he was rather conspicuous as an anti-organization man within the memory of man, and this possibly accounts for the political bookies placing the word 'scratched' after his name.

So Schuyler's the man unless the unforeseen happens.

W. G. Besler One of the Speakers.

W. G. Besler, of this city, vice-president and general manager of the New Jersey Central, will be one of the speakers at the annual banquet of the Newark Board of Trade on Thursday night. continues with unabated vigor. The aggregation of values and attractions selected for this week's price slashing would be impossible of enumeration in the space devoted to this ad., but we wish to impress upon you that all odd lots, broken lines, and odd sizes of Fall and Winter Goods must be sold this month, as it is our unfailing policy to close out each season's stock regardless of cost, to be ready for the approaching season with a new, clean stock of fresh merchandise. Hence the great reduction.

Yes! We Give Trading Stamps!

We know its costs us money, we are not asleep to the fact, we know it costs money to advertise, and we know it costs money to deliver goods, all of which are legitimate expenses—yes, we do all these things and yet challenge any of our competitors who do not do these things, to undersell us, on account of not giving trading stamps.

Why we can do it! Because of the increased business it brings to the "White Store," with no more cost to our patrons than they pay for similar goods elsewhere, but in many instances the prices are lower here. Keeping Step With the New Year

It is not this store's purpose to simply mark time as the hours pass and the days go by in this new year of 1909.

It has been our habit to march along and keep step, and thus never to lag in the mercantile procession.

To be up-to-date in everything that goes to make this store better, its stocks more notable and more varied, and its prices fairer, if possible, is the chief desire of the management, and to this end we think, and plan, and work.

Evidences of the result of our activities are seen in the progress of the store toward perfection—in its better systems, its improved organization, its more complete and more varied stocks, and its ability to meet every advance of competition, and to blaze the path and point the way in modern merchandising.

The new year will doubtless bring its problems to be solved, and there will be perplexities to contend with, obstacles to overcome, and innovations to experiment with and promote.

Depend upon this store to be more fully prepared to meet every emergency than ever, to go forward with full faith in our ability to do things in the best way, full of confidence in the growing prosperity of the people, and full of hope for the biggest year's business in the store's history.

Every sail is set to catch the favoring breezes. Get aboard and sail on with us toward the Port of Success.

PADEREWSKI IN NEWARK.

Krueger Auditorium, Newark, Saturday Afternoon, January 30.

The recital to be given by Ignace Jan Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, in the Krueger Auditorium, Newark, Saturday afternoon, January 30, is sure to be attended by as large an audience as that hall will accommodate. Since first his engagement for Newark was announced Frederick N. Sommer, under whose management he will appear in Newark, has received by mail many orders for seats, not only from Newark and vicinity but also from New York. The demand from his admirers in Manhattan undoubtedly is due to the fact that all the seats for his recital in Carnegie Hall early in February have been sold. Reports from Europe of Mr. Paderewski's recent recitals point to the fact that his playing is more wonderful than ever. This is encouraging to his American admirers, and to those who intend hearing the great virtuoso, on January 30. The regular sale of seats will open at the Lauter Co.'s piano warerooms, 657 Broad street, Tuesday, January 26. Mail orders are being received by F. N. Sommer, 794 Broad street, Newark.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold a regular conclave tonight.

Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight. There may be a report concerning the proposed new county organization of Juniors.

Henry Weiss, of Regent street, is detained at home with an attack of pleurisy.

BOWLING.

The schedule this week in the Fraternal League is as follows:

Tonight, Elks vs. Knights of Pythias; Wednesday, Wetumpka vs. Woodmen; Friday, Miantonomo vs. Saengerbund.

A two man team tourney limited to fifteen teams is the next competition to be held at Campbell's alleys. It is planned to begin the tourney Monday, February 8, and several entries have already been received.

The annual endurance contest will be held this year on Lincoln's birthday. Ten teams participated in this big event last year and it is hoped to have at least fifteen teams take part this year.

There will be lots of noise at Campbell's alleys tonight when the Elks and Pythians meet. The Miantonomo team and its rooters will be out in force to whoop it up for the Knights and Sam Wilbur, who is taking much interest in the showing the Elks team has made thus far, is organizing a band of rooters to offset the Red Men's efforts.

Skelly is interesting himself in what Nash and Laing will do in their individual efforts. Louie has hopes of carrying off first honors but at the same time fears that Ed Laing may overtake him.

FOOTBALL.

The Princeton athletic association has issued its financial statement for the year 1907-'08. The account shows a balance of $1,075.75 for the year. The minor sports show heavy deficits which are made good by the profits in football and baseball. Football receipts were $50,643.88 and baseball $24,915.52. The general expense account follows: Receipts—Balance July 1, 1907, $213.15; profit on football, $24,596.38; profit on baseball, $8,957.57; total, $33,766.10.

Disbursements—Salaries, $5,979.92; field improvements, $3,803.48; track deficit, $4,497.07; gymnasium and swimming deficit, $310.81; lawn tennis deficit, $79.12; basketball deficit, $658.62; hockey deficit, $1,231.78; freshmen deficit, $1,327.67; wrestling deficit, $244.12; expenses for rent, taxes, water, light, etc., $14,557.76; balance on hand July 1, 1908, $1,075.75; total, $33,766.10.

Captain Fish, of the Harvard football team announces that Harvard will play West Point this year instead of Annapolis. The game will be played on October 30. Formerly Harvard had a yearly contest with West Point, but for some reason the game was abandoned and the one with Annapolis substituted. The navy game was dropped because of the long journey from Cambridge to Annapolis and because some ill feeling has grown up as the result of two baseball games last spring.

GOLF.

In discussing the proposed action on the part of the Western Golf Association with regard to changing its name to the American Golf Association and also the removal of all geographical boundary lines "The Golfers' Magazine," in its current number, takes exception to the terms "secession" and "rebellion" that have been used from time to time. These proposed changes were introduced at the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association at Chicago Saturday night.

The purpose of the meeting was the election of officers and directors for the ensuing year, the awarding of championship tournaments for 1909, to be played under the auspices of the association, action on an amendment to the constitution, and the transaction of such other business as would come before the delegates. Each club, a member of the association, was entitled to be represented at the annual meeting by two voting delegates. The editorial in "The Golfers' Magazine" reads as follows:

"Much has been published in the Eastern newspapers about the proposed rebellion, secession, etc., of the Western Golf Association. There can be no such thing as rebellion or secession by an independent body. The Western Golf Association never has been other than such, and it has a perfect right to change its name and remove territorial limitations. Expansion, yes. Rebellion and secession, no. It also has the right to formulate the rules under which its tournament shall be conducted. Necessity has on several occasions required the Western Golf Association to issue special rules. This was the case in the last open championship, when the committee made a rule allowing players to consider the soft mud, occasioned by twenty-one days of rain, the same as casual water. It would have been a fine state of affairs had the Western Golf Association committee been obliged to wait for permission from the United States Golf Association before it made its own rules to meet the conditions of the course in St. Louis.

VARIETY AT THE THEATRE

Offerings for the Present Week Give Playgoers a Wide Selection.

TWO BIG PRODUCTIONS BOOKED.

"The American Idea" Tonight, Louis Mann on Saturday—Niblo Lecture and Irish Recital on the Bible.

While the present week at the New Plainfield theatre will not be rich in what is called dramatic attractions, the outlook is exceedingly pleasant as the list as prepared by Manager Counihan is one of great variety. It includes a musical comedy, a comedy drama, an Irish recital, a travel talk on Russia, an evening with the marvelous cameraphone and last but not least, one of the popular "try-out" nights. The theatregoer who cannot make a selection out of these is in a class with the dyseptic who shies at everything edible.

The weekly program starts off tonight with "The American Idea," one of George M. Cohan's whirlygirly musical frivolities that comes direct from Philadelphia after a month of record-breaking business. It is described by one critic as a "riot" while another dipped his pen deep in the ink well and declared it to be, "a Gatling gun, firing from the Empire State express when running down hill; a swirl of songs and dances, a kaleidoscopic maelstrom of Cohanesque numbers and the last word of stage magnificence." With this send-off it should certainly be "all to the good." The cast includes George Beban, who has been a team mate of Warfield, Louis Mann, William Collier, Joe Weber, Lew Fields and many of the other big ones; Trixie Friganza, the fastest of the heavy-weight comediennes; Robert L. Dailey, brother of the late Peter F. Dailey; Gilbert Gregory, Mark Hart and the two inimitable dancers, Rosie Green and Gertie Vanderbilt, who are one of the big features of the show. Since it is a Cohan production, it goes without saying that it will have a raft of pretty chorus girls.

Tomorrow night, Miss Kathleen Mathew, who is a grand niece of Father Mathew, the world-renowned Irish apostle of temperance, will be heard at the theatre in her original dramatic recitals of the songs and stories of the Emerald Isle, in which she has scored pronounced success wherever she has appeared. Her recitals consist of original and dramatic stories of her own native land, given in prose pictures, monologues and impersonations, with musical accompaniment and stereopticon slides made from pictures taken by herself. Miss Mathew wears an attractive Irish costume while on the stage and dramtically depicts and describes phases of Irish life and character never before seen in America.

Fred Niblo will return to the theatre Wednesday night and give the fourth of his series of travel talks. "Russia, from the Baltic to the Black Sea," will be his subject and by many it is considered his best. The talks have made a great impression on the Plainfielders who have heard them and are worthy of much greater patronage than that so far accorded.

The Cameraphone, the wonderful mechanical device that sings and talks in conjunction with moving pictures, will be the attraction at the playhouse and Friday has been set aside for the weekly "try-out" or "knife night," as the gallery patrons are beginning to call it. It is "knife night" because the ambitious amateurs who come before the footlights with the idea of getting a start on a stage career, are "knifed" good and proper if their act doesn't pass muster.

The week will be closed by matinee and night performances on Saturday of Jules Eckert Goodman's eccentric comedy. "The Man Who Stood Still." With it comes Louis Mann, who is known to many local people through his clever character work in such popular successes as "The Girl from Paris," "All on Account of Eliza," "The Telephone Girl," "Julie Bonbon" and "The White Hen." In "Julie Bonbon" he was co-star with his wife, Clara Lipman, who wrote the piece. In the title role of "The Man Who Stood Still," Mr. Mann is said to have the best opportunity in his career as a star. His support includes Emily Ann Wollman, Mathilde Cottrelly, Robert A. Fischer and that wonderful baby of "Madame Butterfly," little Corinne Malvern.

Another thing about "The Man Who Stood Still;" it is the work of the same author who wrote "The Right to Live," the daring and intensely interesting drama seen at the New Plainfield early in the pres-

Fight to Be Morgue Keeper.

The fight for the position of keeper of Elizabeth's morgue for three years years is now up to County Judge Atwater to settle. The struggle has narrowed down to John Engel, Jr., and John F. Martin, who formerly held the job. The Republican county committee, which usually recommends a man for the place, is badly split between the two candidates. The committee took two ballots on the matter, the first one resulting in a tie vote, while on the second Engel was two ahead. Martin claims, however, the full committee was not [illegible]

HERE AND THERE.

Halstead C. Compton, of West Front street, has in his possession a relic in the shape of a copper plate, which his father, James I. Compton used in about 1800 when he was engaged in the manufacture of hats, not far from H. C. Compton's present place of residence. The plate bears this inscription: "James I. Compton, hat manufacturer, wholesale and retail, Plainfield, New Jersey. Waterproof." At the top of the inscription there is an eagle and on either side a picture of a hat, while at the bottom there appears a picture of a beaver on one side and that of a store on the other.

Mr. Compton was engaged in the manufacture of hats for over thirty years and the land now owned by his son, H. C. Compton, on West Front street, was a part of the former's sixty acres of land. In those days the making of hats was quite an industry in Plainfield and Mr. Compton was considered an expert. He was known for many miles around and did a thriving business

THEIR ONLY QUARREL.

"Did you ever quarrel with your wife, Binks?"

"Only once."

"Only once? Gee! You are a lucky man."

"Oh, it wasn't luck. I merely found out then that it wasn't worth while."

"Aha! Had to let her have her way, eh?"

"No; it wasn't that. She didn't have her way."

"Oh, I see! You won out, and felt like a brute afterward."

"Nope. I didn't win out."

"Well, how the dickens—"

"Why, it was this way. You see, she wanted to name the baby Thomas, after me, and I wanted to name it William, after her father, who was a dead game old sport if there ever was one. We had an argument lasting two whole months, and while she wept I was firm; she was adamant even in her tears, and I wasn't to be moved by Heaven or earth. And then—well, then, you see, the baby was born."

"And then, of course, you each wanted to give in to the other, and found yourselves still on opposing sides."

"No. The baby was a girl."—Judge.

Trixie Friganza and Robert Dailey, in scene "Won't You Forgive Me," with "American Idea," at New Plainfield Theatre Tonight.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The most expensively gowned musical comedy produced this year is George M. Cohan's "The American Idea," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tonight. Its characters are largely American with the scenes laid in Paris. Messrs. Cohan and Harris, the producers, despaired of making the proper stage pictures without sending direct to the Rue de la Paix for hats and gowns. The result is a series of scenes in which the men and women might have stepped direct from the greensward of Long Champs or Auteuil.

A famous and gifted young Irish woman, namely Miss Kathleen Mathew, will make her first appearance in this city at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H. Miss Mathew will be heard in her original Dramatic Recitals of the Songs and Stories of Ireland illustrated by music and stereopticon views made from pictures taken by herself in Ireland. Miss Mathew is said to possess great personal magnetism; a charming personality, and talents of a very high order and wherever she has appeared she has been greeted by very large and enthusiastic audiences whom she has delighted by her ability to portray true Irish life and character. Miss Mathew is grand niece of Father Mathew the world renowned Irish Apostle of temperance and has apparently inherited this great man's power of eloquence and ability to sway the motions of an audience.

Louis Mann, in his latest role, that of the title of "The Man Who Stood Still," comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. His role, John Krauss, represents, it is said, the ultra developments of his skill as an actor of German dialect characters. Unlike the role he has hitherto acted, save in "The Red Kloof," this part gives him an opportunity for dramatic acting of what has been described as a very fine and legitimate kind. Krauss is a Bourbon in everything, he learns nothing, and forgets nothing. He believes that the ways of his ancestors are good enough for this generation, and refuses to move with the tide of progress, so that he is left standing still, the while business, kin, and all slip ahead of him. Mathilde Cottrelly has an ideal role as Krauss' spinster sister; and there is in the cast a new ingenue, Emile Ann Wellman, who is said by the New York city newspapers to be a real "discovery."

On Monday night there will be

opened the first engagement in this vicinity of the most wonderful public entertainment that this wonderful age has produced. Performances afternoon and evening at the New Plainfield theatre will be given on the Cameraphone, which has been justly called "The Eighth Wonder of the World." The exhibitions give absolutely human performances on the stage of living, moving, breathing characters and personalities singing, talking and acting in all respects as a regular theatrical performance, and the features given include all the most striking popular theatrical entertainments of the day. First bills given here include Blanch Ring and Mlle. Dazre.

The Plainfield Sunday school Teachers' Union will meet at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock. Rev. F. K. Mathiews, of Scotch Plains, will teach the lesson, "The Lame Man Healed," and Robert Love will have charge of the devotional exercises.

THE BEN GREET PLAYERS.

With the Russian Symphony Orchestra in a Midsummer Night's Dream.

One of the most important events of the musical and dramtic year, and one entirely unique in character, is that of the Russian Symphony orchestra, of New York, Modest Oltschuler conductor, and the Ben Greet Players, under the personal direction of Ben Greet, who will appear jointly at the Krueger Auditorium, Newark, Saturday afternoon and evening, January 23, in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" with the complete Mendelssohn music.

The Ben Greet organization has been especially augmented and strengthened for this tour and will include Ben Greet, Irene Rooke, Violet Vivian, Beatrice Mills, J. Sayer Crawley, Milton Rosmer, Le Gai Robinson, Frederick Powell, George Vivian and Percival Seymour.

A special feature will be the dances. Lou Wall Moore, who has made a special study of the ancient Greek dance, very appropriate to this play, and who is also well known as a sculptress will dance to the music of the Spring Song, which is interpolated and the Nocturne. In addition a group of children will render the fairy dances.

A special setting has been designed and painted by the well known rural painters, Troy and Margaret Kinney. The performance will not be given in the Elizabethan manner but in the style of Mr. Greet's open-air plays.

The sale of seats for these performances will be at the Lauter Co.'s piano warerooms, 657 Broad street, Newark.

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

Aunt Rebecca in black lace and jewels was tilting with the world in general and Millicent Winter in particular; she displayed her most cynical mood. She had demolished democracy; had planted herself firmly on the basic doctrine that the virtues cultivated by slavery far outnumber its inseparable vices; and that most people, if not all, need a master; had been picturesquely and inaccurately eloquent on the subject of dynamite (which she pronounced the logical fourth dimension of liberty, fraternity and equality); had put the yellow rich where they belonged; and the red anarchists mainly under the sod; and she had abolished the Fourth of July to the last sputter of fire-cracker; thence by easy transitions she had extolled American art (which American patrons were too ignorant to appreciate), deplored American music ("The trouble isn't that it is canned," says she, "but that it was spoiled before they canned it!") and was now driving a chariot of fire through American literature; as for the academics, they never said what they thought, but only what they thought they ought to think; and they always mistook anemia for refinement, as another school mistook yelling and perspiring for vigor.

Just as Winter modestly entered the arena, no less a personage than Henry James was under the wheels. Janet Smith had modestly confessed to believing him a consummate artist; and Millicent in an orotund voice declared that he went deep, deep down into the mysteries of life.

"I don't deny it; he ought to get down deep," returned Aunt Rebecca in her gentlest, softest utterance; "he's always boring."

Mrs. Melville's suppressed agitation made her stays creak.

"Do you really think that James is not a great artist?" she breathed.

"I think he is not worth while."

"Wow!" cried Tracy. "Oh, I say—"

"Aunt Rebecca; you cannot mean —" this was Mrs. Melville, choking with horror.

"His style," repeated the unmoved iconoclast, "his style has the remains of great beauty; all his separate phrases, if you wish, are gems; and he is a literary lapidary; but his sentences are so subtle, so complex, so intricately compounded, and so discursive that I get a pain in the back of my neck before I find out what he may mean; and then—I don't agree with him! Now is is worth while to put in so much hard reading only to be irritated?"

"I beg pardon," Winter interposed, with masculine pusillanimity evading takes sides in the question at issue, "I thought we were going to have some music; why don't you boys give us some college songs? Here is a mandolin."

Aunt Rebecca's still luminous eyes went from the speaker to Janet Smith in the corner. She said something about hearing the music better from the other side of the balcony. Now (as Mrs. Millicent very truly explained) there was not a ha'penny-worth's difference in favor of one side over the other; but she followed in the wake of her imperious aunt.

The colonel drew nearer to Janet Smith; in order to sink his voice below disturbing the music-lovers he found it necessary to sit on a pile of cushions at her feet.

"Did you know Mercer will be back to-night?" he began, a long way from his ultimate object. He noticed that leaning back in the shadow her ready smile had dropped from her face, which looked tired. "I want to tell you a little story about Mercer," he continued; "may I? It won't take long."

He was aware, and it gave him a twinge of pain to see it, that she sat up a little straighter, like one on guard; and oh, how tired her face was and how sweet! He told her of all his suspicions of her brother-in-law; of the blood-stains and the changing of clothes; she did not interrupt him by a question, hardly by a motion, until he told of the conversation with Keatcham and the note signed "The Black Hand." At this her eyes lighted; she exclaimed impetuously: "Cary Mercer never did send that letter!" She drew a deep intake of breath. "I don't believe he touched Mr. Keatcham!"

"Neither do I," said the colonel, "but wait!" He went on to the theater girl's report of the receiver of the telegrams. Her hands, which clasped her knee, fell apart; her lips parted and closed firmly.

"Did I think it was you?" said he. "Why, yes, I confess I did fear it might be and that you might be trying to shield Atkins."

"I!" she exclaimed hotly; "that detestable villain!"

"Isn't he?" cried the colonel. "But —well, I couldn't tell how he might strike a lady," he ended lamely.

"I reckon he would strike a lady if she were silly enough to marry him and he got tired of her. He is the kind of man who will persecute a girl to marry him, follow her around and importune her and flatter her and then, if he should prevail, never forgive her for the bother she has given him. Oh, I never did like him; I'm afraid of him—awfully."

"Not you?"—the colonel's voice was cheerful, as if he had not shivered over his own foreboding vision. "I've seen you in action already, you know."

"Not fighting bombs. I hate bombs. There are so many pieces to hit you. You can't run away."

"Well, you'll find them not so bad; besides, you did fight one this very morning, and you were cool as peppermint!"

"That was quite different; I had time to think, and the danger was more to me than to any one else; but to think of Mrs. Winter and Archie and y— all of you; that scares me."

"Now, don't let it get on your nerves," he soothed—of course it is necessary to take a girl's hand to soothe her when she is frightned. But Miss Smith calmly released her hand, only reddening a little; and she laughed. "Where—where were we at?" she asked in her unconscious southern phraseology.

"Somewhere around Atkins, I think," said the colonel; he laughed in his turn—he found it easy to laugh, now that he knew how she felt toward Atkins. "You see, after I talked with Keatcham I couldn't make anything but Atkins out of the whole business. But there were those stained cuffs and his changing his clothes—"

"Yes," said she.

"How explain? There was only one explanation; that was, that perhaps Mercer had discovered Keatcham before we did, unconsciously spotted his cuffs, been alarmed by our approach and hidden, lest it should be the murderers returning. He might have wanted a chance to draw his revolver. Say he did that way, he might foolishly pretend to enter for the first time. If he made that mistake and then discovered the condition of his cuffs and the spots on his knee, what would be his natural first impulse? Why, to change them, trusting that they hadn't been noticed. Maybe, then, he would wash them out—"

"No," murmured Miss Smith meekly,, with a little twinkle of her eye; "I did that; he hid them. How ridiculous of me to get in such a fright! But you know how Cary hated Mr. Keatcham; and you—no, you don't know the lengths that such a temperament as his will go. I did another silly thing; I found a dagger, one of those Moorish stilettoes that hang in the library; it was lying in the doorway. When no one was looking I hid it and carried it off. I stuck it in one of the flower beds; I stuck it in the ferns; I have stuck that wretched thing all over this yard. I didn't dare carry it back and put it in the empty place with the others because some one might have noticed the place. And I didn't dare say anything to Cary; I was right miserable."

"So was I," said the colonel, "thinking you were trying to protect the murderer. But do you know what I had sense to do?"

"Go to Mrs. Winter? Oh, I wanted to!"

"Exactly; and do you know what that dead game sport said to me? She said she found those washed and ironed cuffs and trousers neatly cleaned with milka—what's milka?—and the milka cleaned the spots so much cleaner than the rest that she had her own suspicions started. But says she: 'Not being a plumb idiot, I went straight to Cary and he told me the whole story—' "

"Which was like your story?"

"Very near. And you see it would be like Atkins to leave incriminating testimony round loose. That is, incriminating testimony against Mercer and Tracy. The dagger. Tracy remembers, was not in the libary; it was in the patio. Right to hand. Atkins must have got in and found Mr. Keatcham on the floor in a faint. Whether he meant to make a bargain with him or to kill him, perhaps we shall never know; but when he saw him helpless before him he believed his chance was come to kill him and get the cipher key, removing his enemy and making his fortune at a blow, as the French say. Voila tout!"

"Do you think"—her voice sank lower; she glanced over her shoulder—"do you reckon Atkins had anything to do with that train robbery? Was it a mere pretext to give a chance to murder Mr. Keatcham, fixing the blame on ordinary bandits?"

"By Jove! it might be."

"I don't suppose we shall ever know. But, Col. Winter, do you mind explaining to me just what Brother Cary's scheme with Mr. Keatcham was? Mrs. Winter told me you would."

"She told me," mused the colonel, "that you didn't know anything about this big game which has netted them millions. They've closed out their deals and have the cash. No paper profits for Auntie! She said that she would not risk your being mixed up in it; so kept you absolutely in the dark. I'm there, too. Didn't you know Mercer had kidnapped Archie?"

"No; I didn't know he was with Mr. Keatcham at the hotel. It would have saved me a heap of suffering; but she didn't dare let me know for fear, if anything should happen, I would be mixed up in it. It was out of kindness, Col. Winter, truly it was. Afterwards when she saw that I was worried she gave me hints that I need not worry, Archie was quite safe."

"And the note-paper?"

"I suppose she gave it to them," answered Miss Smith.

ELKS STILL LEADING IN BOWLING TOURNEY

By the scant margin of one game the Elk's team is showing the way in the Fraternal Bowling League with the Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men in second place and the Woodmen of Westfield in third position.

But two games separate the first and third teams and a decidedly interesting situation has developed.

In the race for individual honors Nash of the Knights of Pythias team has an advantage of eight points over his nearest competitor, Skelly, of the Miantonomo five, being in second place.

Ed Laing, who has been shooting rather consistently in all his games, is in line for third place, less than two points behind. Skelly and Laing's scores in the games against the Knights of Pythias tonight will be watched with interest.

The team standing and individual averages to date follow:

Although the church boys started at 6:45 they did not arrive at the college gymnasium in New Brunswick until 9:15, owing to the storm. Because of the late hour, only fifteen minute halves were played. The regular local team lined up against the preps, except that Corle was substituted for Marsh. ARLINGTON RAID CASE ON AT SOMERVILLE TODAY

The trial of Morris Farbman, proprietor of the Arlington hotel at Somerset street and Greenbrook road, charged by the borough police with maintaining a disorderly house, was called in the county court at Somerville, this morning. Something like twenty witnesses in all were subpoenaed, among them being Mayor Samuel Townsend, Chief Marshal George Weiss and several borough policeman; Chief Kiely and Sergeant Overbaugh, of the city department and six men and women who were arrested in the hotel on the night that it was raided under Chief Weiss' command.

Judge L. T. Schenck is presiding at the case and Prosecutor Reger is conducting the State's side. Farbman is represented by William G. DeMeza and it was apparent to those about the court room that the latter has prepared to make a vigorous defense. This morning's session was devoted to hearing the State's witnesses and adjournment was taken at noon until 1:30.

The case is of widespread interest in the city and borough from the manner in which the Arlington was raided. The police swooped down upon the place about 11 o'clock on a Saturday night two months ago and arrested eighteen men and women who were either in the side parlor or in the upstairs rooms. They were locked up overnight and some of them were kept crowded in cells until late the next afternoon.

MORRIS PLAINS ASYLUM MENACED BY FLAMES.

Fire was discovered in a linen-room in one of the woman's wards, on the fourth floor of the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, late Friday afternoon. The prompt action of the managers of the institution and their assistants, all of whom, without confusion or loss of time, assumed the duties assigned them, the State was saved a great loss, and only a few of the patients were exposed to the excitements incidental to an alarm of fire.

It is supposed the fire started from a curtain being ignited by a gas jet, and when discovered the contents of the room, filled with cotton fabrics, were ablaze. The flames swept far out into the corridor when the door was opened. Dr. Britton D. Evans, Dr. Peter Mallon, Harry A. Van Gilder, secretary of the board of managers, and Freeholder George T. Allen, of Morristown, were in the board room when the alarm was brought to the officers, and, with Drs. E. Moore Fisher, Blase Cole and Louis K. Henchel and others, hastened to fight the flames.

An immediate examination of the timbers under the great roof of the building at this point showed that they were but slightly charred.

There were forty-six patients in the corridor when the firm alarm was given, the attendants instantly beginning to remove them through the three exits. Very few of the balance of the 658 female patients on that side of the building learned anything about the affair, although the hospital fire department, under the leadership of Chief George Mulford, raised several ladders to the windows at the danger point.

The loss by the flames is not heavy.

Charles Sheppard, of Somerset street, is detained at home with the grip.

DEATH OF FORMER BOROUGH RESIDENT

Gibson L. Douglass, a former well known resident of North Plainfield, died Friday morning at his home in Buffalo, N. Y., general debility being the cause. He was seventy years old and at the time of his death was one of the most prominent men engaged in the transportation business about the Great Lakes, and a factor in the world of commercial traffic.

Mr. Douglass was a native of Troy, N. Y., and from the time that he was a boy engaged in transportation work, principally with the New York Central Railroad, the Merchants Despatch Transportation and the Western Transit company. He came to Plainfield about 1890 and resided for four years at Sycamore and Willow avenues. Later he moved to the Musgrave place at Sycamore and Mercer avenues where he remained until his removal to Buffalo in 1896. At the time of his death he was vice president and general manager of the Western Transit Company and had entire charge of the business of that concern.

Mr. Douglass is survived by his wife, five sons and one daughter, the latter being Mrs. Arthur E. Crone, of College place, this city. Mr. and Mrs. Crone attended the funeral, held yesterday at the late home.

What Telephone Users Can Do to Help the Service.

Telephone users may help the telephone service:

By consulting the telephone directory before making calls, thus obviating the many errors due to calling numbers from memory.

By speaking directly into the transmitter in a clear, distinct voice.

By separating the figures of the telephone number when making a call, for example—Rector 1234, Rector one-two-three-four.

By correcting the operator if she repeats the number called incorrectly.

By holding the telephone receiver to the ear until the called party answers, or some report is given from the Central Office.

By being ready to talk when the called party answers. As a matter of courtesy, the person making the telephone call should not oblige the called party to wait his convenience.

By answering telephone calls promptly. If there is unusual delay in answering the telephone, the operator may report "Don't answer" to the party calling.

In telephone operating, the human element must be considered. The public is human. Telephone operators are human. The hastily spoken word and its inflection conveys whatever impression each gets of the other. Under such conditions, courtesy both on the part of the operating force and the public is like oil to machinery—necessary to prevent friction.

BLUES' POET CENTENARY

Edgar Allen Poe's Hundredth Birthday Observed in the Public Schools Today.

PRINCIPALS' BRIEF TALKS.

Henry C. Krebs and Ira W. Travell Tell Pupils Something of the Bard's Life.

Edgar Allen Poe's one hundredth birthday anniversary was celebrated at the public schools this morning, special exercises being held. At the Plainfield high school Principal I. W. Travell made a ten minutes talk to the pupils on the poet's career, making special mention of the poem, "The Fall of Usher."

Superintendent H. C. Krebs, at the North Plainfield high school, reviewed Poe's life, and read the most famous of his poems, "The Raven." Mr. Krebs also gave a brief account of the life of General Robert E. Lee, whose one hundred and second birthday anniversary is today.

There has been no one great central celebration in America of the one hundredth anniversary of Edgar Allen Poe's birth. A number of separate celebrations, however, were held in his honor—one in Boston, where he was born; one at the University of Virginia, where he was educated; another in Providence, R. I., where ,after the death of his wife, he wooed Mrs. Sarah Helen Whitman, also a poet; another in New York, where he lived the closing years of his life, and one in Baltimore, where he died threescore years ago.

The exercises at Poe's cottage at Fordham consisted of a reception in the poet's tiny home, where his wife died, and the dedication of a tablet in Poe park.

Poe is the most interesting figure in American literature, and his life furnishes the most extraordinary instance on record of systematic misrepresentation on the part of a biographer. Lambert A. Wilmer, the first editor of a magazine called "The Messenger," paid this tribute to Poe, with whom he had associated Writing after a lapse of years, he said:

"The late Edgar A. Poe has been represented by the American newspapers in general as a reckless libertine and a confirmed inebriate. I do not recognize him by this description, though I was intimately acquainted with the man and had every opportunity to study his character. I have been in company with him every day for many months together, and within a period of twelve years I did not see him inebriated—no, not in a single instance. I do not believe he was ever habitually intemperate until he was made so by grief and many bitter disappointments. And with respect to the charge of libertinism I have similar testimony to offer. Of all men that I ever knew he was the most passionless, and I appeal to his writings for a confirmation of this. * * * Poe never wrote a line that gave expression to a libitinous thought. The female creations of his fancy are all either statues or angels. His conversation at all times was a chaste as that of a vestal, and his conduct while I knew him was correspondingly blameless."

Decadent writers of France, England and America have more or less successfully imitated Poe's creations in every feature but their purity. Only in Woodberry's biography is there any such attempt at defamation.

Offered Will for Probate.

Francis J. Blatz, counsel for the estate of Mary Paul, offered her will for probate in Surrogate Parrot's office, Elizabeth, yesterday. The estate is a small one. Miss Paul, well advanced in years, died at Muhlenberg Hospital a few weeks ago. The funeral and burial were held under the direction of Father B. M. Bogan, the dead woman having no known relatives. The estate will probably little more than cover hospital and burial expenses.

TIMBOITES ENJOY THE SEASON'S FIRST SMOKER

The first entertainment and smoker of the customary mid-winter series arranged by The Timbo Social Club was held in the organization's rooms on North avenue, last night. It was attended by seventy-five of the members and continued from early last evening until well after midnight this morning. The affair was a big success in every way.

Harry Wetton, of Elizabeth, the well known musical expert and piano monologuist, was the principal entertainer during the evening and introduced several new specialties that were well received. Vocal numbers were rendered by William Doud, Archie Davie, Erwin Y. Neighbor, John P. Hall, W. J. Counihan, Thomas Fay and Thomas M. Muir, while Messrs. Counihan and Fay gave soft shoe and Lancashire clog dances that brought rounds of applause. Another feature of the program was monolgues by Henry Wierenga and Richard Bittle. An oyster supper was served in conclusion.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Erwin Y. Neighbor, William Doud, Henry Wierenga, Thomas M. Muir and John DeNise. A similar smoker will be held the latter part of next month.

FIRE HEADQUARTERS STARTLED BY A BULLET

Just as if they didn't have enough excitement to liven them up at intervals, some individual on East Front street threw a scare into the men at fire headquarters about 9:30 last night, by sending a .38 calibre bullet through one of the rear upstairs windows. The crash of glass made the laddies jump in all directions and two or three who had gone to bed early tumbled out in the belief that a new kind of alarm had been sounded. A hurried investigation revealed the missile embedded in the wall and the police were notified.

Patrolman Nolan was delegated to look into the shooting and rubber-heeled it up and down "One Story Terrace," as the block on East Front street between Park and Watchung avenues is known, but he failed to get a line on who did it. A Polak family lives directly back of fire headquarters and the members were put through a course of sprouts under the supposition that one of them fired the shot. The inference was indignantly denied,however, and the cop finally gave up the quest.

So far as known, there was no "narrow escapes from being hit" at headquarters, but the firemen want it understood they nor the building are to be used as a target.

COUNTY PRESIDENT INSTALLS A. O. H. OFFICERS.

Best Bill at Proctor's.

Yesterday's bill at Proctor's theatre proved by far the strongest ever offered at the popular playhouse. The feature of the vaudeville was "Little Tilly" who has made a big hit. The moving pictures were the best yet seen here, including Rider Haggard's novel "She." The "Humanscope" selection, "The Story of the Handkerchief," convulsed the large audience with laughter. New pictures will be offered today.

William Holmes a Juror.

It is William Holmes, of Arlington avenue, and not William Ulmer, who was drawn yesterday as a petit juror at Elizabeth.

JAILED ON GIRL'S CHARGE

Nine Young Men Arrested After Story Told Police by Emma Yansch.

HEARING THIS AFTERNOON.

Plaintiff Declares She Was Taken to Crescent Oval Grandstand and Abused by the Defendants.

Passing through the North avenue station at 1:30 yesterday morning, Roundsman Morris Higgins had his attention attracted by Edward Seader running away from a girl he was talking to as the officer approached. The roundsman quizzed the young woman and found her to be Emma Yansch, 17 years old, of Cranford, who was arraigned in the city court a few months ago on a charge of loitering. She told several conflicting stories as to why Seader had run away and Higgins decided to place her uunder arrest.

At headquarters a little later, Miss Yansch told a story of abuse at the hands of a number of young men who either drive hacks or are in the habit of congregating about the depot. She declared that she had been taken to the grandstand at Crescent oval Sunday night and that she had been kept there for several hours, after which she was brought back to the North avenue station. The trip to the oval, she said, had been made in Seader's cab.

The girl furnished the police with a list of names and as a result the following were locked up either yesterday afternoon or last night: Edward Seader, Harry Seader, Walter Morley, Martin Denlinger, John Kreger, M. J. Kennedy, Jr., William Brown, Edward Killoran and Walter Southard. They were brought before Judge Runyon, this morning, but at Chief Kiely's request the matter was adjourned until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

City Physician Lufburrow examined the Yansch girl today and declared her to be weak-minded. As soon as the present case is disposed of steps will be taken to have her committed to the State Home at Trenton.

PROCLAMATION FOR LINCOLN CENTENARY

On the twelfth day of February next will occur the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

By the law of our State his birthday has been made an annual legal holiday; but, the coming anniversary of his birth demands more than the customary observance.

Born in obscurity, when the place of his birth and early manhood, that is now a part of the great middle west, was on the frontier of the Republic, and reared amidst privations and hardships, with few, if any, of the advantages now obtainable by the youth of our day, he surmounted all difficulties and rose by sheer personal merit to the Presidency of the Republic and died a martyr's death when but fifty-six years of age.

He stood for freedom and the equality of men. He exemplified the pure in personal, domestic and public life. He, as few others ever did, had the confidence of the people. He sprang from them, was of them, and they loved and honored him.

His life and work are unique in American history. To recall his humble birth, his privations, sacrifices, virtues, utterances, principals, and public services, is to encourage youth, strengthen the cause of truth and right in all men, and to elevate our standards of political honesty.

Therefore, I, John Franklin Fort, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby call upon all municipalities in the State, all public organizations, clubs, Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, Public schools and all civic societies to cause suitable exercises to be arranged for on said twelfth day of February next, or near thereto, that the memory of this great American may be suitably commemorated; and I do further recommend that the clergy of the State shall, either upon the Sabbath preceding or succeeding the anniversary of his birth, devote one service in their respective places of worship to appropriate exercises.

Given under my hand and seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton, this eighteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and nine and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-third.

Merchants Ask City Fathers to Sign Contract Which Means $20,000 Expense.

TO LIGHT UP THE STORES.

A. E. Force is Re-elected President of the Merchants' Association At Its Annual Meeting.

The election of officers and a discussion of the proposition to illuminate the business section of the city with arc lights comprised the chief business at the annual meting of the Plainfield's Merchants' Association, last night. The lighting question was introduced through a communication received from Francis L. Montgomery, chairman of the councilmanic committee. Mr. Montgomery informed the association that when the proposed electric light contract was taken up for consideration by his committee, its approval was defeated by one vote.

It was suggested that the members of the association examine the proposed contract on file at the office of City Clerk J. T. MacMurray.

The discussion brought out the fact that the association wants arc lights installed in the business section. The members favor a five years' contract with the Public Service Corporation for fifty arc lights at the price of $80 a year. This would cost the city a total of $4,000 a year, but the merchants believe that it would be a wise expenditure of city funds. Remarks endorsing the proposition were made by Herman Schwed and George O. Stevens, and a resolution offered by J. V. E. Vanderhoef and adopted, approved the contract for arc lights and pledged the association to urge its adoption by the Common Council.

These officers for the coming year were chosen: President, A.E.Force; first vice-president, Herman Schuldenfrei; second vice-president, F. A. Duttenhoefer; secretary, H.P. Greenwood; treasurer, John S. Johnston; executive committee, M. C. VanArsdale and Herman Schwed.

The committe on the first annual banquet to be held tonight at the Hartridge School auditorium, reported that all the details for the affair were completed and there was every indication that it would be a success.

DUNELLEN'S PEACE DISTURBED BY THEM

Two drunks were arraigned before Recorder David Campbell in the Dunellen court last night. Harry Wilson, of Plainfield, a bricklayer, had disturbed the peace of the borough. He explained to the judge that he had been to Newark, and returning by the trolley had passed Plainfield without knowing it. He had not intended visiting Dunellen and would leave immediately, never to return if let off. He was given a suspended sentence.

Another man, Andrew McCutchen, a track walker, was arrested by Marshal Sliney, while pushing people off the sidewalks and trying in other ways to start a fight. There was not much fight in him when the firewater had cooled and he was compelled to pay a two dollar fine.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD IS VISITED BY BURGLARS

Effecting an entrance through the front door which was pried open with a chisel, burglars made a good haul of booty at William Rielly's general store in South Plainfield, sometime during last night. The goods taken comprised clothing, overalls, groceries, confectionery, tobacco, cigars, cigarettes and other articles valued in all at about $100.

The discovery of the robbery was not made until this morning, when Mr. Rielly went to open up. He found everything about the place disturbed showing that the burglars had generally ransacked everything The authorities have been notified, but thus far there is no clue.

Mr. Rielly was recently left a considerable sum of money and a farm at South Plainfield by a relative and for sometime has been endeavoring to sell his busines.s

SMITH AGAIN CHAIRMAN

Register of Deeds Re-elected to Guide Destinies of G.O P. in Union County.

CALVERT THE VICE CHAIRMAN.

Arrangements Are Made For Trip to Washington for the Taft Inauguration Ceremonies.

Officers were elected and there was a discussion of plans for the trip to the inaugural ceremonies at Washington in March, at the annual meeting of the Union County Republican Committee last night. Aside from these there was practically no business. Frank H. Smith was re-elected chairman, without a dissenting vote, and the same was true of the rest of the officers, chosen as follows:

Vice-president, James C. Calvert, Elizabeth; marshal, James White, Elizabeth; secretary, James E. Warner, Cranford; treasurer, Durward S. Smith, Elizabeth.

The question of the Union county organization sending a big delegation to the iaugural ceremonies was thoroughly discussed. Arrangements have been completed for a special train for the trip. This will leave Elizabeth at 9 o'clock on the night of March 3, stopping at Plainfield and such intermediate points as may be necessary. The special fare for the round trip is $7.50 and tickets are now to be had. They will be exchanged for railroad tickets on the train at Republican headquarters, Dix building, Elizabeth, Tuesday night, March 2, at 8 o'clock.

The county Republicans while in Washington will be guests of United States Senator John Kean and James White, who is the chairman of the committee of arrangements, assures all who make the trip that nothing will be left undone toward making it one of the best ever. Tickets can be obtained from members of the committee.

TO FILL COUNCILMANIC VACANCY NEXT MONTH

Take it from me," murmured an office-holder this morning. "'Bob' McCready is going to succeed 'Bob' Hail; you're away off. Who's been feeding you the hot air?" The informant did not say how many votes Mr. McCready would have when the Common Council casts its ballot to fill the vacancy.

"Wilbur M. Alling is favored by Francis Montgomery and there will be others in his list when the time comes," suggested an ex-officeholder And so it goes. The Common Council, according to a friend of a friend of ours who says he has a friend on the inside, will fill the vacancy on Monday night, Feb. 1, at which time Mr. Hall will present his resignation.

It's zero weather so far as political advices go, but it is "one safe bet" to put your money on Sidney S. Schuyler for the job, as the mutual friend reported yesterday.

Entertained the Thimble Club.

Mrs. Edward O. Clark, of West Fourth street, entertained the Thimble Club at her home, yesterday afternoon. The club numbers twelve and the afternoon was spent in sewing, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Joseph C. Blimm, of East Third street, will entertain the club on Thursday, January 28.

The Misses Mary and Adelaide Marsh, of Westervelt avenue, gave a progressive euchre last night in honor of Miss Esther Sunal, of New York. Covers were laid for twelve. The prevailing colors were pink and white roses in the dining room. De Molli was the caterer.

THIEF STEALS SATCHEL WITH VALUABLE CONTENTS

Miss Virginia Lawrence, a chorus girl in "The American Idea" company, which played at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, reported to Patrolman Nolan shortly after 2 o'clock this morning that a brown leather satchel, which she left in the North Avenue station a short time before, had been stolen. She placed it on a seat, she said, while she walked over to North avenue to get some lunch, pending the arrival of the 2:49 train, and when she returned it was gone. According to her statement it contained articles which she valued at $200.

The officer made an investigation and learned that three men were in the station when Miss Lawrence put the satchel down. They were seen by Patrolman McDonald who had also noted the young woman place her property on the seat. He was able to give a good description of the trio and it is believed they may be reached.

Miss Lawrence made the cops sit up and take notice before she took her departure by telling them to notify District Attorney Jerome, of New York, if they found the satchel or located the thief.

CROWLEY NOT FROZEN; HE WAS ONLY DAZED

David Crowley, of West Fourth street, was found in a dazed and apparently half-frozen condition at an early hour this morning on the porch at Peter Briscoe's home on South Second street. Mr. Briscoe saw the man as he was leaving the house to go to his work as a brakeman on the New Jersey Central. He learned his name and also that he lived on West Fourth street, to which place he assisted him. Dr. A. K. Brennan was called and Mr. Crowley quickly responded to treatment. He will be all right in a day or two.

Mr. Crowley visited some friends at Dunellen last night for a celebration and he stayed so late that he missed the last trolley car. Being anxious to get back to Plainfield so that he could go to work at 7 o'clock he decided to walk. It was bitter cold and by the time he reached this city about six o'clock this mornnig, he was half perished. He walked through Grant avenue and mistook South Second street for West Fourth although he was only one number out of the way in the street address, his being 940, while the house where he stopped was 941.

Members of the family were alarmed over the continued absence of Crowley and they started out to find him. While they were searching, he was brought home and his condition was found not to be serious.

Met Inventor's Brother.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, and Mrs. George Fisher, of Park avenue, spent last month at St. Denis hotel, New York. While there they met Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeForest, the former brother of Dr. Lee DeForest, the inventor, who equipped twenty-six vessels in the Pacific fleet with wireless telephone apparatus and introduced it in the foreign navies. The brothers are working together. Their father was president of Talladiga College, preceding Dr. Andrews, who resigned last October on the seventy-fifth anniversary of his birthday.

Death of Miss M. A. Lunger.

Mrs. A. V. Lunger, of Watchung avenue, has returned from Sunnyside, Hunterdon county, where she attended the funeral service of her sister, Miss Mary A. Lunger, who died at that place on Sunday, January 3. With the exception of Mrs. Lunger, she was the last member of that family. She was a woman of exceptional Christian character and beloved by all who knew her, not only at Sunnyside, but throughout Hunterdon county. The burial was at Whitehouse.

Good Government Club to Disband.

STATE RESTS ITS CASE

Prosecution's Testimony in Farbman Trial Concluded at Noon Today.

DEFENSE NOW BEING HEARD.

Plainfield Police Chief One of the Principal Witnesses at this Morning's Session.

After the examination of sixteen witnesses, the state rested its case at noon today in the trial of Morris Farbman, proprietor of the Arlington hotel in North Plainfield, charged by the police of the borough with maintaining a disorderly house. The morning session was taken up mostly with the examination of Plainfield police officials who sought to prove that the character of certain women who frequented the place was "shady" and that their general record in the city is bad. This afternoon will be devoted to the defense and probably twenty more witnesses will be called.

Those who were on the stand this morning in behalf of the prosecution included Chief P. S. Kiely, Sergeant John Flynn and Patrolman Charles Flynn, of the Plainfield police force; Marshals Charles Keller and Lemuel Pope, of the North Plainfield force; Charles Cox and Theodore Apgar. Chief Kiely was on the stand for over an hour and Lawyer William DeMeza, for the defense, submitted him to a severe gruelling following his assertion that women who frequented the Arlington had bad reputations. As a result, those in the court room have a much clearer idea as to what gives a person a right to say peoples' character is not what it should be.

The state laid much stress on the charge, as contained in the indictment, that gambling was allowed in the hotel and the defendant lawyer also directed his batteries on this accusation with successful results. He forced the admission that the extent of the gambling was pool playing for checks, the latter being redeemable in merchandise. The prosecution presented several witnesses to assert that brawls in the hotel were frequent and that the neighborhood was disturbed by them. It is understood that the defense will produce adjoining residents to rebut these assertions.

Considerable amusement was caused in court during the examination of Charles Cox, of the borough, who was formerly a hackman and frequently drove men and women to the hotel late at night. A few weeks ago his wife preferred a non-support charge against him and he was committed in default of bail. When placed on the stand he was asked the usual question:

"Mr. Cox, where do you live?"

"I used to live in North Plainfield," Cox replied, with just the trace of a smile, "but at the present time my address is cell No. 5, Somerset county jail."

The judge was compelled to call for order at the laugh that was produced.

CO K IN REVIEW BEFORE GOVERNOR FORT TONIGHT

The members of Co. K, of this city, will take part in the review of the Second Regiment, National Guard, at Trenton, tonight, by Governor Fort. The local company will join the companies from Elizabeth on a special train which will reach this city about 7:30 o'clock. Major William B. Martin will be in command of companies C and I, of Elizabeth; K, of this city, and M, of Somerville. Previous to the review, the Governor and his staff will be the guests at a dinner to be given at the Hotel Windsor, by General Dennis F. Collins, commander of the Second Brigade.

Unless the quartermaster's department gets very busy, the soldier boys will still wear the uniforms of blue tonight and not the new olive drab, which has been adopted as the regulation, and which was to have been worn for the first time at the Governor's review. Why this delay in the distribution of the new uniforms no one seems to know and the soldier boys are much disappointed.

A Pleasant Surprise.

continues with unabated vigor. The aggregation of values and attractions selected for this week's price slashing would be impossible of enumeration in the space devoted to this ad.. but we wish to impress upon you that all odd lots, broken lines, and odd sizes of Fall and Winter Goods must be sold this month, as it is our unfailing policy to close out each season's stock regardless of cost, to be ready for the approaching season with a new, clean stock of fresh merchandise. Hence the great reduction.

Yes! We Give Trading Stamps!

We know its costs us money, we are not asleep to the fact, we know it costs money to advertise, and we know it costs money to deliver goods, all of which are legitimate expenses—yes, we do all these things and yet challenge any of our competitors who do not do these things, to undersell us, on account of not giving trading stamps.

Why we can do it! Because of the increased business it brings to the "White Store," with no more cost to our patrons than they pay for similar goods elsewhere, but in many instances the prices are lower here. This, coupled with the fact that all our efforts, energies and experience are united in catering to your welfare and in giving you values unapproached.

FLEET'S TRIP DESCRIBED

Frederick Palmer Tells of His Tour on Flagships of Admirals Evans and Sperry.

STAFF CORRESPONDENT'S TALE.

Praises the Commanding Officers and Shows Some Excellent Stereopticon Views.

The world around trip of the American fleet has excited so much popular interest from its inception until its execution that it was no matter of surprise when the illustrated lecture by Frederick Palmer on the subject, "With the Flagship of the Fleet," given yesterday afternoon, called forth a large audience. The lecture was given before the Monday Afternoon Club in the Hartridge School auditorium. Mr. Palmer accompanied the fleet in the capacity of correspondent, and the many stereopticon views, taken by himself, gave a very realistic idea of the unique journey.

The skill of Admiral Evans in the management of the sixteen battleships and accompanying cruisers called forth the lecturer's highest praise, comparing it with the ability of one who handles cavalry horses. Like praise was given also to his successor, Admiral Sperry, not a single accident occurring during the whole cruise. With the battleship Connecticut in the lead, Mr. Palmer described the eventful journey, the life on shipboard, where the officers are seen at their work, the entry of the fleet into different ports, the ceremonies of greeting exchanged with the nations which gave them a royal welcome, and the entertainments planned for the fleet in various countries. The pictures of the target practice, showing the rapidity of execution and certainty of aim were full of interest.

In comparing the battleship Connecticut with the Chicago built twenty years previously, Mr. Palmer said that twenty years hence battleships might be built as superior to the Connecticut as that is now in advance of the Chicago.

In conclusion the lecturer said our navy is honest, its men sound and the strong man armed is the safest way to ensure peace.

INTERESTING SESSION OF PLAINFIELD Y.W.C.A.

The Young Women's Christian Association rooms were crowded last night, the event being one of the most important of the year, the annual meeting, when was presented by the various officers the review of the work done during the year just ended. About 150 members of the association were present. In the hall was erected a speaker's platform, with seats arranged in the rooms opening therefrom.

Mrs. Frederick Mead, the president of the association, presided over the meeting. The reports of the committees showed a wonderful and steady growth of the association.

The report of the treasurer was most gratifying. With all outstanding bills paid, the association begins its new year with $500 in its treasury. Much of the praise for such a splendid showing is due to the work of the treasurer, Mrs. James R. Joy, who has been untiring in her efforts to make the association's business dealings worthy of its name. Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, as chairman of the finance committee, told of the money raised and of the conservative policy of the association in carefully planning its finance work. One of the best reports of the evening was that given by Miss Elsie Goddard, as chairman of the religious work department. Miss Goddard told of the splendid work that had been done by Miss Susan Hubbell, her predecessor. She also spoke of the good vesper services held during the year with an average attendance of 45, of the Bible classes that have played such an important part in the association life, of the $30 given to missionary purposes, and the "home missionary" work of the personal service committee in making calls and helping the younger girls. Mrs. John Grey Foster, as chairman of the house committee, spoke of the use that had been made of transient rooms and of the value of the library of 532 volumes which had been loaned 1,099 times during the year.

The report of the physical department was read by Mrs. William F Tallaferro, who spoke of the gymnasium classes under the direction of Miss Margaret Mosher, and of how much they are doing to develop the physical life of the hundred or more girls enrolled. The report also told of the doctors' lectures that are being given this winter, and of how much real benefit they are to the young women attending them. The exhibition in this department was announced for next Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

The educational committee, beside the splendid showing of the work on exhibition, was reported by Mrs. W. D. Murray. The English classes for foreign speaking girls, the French class, the cooking classes under Miss Mary Farrell, all show a marked improvement over the classes of last year, both in enthusiasm and enrollment. The dress-making classes, under Miss Isabel Scarborough; the millinery under Miss Edith Capron, and the embroidery, with Miss Amy Lough, are all doing splendid work. Mrs. Elliott T. Barrows, as chairman of the social committee, told how the social spirit is growing in the association. She spoke especally of the June supper given last spring. Mrs. David Titsworth gave a summary of the printing that had been done by the association, such as cards, folders, prospecti and year books. Miss Lillian Force, as chairman of the membership committee, told of the work of getting out renewal notices, and reported about 600 members at the present time. As chairman of the nominating committee, appointed from the association membership, Miss Ethel Titsworth proposed the following names for re-election to the board of managers. They were elected to serve until 1912: Mrs. Frederick Andrews, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Charles King, Mrs. Percy Stewart, Mrs. Henry De Forest, Miss Marion McCutcheon.

The report of the general secretary, Miss Amy Pryor Tapping, told of the walks and outings that were enjoyed by many girls last summer; of the Silver Bay conference that was attended by eleven delegates, and of the junior work in the association that will soon become a full-fledged department.

Mrs. Mead, the president, beautifully summed up the various reports by telling how grateful was the association membership at what had been accomplished and that the work for the coming year was to be conducted along the same lines with new developments continually. Mrs Mead introduced Miss Helen Alling Davis, the State secretary for city associations, who spoke most forcefully and enthusiastically about the meaning of the association movement. She told of the organzation of the association in London over fifty years ago by Sir George Williams, and how the work spread to this country, and was taken up first by the college associations; then as college girls had gone back to their homes, they had desired to carry the same privileges to city girls—and so the association began. She told some amusing incidents in connection with her own work as local secretary at Rochester, N. Y.; and of the new development of the Y. W. C. A., the work among the country girls who comprised 55 per cent. of the girlhood of the nation.

Miss Davis told what a dollar invested in the Y. W. C. A. for membership would mean: A part in everything that is being done by every association in the world, because the association can help young women you would like to help but have neither time or money to—for the association is not merely a building, nor a board of managers, but a group of women banded together to help other women." She said each member should be proud to say "Of which I am a part."

After Miss Davis had finished the members were given an opportunity to meet her and to view the splendid showing of the domestic arts department. In the dining-room were displayed the hats, made and trimmed by the millinery classes; also the practice bows, samples of ribbon flowers much admired, which are to be a part of next term's work. The pieces of embroidery were very creditable. In the dressmaking classroom was a showing of the hand and machine work done in the various dressmaking classes. The pupils may be proud of what has been accomplished; they may well be proud with the citizens of Plainfield that there has grown up in our midst such a worthy organization as the Young Women's Christian Association.

ACKERMAN'S NEW BILL

His Employers' Liability Measure Introduced in the State Senate.

IT IS A CONSERVATIVE ONE.

But One of Many Before the Legislature as Result of Last Night's Session.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman introduced an employers' liability bill in the State Senate, at Trenton, last night. Senator Osborne, of Essex, also introduced one. Mr. Osborne's is the broad measure indorsed by labor organizations, and has the backing of Democrats. Mr. Ackerman's is more conservative.

Senator Ackerman's bill is similar to that of Osborne's, regulating the employer's liability for injuries to his men caused by defective tools or machinery in the absence of contributory negligence. His bill follows:

"1. Where, after this act takes effect, personal injury or death results to an employee who is himself in the exercise of reasonable care at the time:

"I. By reason of any defect in the condition of the place, ways, works, machinery, plant, tools or implements connected with or used in the business of the employer, which arose from or had not been discovered or remedied owing to the negligence of the employer or of any person in the service of the employer and entrusted by him with the duty of seeing that the place, ways, works, machinery, plant, tools or implements were in proper condition; or

"II. By reason of negligence of any person in the service of the employer entrusted with and at the time of the injury exercising superintendence, whose sole or principal duty is that of superintendence, or in the absence of such superintendent of any person acting as superintendent with the authority or consent of such employer; or

"III. By reason of the negligence of any person in the service of the employer who has the charge or control of any signal, switch, locomotive engine or train upon a railroad; the employee, or in case the injury results in death, the executor or administrator of a deceased employee who has left surviving a husband, wife or next of kin, shall have the same right of compensation and remedies against the employer as if the employee had not been an employee of nor in the service of the employer nor engaged in his work. The provisions of law relating to actions for causing death by negligence, so far as the same are consistent with this act, shall apply to an action brought by an executor or administrator of a deceased employee suing under the provisions of this act.

"2. No action against an employer for recovery of compensation for injury or death of an employee under this act shall be maintained unless notice of the time, place and cause of injury is given to the employer within one hundred and twenty (120) days and the action is commenced within one year after the occurrence of the accident causing the injury or death. The notice required by this section shall be in writing and signed by the person injured or by some one in his behalf, but if from physical or mental incapacity it is impossible for the person injured to give notice within the time provided in said section, he may give the same within ten (10) days after such incapacity is removed. In case of his death without having given such notice his executor or administrator may give such notice within sixty (60) days after his appointment, but no notice under the provisions of this section shall be deemed to be invalid or insufficient solely by reason of any inaccuracy in stating the time, place or cause of the injury if it be shown that there was no intention to mislead and that the party entitled to notice was not in fact misled thereby. The notice required by this section shall be served on the employer or if there is more than one employer, upon one of such employers, and may be served by delivering the same to or at the residence or place of business of the person on whom it is to be served. The notice may be served by post by registered letter addressed to the person on whom it is to be served at his last known place of residence or place of business, and if served by post shall be deemed to have bee nserved at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of the post. When the employer is a corporation, notice shall be served by delivering the same or by sending it by post by registered letter addressed to the office or principal place of business of such corporation.

"3. An employee by entering upon or continuing in the service of an employer shall be presumed to have assumed all risks necessarily incident to his occupation or employment. The necessary risks of the occupation or employment shall in all cases arising after this act takes effect be considered as including these risks, and those only, which are inherent in the nature of the business, and which remain after the employer has exercised due care in providing for the safety of his employees, and has complied with the laws affecting or regulating such business or occupation for the greater safety of such employees. In an action maintained for the recovery of damages for personal injuries to an employee received after this act takes effect owing to any cause for which the employer would otherwise be liable, the fact that the employee continued in the service of the employer in the same place and course of employment after the discovery by such employee, or after he had been informed of the danger of personal injury therefrom, shall not, as a matter of law, be considered as an assent by such employee to the existence or continuance of such risks of personal injury therefrom or as negligence contributing to such injury. The question whether the employee understood and assumed the risk of such injury, or was guilty of contributory negligence, by his continuance in the same place and course of employment with knowledge of the risk of injury shall be one of fact, subject to the usual powers of the court in a proper case to set aside a verdict rendered contrary to the evidence. An employee, or his legal representative, shall not be entitled under this act to any right of compensation or remedy against the employer in any case where such employee knew of the defect or negligence which caused the injury and failed, within a reasonable time, to give, or cause to be given, information thereof to the employer, or to some person superior to himself in the service of the employer who had instrusted to him some general superintendence, unless it shall appear on the trial that such defect or negligence was known to such employer or superior person, or could have been discovered by reasonable and proper care or inspection by such employer or superior person prior to such injury to the employee.

"4. An employer who shall have contributed to an insurance fund created and maintained for the mutual purpose of indemnifying an employee for personal injuries, for which compensation may be recovered under this act, or to any relief society, or benefit fund, may prove in mitigation of damages recoverable by an employee under this act such proportion of the pecuniary benefit, which has been received by such employee from such fund or society on account of such contribution of employer, as the contribution of such employer to such fund or society bears to the whole contribution thereto.

"5. Every existing right of action for negligence or to recover damages for injuries resulting in death is continued and nothing in this act contained shall be construed as limiting any such right or action, nor shall the failure to give the notice provided for in section two (2) of this act, be a bar to the maintenance of a suit upon any such existing right of action.

"6. This act shall take effect September 1, 1909.

ELIZABETH TROLLEY LINE TO PERTH AMBOY

The Traction Development Company has been incorporated at Trenton with a capital stock of $100,000, for the purpose of securing franchises, rights of way and engineering plans for the Elizabeth and Amboy Traction Company, a new trolley system to operate between the Court House in Elizabeth and Smith and State streets, Perth Amboy.

The route of the line is to be through the Standard Oil Works, near Elizabeth, the East Linden Development Company, crossing the Rahway river over the cantilever bridge of the Short Line Trolley Company; thence into Carteret, Chrome, Port Reading and Woodbridge to Perth Amboy, going into that city by way of Amboy avenue.

The incorporators are Richard F. Pettigrew, former United States Senator; Richard M. Montgomery, president of the East Linden Development Company; Dr. H. B. Hoagland W. J. Lansley, of the Hudson and Middlesex Telephone Company; C. A. Trimble, of Elizabeth, and Peter A. Peterson, of Perth Amboy, representing the organization syndicate.

The corporation will begin at once securing rights of way, consents, franchises and laying out engineering plans for construction. The actual work of building the line will begin within the next sixty days, probably at Linden, where the company has a private right of way of several miles. The road will be building there while the franchises are pending at Elizabeth, Roosevelt and elsewhere.

J. A. McClary, of Rahway, has charge of the rights of way and engineering plans of the company Percival E. Jones is general counsel for the company, with offices at 27 Pine street, New York. This project was started a year ago, when many of the rights of way were secured, but was suspended owing to the money panic.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Keiderling, of East Second street, are the parents of a baby daughter who came to tbeir home yesterday morning.

Miss Mary Matthews, of Hopewell, is spending a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Douglas, of West Fourth street.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Miss Kathleen Mathew in her famous dramatic recitals of the songs and stories of Ireland, illustrated by music and stereopticon views, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Louis Mann comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night for the first time here in Jules Eckert Goodman's eccentric comedy of "The Man Who Stood Still," one of the real New York city successes of the current season. In the title role of this play, Mr. Mann is said to have the very best opportunity in his fine and successful career as a star, in which capacity he has been seen in such hits as "The Girl from Paris," "The Telephone Girl," "The Girl from the Barracks," "All on Account of Eliza," "The Red Kloof," "Hoch the Consul," "Julie Bonbon," and "The White Hen," while he spent one season as chief comedian of the famous Weber and Fields Company. Mr. Mann, in "The Man Who Stood Still," appears as an old watchmaker of foreign birth to whom the hurry and bustle of American life seems needless. His ancestors for generations had taken their time, and he sees no reason why he should hurry and fuss. Making watches is to him a fine art—not a mere trade, and the fact that his successful business rivals, although dealing in an inferior line of goods, surpass him in prosperity, does not arouse his envy or his ambition. When his daughter, whom he has reared along the lines of the traditions which he reveres, elopes with the "sporty" son of his closest business opponent, the old man swears that she is no more than dead to him. In vain for years do his friends and well wishers seek to effect a reconciliation. To reconcile anything with anything is not in the nature of old John Krauss. He stands still in the matter of the domestic affections, as in all else. The ending, however, is one of brightness and cheer. Mr. Mann's company will be headed by Emily Ann Wollman, one of William A. Brady's discoveries in the way of pretty ingenues who can act; Mathilde Cottrelly, the best actress of comic women on the American stage, and Robert A. Fischer, so long the associate and co-star of the late James A. Herne in "Shore Acres." H. A. La Motte, Miss Lillian Sinnott, Leslie Bassett, John Charles, P. S. Barrett and Frank Julian are other principals; while that wonderful baby of "Madame Butterfly," little Corinne Malvern, plays the granddaughter, who at length melts the heart of "The Man Who Stood Still."

"Peggy Machree," the new romantic comedy with music, in which Joseph O'Mara, the Irish actor and singer, is appearing this season, will be given at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night under the auspices of Watchung Council, K. of C. The story of "Peggy Machree" has more coherence to it than is usually the case with Irish plays. Stated briefly, "Peggy Machree" is written around a mock marriage. A certain Lady Margaret O'Driscoll masquerades as a country colleen at Downkilty Fair. "Barry Trevor," a rollicking blade, flirts with her and finally they go through a mock marriage just for the sport of the "bhoys." After the wedding, to their consternation, they discover that a real and not a mock priest officiated. "Barry" takes the "Queen's Shilling" and goes off to the wars, while "Peggy" resumes her position as a county lady. Afterwards "Barry" returns, they are remarried and live happily ever after. Mr. O'Mara's managers, Joseph Brooks and A. W. Dingwall, have spared no expense or pains in providing him with a beautiful scenic production and an excellent cast.

Mrs. Samuel Hunt, of Muhlenberg place, is recovering from a severe attack of tonsilitis.

Edward Opie, of New York, has been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Horner at Neshanic.

1-3 to 1-2 Off.

We have just secured from one of the best makers in the business about $15,000.00 worth of high-class Brass Beds at prices which enable us to offer them to you at a saving from one-third to one-half. We shall not attempt a detailed description of each bed, as the lot, being a sample one, consists of only one of a kind. There are included, however, all of the latest and most exclusive ideas in both full size and twin beds, with plenty of handsome square post styles and plenty of satin finish beds. Every bed is a gem both as to style and quality, and we offer them to you at a saving of from one-third to one-half.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET
Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1908, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"And the voice I heard in the telephone?" He explained how firmly she had halted the conversation the time Archie would have reassured him. "You weren't there, of course?" said he.

"No, I was downstairs in the ladies' entrance of the court in the hotel; I had come in a little while before, having carried an advertisement to the paper; I wonder why she—maybe it was to communicate with them without risking a letter."

"I Should Like to Tell You—Dear," He Answered, "If You Will—"

"But how did your voice get into my 'phone?" he asked.

She looked puzzled only a second, then laughed as he had not heard her laugh in San Francisco—a natural, musical, merry peal, a girlish laugh that made his heart bound.

"Why, of course," said she, "it is so easy! There was a reporter who insisted on interviewing Mrs. Winter about her jewelry; and I was shooing him away. Somehow the wires must have crossed."

"Do you remember—this is very, very pretty, don't you think? Just like a puzzle falling into place. Do you remember coming here on the day Archie was returned?"

"I surely do; my head was swimming, for Mrs. Winter sent me and I began then to suspect. She told me Brother Cary was in danger; of course I wanted to do anything to help him; and I carried a note to him. I didn't go in, merely gave the note and saw him."

"I saw you."

"You? How?"

"Birdsall and I; we were here, in the patio; we, my dear Miss Janet, were the Danger! You had on a brown-checked silk dress and you were holding a wire clipper in your hand."

"Yes, sir. I saw it on the grass and picked it up."

She laughed a little; but directly her cheeks reddened. "What must you have thought of me!" she murmured under her breath; and bit the lip that would have quivered.

"I should like to tell you—dear," he answered, "if you will—O Lord, forgive young men for living! If they are not all coming back to ask me to sing! But, Janet, dear, let me say it in Spanish—yes, yes if you really won't be bored; throw me that mandolin."

Aunt Rebecca back in the armchair, faintly smiling, while the old, old words that thousands of lovers have thrilled with pain and hopes and dreams beyond their own power of speech and offered to their sweethearts, rose, winged by the eternal longing:

"Y si te mueve a lastima mi eterno padecer,
Como te amo, amame, bellissima mujer!
Como te amo, amame, bellissima mujer!

"And what does it mean in English, Bertie?" said Mrs. Melville. "Can't you translate it?"

"Shall I?" said the colonel, his voice was careless enough, but not so the eyes which looked up at Janet Smith.

"Not to-night, please," said she. "I—I think Mr. Keatcham is expecting me to read to him a little. Good night. Thank you, Col. Winter."

She was on her feet as she spoke; and Winter did not try to detain her; he had held her hand; and he had felt its shy pressure and caught a fleeting, frightened, very beautiful glance. His dark face paled with the intensity of his emotion. Janet moved away, quietly and lightly, with no break in her composure; but as she passed Mrs. Winter she bent and kissed her. And when Archie would have run after her a delicate jeweled hand was laid on his arm. "Not to-night, laddie; I want you to help me down the steps."

With her hand on the boy's shoulder she came up to Rupert, and inclined her handsome head in Janet's direction. "I think, by rights, that kiss belonged to you, mon enfant," said she.

GOVERNOR DISCUSSES STATE'S FINANCES

Governor Fort sent to the Legislature today a special message on the question of the State's finances in which he deals with the problem of the deficit confronting the State.

The Governor had a conference yesterday afternoon with the State Board of Education, and the State board, as a result of the conference, adopted a resolution acceding to the proposition that that portion of the main-stem railroad taxes now devoted to State purposes be increased to the extent of $500,000. This will mean that much less money will be distributed to the public schools.

It is understood there was considerable opposition to this resolution by the State Board of Education, and the adoption took place when it became apparent that there was no other way in which the State's revenues could be increased to meet the present conditions where the expenditures are yearly $700,000 more than the receipts.

CLERGY ENTITLED TO REDUCED RATES.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Railroads that are trying to "pay back" the government in its own coin because of the passage of the rate bill have received a sharp dig from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The roads determned to live up to the anti-pass provision of the law, interpreting it to the letter, and refusing to grant free or reduced rates to clergymen and persons engaged in charitable or eleemosynary work. Because of this severe ruling scores of complaints have poured in on the commission. Recognizing the motive behind the ruling, the commission makes sarcastic reference to the inhibition.

"The commission takes this occasion to state," the report made public yesterday says, "that the position taken by the transcontinental clergy bureau is far in advance of anything required by law or the rulings of the commission. Reasonably interpreted, the ruling to which reference is made by the transcontinental clergy bureau cannot possibly necessitate the drastic action which it has taken."

The commission holds that a clergyman is a clergyman even after he leaves the pulpit, provided he is engaged in another field of religious effort. It also points out that there is no reason why an "unduly narrow" interpretation of the law should be made in judging to whom special transportation favors may be extended. Hospitals and other institutions conducted for the public welfare, even though they charge for services, may be included in the favored class.

SECOND REG'T REVIEWED

More Than 5,000 Witness Military Event in Which Co. K. Participates.

GOVERNOR PRESENTS MEDALS.

Major Martin A Member of Team Receiving Columbia Trophy —Second Battalion Applauded.

The military social event of the year in the National Guard of the State was the official review of the Second Regiment in the Trenton armory, last night, by Governor J. Franklin Fort. Co. K, of this city, attached to this regiment showed up well in the drill and received many flattering comments. In addition to the drill, Governor Fort presented various medals and trophies, won by members and teams from the regiment. More than five thousand persons were present to witness the drill.

Co. K joined Companies C and I, of Elizabeth, and M, of Somerville, in making the special trip to Trenton, under the command of Major W. B. Martin. Prior to the review, General Dennis F. Collins gave a dinner in honor of the Governor and his staff at the Hotel Windsor.

After the review, Governor Fort made the presentations, and this was followed by a regimental parade. The affair closed with an informal dance, and the spacious drill shed was covered with hundreds of merry dancers, who glided to the tuneful music of Winkler's Second Regiment band.

Governor Fort personally presented the medals for long and faithful service in the guard, making a few appropriate remarks to the recipients. The shields and other trophies were presented to the successful contestants by InspectorGeneral of Rifle Practice Bird W. Spencer, who also complimented the winners for their success. A luncheon was served in the squad room while the dancing was in progress. It was the first official review made by Governor Fort, with the exception of the one at the Sea Girt encampment last summer, and in his honor, and because of this fact, the event was of unusual brilliancy.

Major W. B. Martin is a member of the team receiving the Columbia trophy. Captain W. Kempton Browning, formerly of this city, was among the battalion officers assisting the majors in the drill. It is considered doubtful whether the guardsmen ever showed to better advantage than last night. The close order drill was gone through and the men executed the various manoeuvres with a precision that elicited commendation on all sides.

The Second battalion, in which is Co. K, of this city, followed the Trenton battalion, and received frequent applause for its fine work, showing complete mastery of the tactics. The local soldier boys arrived home at 1.30 o'clock this morning. Practically the full company, fifty-eight members, took part in the drill and parade.

BOROUGH COPS BUSY ROUNDING UP DRUNKS

An argument between two drunken men as to which should take the other home, caused both to be landed in the borough jail, from which they were released this morning, having been incarcerated since Saturday night. They were Michael Reddington, thirty-five a hod carrier, and Joseph Donnelly, thirty-six, a driver.

Marshal Kiernan saw them on upper Somerset street about 11:30, pulling each other from one side of the street to the other, and saying over and over: "C'mon, Mike, y'ur drunk—I'll sho'th'way." "G'long, y'ur drunk y'urself, omtakin'you home. Jo, y'urallrightbuty'urdrunk." "Yu lie, y'ur drunkesht." The marshal headed them towards the station, but found it difficult going and signalled for assistance, Marshal Pope coming to his aid. At the hearing Recorder Dolliver fined them $2 or two days. They preferred to board it out, which they did, ending the job this morning.

George Jacobson also was arrested at Somerset and Greenbrook road, where he was found in a dopey condition by Marshal Pope. He said he was a blacksmith fifty-two years old, and that this was the first time he had been arrested. He was given a suspended sentence.

Joseph Doyle, was found helplessly drunk yesterday morning lying in the snow on Somerset street, barely across the line in the borough. He had a dinner pail with him and had started for work when he felt the need of fuel to start the inner fires. Marshal Kiernan gathered him in, and as it was not his first offience Recorder Dolliver fined him $2 or two days this morning. Doyle decided to take the days. He had the money but didn't like to part with it. The man has a wife and several children. The recorder told him he would give him a heavy sentence, if he appeared before him again.

NEW JERSEY TEACHERS TO MEET AT TRENTON

The mid-winter meeting of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association to take place in the auditorium of the State schools at Trenton, January 23, will be attended by representatives of the Plainfield and North Plainfield schools. There will be two sessions, morning and afternoon.

The morning session will include a trip of inspection either to the plant of the John A. Roebling's Sons' company wire mills or to the Cook potteries. Following the assembling at the State schools at 10:30 a. m. the members will decide upon which plant shall be visited. Luncheon will be served at the State schools at 12:30.

The afternoon session will include an address of welcome by Dr. James M. Green, principal of the State schools, and a discussion of the New Biological Syllabus for High Schools, led by G. H. Trafton, of the Passaic High School, and Dr. R. G. Leavitt, of the State Normal School.

"Industrial Education" will be the subject of an address by William Wiener, of the Newark High School, and a discussion of "Labratory Aims and Methods" will be led by Dr. W. N. Mumper, of the State schools faculty.

Frozen Feet Yarn.

According to a story in the Newark morning paper, a Mrs. Harper, of this city, had both of her feet frozen while a passenger on a main line trolley car from Plainfield to Elizabeth. She was said to have received treatment in an Elizabeth drug store. It was also reported that she has threatened to bring suit against the P. S. C. Inquiry at the office of Superintendent Gettings, today, failed to bring confirmation of the story. He declared that he had not heard of the matter, adding that no report of such a happening had been made to him or to his office. George Luhr, the local superintendent, also stated that he had heard nothing of the alleged incident.

Woman Drunk Let Off.

Mrs. Annie Woodruff, forty years of age, who was arrested in the borough Saturday night for being drunk and disorderly, was given a suspended sentence by Recorder Dolliver. Her offense had been in shouting to two men across the street, neither of whom knew her. Marshall Kella testified that he had tried to persuade the woman to go home, but received a torrent of abusive language and was obliged to take her to a cell, before she could be silenced. She gave a number on Grove street as her home and said her husband was a mechanic. The clothing she wore was of fine texture.

GIVES PARENTS ADVICE

S. St. John McCutchen Speaks at Largely Attended Meeting in Borough School.

EXPLAINS SCHOOLS' REVENUE.

Points Out to Parents Their Responsibilities—Dr. Krebs Also Gives a Talk.

The parents' meeting in the Somerset school last night was the best attended and most enthusiastic of the kind ever held in the school. The entire assembly room was filled when Samuel St. John McCutchen began to speak at 8:15. Mr. McCutchen called attention to the largeness of public school work in New Jersey, involving as it does 300,000 children and an expenditure of $12,000,000 per year. During the past six years the amount spent on the public schools of this State has been nearly doubled.

Three years ago, Mr. McCutchen said, an increased railroad tax was levied by the State. In all probability the bills for the purpose would have failed of passage through the Legislature but for the proviso that the whole resulting tax should be devoted to the support of the public schools.

At present the State finds itself in financial difficulties, and the Governor will recommend to the Legislature that about $900,000 of the $2,200,000 railroad tax be diverted from the schools into the general fund of the State.

Turning to another line of thought Mr. McCutchen stated that the responsibility of parents was not ended when the child was turned over to even a first class teacher. Much in the way of encouragement and co-operation should be given to the child in his home study. Even if parents are unable to solve the problems with which the child is struggling, their attitude of interest and sympathy will be most helpful and stimulating to the child.

Supervising Principal Krebs also made a few remarks, after which the time was passed in conference between teachers and parents. Refreshments were served.

Casselberry as pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, were dissolved yesterday at a stated meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery, held in the Greystone Presbyterian church, Elizabethport. His successor at the latter church has not yet been chosen. Mr. Casselberry assumes his new charge February 1.

The Presbytery also recognized the relations of Rev. Mr. Dare, formerly of New York State, as pastor of the Presbyterian church at Lower Valley and Cokesbury. Aside from the above business the routine order was followed. Rev. Dr. W. F. Whittaker, of Elizabeth, presided as moderator, and those present from this city included Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Rev. L. R. Howard and Rev. F. D. Tildon.

SUM UP FARBMAN CASE

Defense Called Witnesses to Disprove That Hotel Was Disorderly Resort.

THE WOMEN GIVE TESTIMONY.

The Accused Proprietor Not Put on the Stand—Verdict Likely to Be Rendered this Afternoon.

The taking of testimony in the Farbman disorderly house case came to a close shortly before noon today at Somerville, when the last witness was put on by William G. DeMeza, counsel for the accused. It was announced that there would be no further rebuttal and Judge Schenck announced adjournment until 1:30 this afternoon when the summing up commenced. The probabilities are the case will go to the jury about 3 o'clock.

The defense devoted yesterday afternoon's session to disproving the testimony of the two detectives, Fred Bowers and William Blazier, who had been engaged to get evidence against the Arlington hotel proprietor. They asserted that they had gone to the place with women and also that what took place there was sufficient grounds for the disorderly house charge.

Mrs. Bertram Sherman, who is generally referred to as "Gertie" Coddington, and Mrs. Eva Sparks, were mentioned as the women they had taken to the hotel and Lawyer DeMeza placed the former on the stand in rebuttal. Mrs. Sherman said that she had gone to the Arlington with the men but that nothing improper had taken place. Mrs. Sparks was subpoenaed but when her name was called she was not in court. It was stated that although she is under bonds her whereabouts are unknown.

Mrs. Fanny Jentrowitz, of Philadelphia, a middle-aged woman of attractive appearance, was called by the defense and asserted that she and her husband and children were living at the hotel on the night it was raided. She stated that they had been there for a month but that the police ignored their explanations and locked the husband up until late the next afternoon. Her story was given to show that the hotel was conducted in a legitimate manner and that the officers had acted hastily in their descent.

Another witness for the defense was Mrs. Gertrude Goodwin, who was alleged to have been at the hotel with the detectives. She stated that she had met the men and conversed with them but that she had never accompanied them to the Arlington. They had gotten her mixed with Gertrude Sherman, she said, and that the statements made with reference to her were absolutely false.

Farbman was not placed on the stand, enither was Mayor Samuel Townsend, who had been subpoenaed by the defense and who has been in attendance since the trial began. It is expected that the lawyers on both sides will make strong addresses in the summing up.

FOURTH NIBLO TALK AT THEATRE TONIGHT.

At the New Plainfield theatre tonight, the American humorist-tourist, Fred Niblo, will present "Russia, from the Black Sea to Siberia," the fourth of his delightfully entertaining series of zig-zag journeys around the world. Those who have had the pleasure of accompanying Mr. Niblo on his personally conducted pictorial pilgrimages during the past few weeks, will welcome the announcement that Russia is considered by Mr. Niblo to be the most intensely interesting travel-talk in the entire series, offering as it does, the strongest appeal in a pictorial way, as well as in the subject matter accompanying the illustrated features.

There will be hundreds of colored views, absolutely original flashlight, snapshot and panoramic photographs, liberally interspersed with rare motion pictures, showing Russia as it is today, from one end to the other, embracing many hitherto prohibited and absolutely unattainable subjects. All the pictorial features incident to this travel-talk represent the personal work of Mr. Niblo; taken at great expense and in constant risk of personal safety during a lengthy sojourn of many months within the domain of the Czar.

In the City Court.

Thomas Waldron, colored, was arrested at Neshanic by Detective-Sergeant Flynn, last night, charged by his wife with non-support. He was arraigned in the city court, this morning but his case was adjourned until tomorrow. George Capers, colored, of Bound Brook, arrested last night by Patrolman McGinley, as a suspicious person, gave a satisfactory explanation to Judge Runyon and was discharged.

One Hundred and Fifty Real Estate Dealers Attend the Annual Meeting at Jersey City.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey-New York Real Estate Exchange, held in Jersey City yesterday afternoon, was addressed by William G. McAdoo, president of the Hudson-Manhattan Railway Company, and men well-known in real estate circles in New York and northern New Jersey. Nearly 150 members were in attendance.

These officers were chosen: Otto Kemper, of New York, president, re-elected; W. A. Lambert, of Nutley, first vice-president; William Jeffrey, of Plainfield, second vice-president; W. R. Squire, of Ridgefield Park, third vice-president; Frank Stevens, of Jersey City, treasurer, and George J. Bayles, of Orange, who has been acting secretary, was elected secretary. Mr. Jeffrey was also chosen a member of the board of governors.

The afternoon sesion was followed by a banquet at McNulty's hall.

President McAdoo, of the Hudson-Manhattan Railway Company, said his compensation in the line of his welcome as a speaker amply repaid him for crossing the North river by the "present obsolete methods."

The Hudson river, he said, has grown narower, until it was now practically only about 150 feet between the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal and New York, and soon this gap would be closed up and land communication would soon be established between this city and the Manhattan skyscrapers.

H. M. Wooters, of New York; William H. Corbin, president of the New Jersey Title Guarantee and Trust Company; F. J. Beyer, of Newark; Judge Robert Carey, of the Hudson County Court of Common Pleas; J. L. Glazer, of the Publicity Bureau, and Vice-President William A. Lambert also spoke.

BANQUET AND FUN AT SAENGERBUND HALL

Something more than cold weather would be necessary to keep the members of Gesang and Turn Verein away from Saengerbund hall when a jolly time is scheduled. Last night's gathering proved to be one of the gayest the society has held this season. There was an unusually large attendance and everybody enjoyed a fine time. Early in the evening these newly elected officers were installed: President, S. H. Schleif; vice-president, Frank Jellig; treasurer, B. A. Paroubek; financial secretary, Aug. Wolfe; recording secretary, Walter Koppie. Speeches were made by former presidents John Retzer and Charles Dresselt, and by Herman Klinsman and Carl Felber, all of whom were heartily cheered.

There was a variety of entertainment, which included dancing, bowlign and other games. One of the most enjoyable features of the evening was the supper, which was provided by a committee composed of Mrs. Mathias Menzenbach, Mrs. Antone Stanzenberg, Mrs. John Retzer, Mrs. B. A. Paroubek, Mrs. Alfred Luthman and Mrs. Charles Meyers.

THE DAILY PRESS CARRIERS ENJOY ANNUAL STRAW-RIDE.

The Daily Press carriers to the number of nineteen, accompanied by four guests, enjoyed a fine straw-ride, last night, the outing being arranged by the proprietor of the paper. The boys gathered at the office at 8 o'clock, where they jumped aboard one of Conover's big box sleighs for the trip. Westfield was the destination and when that place was reached, the lads were generously supplied with refreshments.

It was about 11:30 o'clock when the boys returned home, all thoroughly delighted with the sleigh-ride. It is needless to say that the boys had no trouble in making their own fun throughout the trip. The minor details of the affair were in charge of "Hub" Reynolds, dean of the newsies.

Mrs. Sarah Caldwell.

Mrs. Sarah Caldwell, colored, died yesterday morning at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Philips, on West Fourth street. She is survived by two children, four sisters and father and mother. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from Shiloh Baptist church.

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION BANQUET BIGGEST AND MOST SUCCESSFUL EVER HELD HERE

Three Hundred Enthusiastic and Representative Men Listen to Happy Speeches, Enjoy a Fine Menu and Have a Merry Time Generally at First Annual Feast.

FORMER MAYOR SAUNDERS MAKES A CAPITAL TOASTMASTER

Marcus M. Marks Scores a Hit as Chief Speaker—Peter Daly, Father Bogan, Rev. G. A. Warner, J. E. Martine and Charles J. Fisk Keep the Crowd in Good Humor.

Though organized a little less than a year ago, the Plainfield Merchants' Association fully demonstrated it is a wide-awake and healthy youngster, last night, by conducting what was undoubtedly the largest and most successful banquet ever held in the city. It took place in the Hartridge auditorium, formerly the Casino, and was attended by a few short of 300 representative business men, city officials and invited guests from out-of-town. Every walk of life and every line of mercantile trade was apparent in the assemblage and the variance of interests and professions was a subject for comment on the part of speakers.

The guests were seated at individual tables, eight to each one, arranged about the main floor while the speakers and guests of honor were grouped on the stage. American flags formed the greater part of the decorations but a mass of palms and plants in one corner added greatly to the effect and partially screened Suhr's Imperial orchestra from view. The musicians rendered a program of popular airs during the evening and toward the close gave the accompaniment to numerous familiar songs in which City Judge William N. Runyon acted as chief vocalist. The souvenir menu cards and the novel song cards prepared by David J. Carney were favorably commented upon.

Mr. Saunders Toastmaster.

A. E. Force, who is the president of the Merchants' Association, acted as master of ceremonies, while former Mayor William L. Saunders was toastmaster. Those at the speakers' table were Marcus M. Marks, president of the New York Civic Federation, who gave the principal address; Peter Francis Daly, surrogate of Middlesex county; Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, Rev. George A. Warner, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Mayor Samuel Townsend, Judge William Newcorn, City Judge William N. Runyon and James E. Martine.

Mr. Mark's Speech.

With the completion of the dinner, served by DeMolli, order was called by President Force, who introduced Mr. Saunders as the toastmaster. The latter prefaced his introductions by a witty address in which he declared the banquet to be the largest and most enthuiastic of the kind he had ever attended in Plainfield. It was a great tribute to the merchants, he added, from the fact that though they had been organized but a short time, they certainly knew their business and were most assuredly in touch with the people. He ended up by calling upon Mayor Charles J. Fisk and the latter voiced his sentiments in a pithy, three minute speech. Both men were frequently interrupted by rounds of applause and cheers.

The address of Mr. Marks, who is a retired clothier but a director in numerous enterprises and a man noted for his efforts in behalf of municipal improvement, was on the subject "Get Together." At the outset he demonstrated that he is in touch with Plainfield and its politcians by telling a couple of stories at the expense of several "leaders." They brought a big laugh. Continuing Mr. Marks declared that where there are two elements in the residential life of a city such as Plainfield, the business men and commuters, co-operation is necessary for the development of the community, for what is the gain of each is the gain of all. He declared Plainfield to be a beautiful city and that it has more handsome homes on the average of any place he had ever visited; that there are so many of them that it will be necessary for the dwellers and their neighbors to look outward for expansion.

"There are many things that you can all do to develop the city," Mr. Marks continued; "first, there is the profit to be derived from co-operation. By the new system of arithmetic, one plus one equals three and just so when two men get together they have the power of three through an exchange of ideas. Each gives the other the value of his experience and thus is one step taken forward in the march of progress.

Favors Shorter Hours.

"And right here," said the speaker, "let me say a word in favor of shorter hours in the stores. When I was in business in Passaic many years ago, we used to open up at day-break and hang up the shutters anywhere between ten and twelve o'clock at night. We were always on the job if a customer was in sight. But we can't stand such long hours nowadays because of the increased excitement in business—the telephone, the telegraph and the ever-increasing competition. If we agree upon a shorter day it can easily be accomplished and no one will be the loser."

"We are not living today to do business but doing business to live. We should close as early as the trade permits and suspend business on every holiday. But at the same time, the stores should be kept well lighted in front and according to information given me, Plainfield should have arc lights on its business streets. The trolley cars as a rule always run through the lighted streets and there is nothing like illumination to draw outside trade toward the merchants."

The Merchant's Duty.

Continuing on Mr. Marks said that the business men owe a service to the city and it is a part of their duty to assist the mayor in his municipal undertakings. The public business should be their business, and by hearty co-operation all share alike in the development of the community. Mr. Marks also asserted his belief that every man who has a competence should retire from business and make room for some one else. There is nothing to the continual running around like a squirrel in a cage, he said, and if retirement isn't made early it is never done. He also declared that business men should take two vacations a year, one in summer and one in winter, a policy that he and his brother laid down when they were in partnership and which they strictly observed.

"The man who can't leave his business," he said, "hasn't got the right sort of head clerk. He should have his affairs arranged so that he can get away at any time and he should also incorporate his business after he has succeeded in order to give his clerks a chance. By all means retire when you have attained a competence and instead of worrying about your children, enjoy life and let them do a little hustling the same as you did."

In conclusion Mr. Marks expressed the belief that from the auspicious beginning of the Merchants' Association it would eventually become a great force in the city. He advised the members to "get together" once a month, not on a large scale, but just to get acquainted and rub off the sharp edges of competition. He was enthusiastically applauded before resuming his seat.

Others Respond.

Mr. Marks was followed by Peter F. Daly, of New Brunswick, who gave a general talk on the progressiveness of Americans and the activity characteristic of the merchants of Plainfield and elsewhere. He spoke in complimentary terms of the city as a whole and referring directly, to the merchants asserted that their business life should be governed by the ten commandments of God, but that co-operation and thoroughness should not be overlooked. He was followed by Rev. Father Bogan, of St. Mary's church, who spoke on American citizenship, and Rev. George A. Warner, of the Church of the Holy Cross, the latter making a "decided hit" with one or two quips at the expense of the guests and by calling attention to the need of proper expansion to meet the growth that is sure to come this way through improved transit facilities to the metropolis.

Martine the Climax.

The last speaker was James E. Martine, the "Farmer Orator," and continues with unabated vigor. The aggregation of values and attractions selected for this week's price slashing would be impossible of enumeration in the space devoted to this ad., but we wish to impress upon you that all odd lots, broken lines, and odd sizes of Fall and Winter Goods must be sold this month, as it is our unfailing policy to close out each season's stock regardless of cost, to be ready for the approaching season with a new, clean stock of fresh merchandise. Hence the great reduction.

Yes! We Give Trading Stamps!

We know its costs us money, we are not asleep to the fact, we know it costs money to advertise, and we know it costs money to deliver goods, all of which are legitimate expenses—yes, we do all these things and yet challenge any of our competitors who do not do these things, to undersell us, on account of not giving trading stamps.

Why we can do it! Because of the increased business it brings to the "White Store," with no more cost to our patrons than they pay for similar goods elsewhere, but in many instances the prices are lower here. This, coupled with the fact that all our efforts, energies and experience are united in catering to your welfare and in giving you values unapproached.

We want your custom, your confidence, your co-operaiion, and assure you of our intention of meriting all by making the "White Store" a magnet for value-giving, and conspicuous as Plainfield's Shopping Centre.

Nearly $6,000 Worth of Books

Saved From the Harper Bros. Fire
To Be Sold at One-Fourth Publishers' Prices.
The Biggest Book Event in Years.

In the adjustment of the fire losses in the Harper Bros. fire the insurance companies made a generous allowance for these damaged books. Thus we were enabled to buy them at a price that merely covered the salvage, and we are going to sell them at just about one-fourth their value.

Books published at 50c are to be priced at 12½c and 15c.
Books published at $1 will be sold at 25c.
Books published at $1.50 will be sold at 35c and 40c.
Books published at $2 will go at 50c.

There will be slight variations in the pricings. Those most damaged go for much less than the better ones, but all at prices that will make them rich finds for book lovers.

It is worth while to know that there are some full sets in this lot.

Many are Sumptuous Volumes, beautifully bound and splendidly illustrated; others are bound in standard styles familiar to readers of modern fiction. There are many children's books, large and small, lavishly illustrated by noted artists.

The Books have been damaged by water, but in many cases scarcely any trace of soil is apparent; some of the covers are merely spotted; in others there are slightly water marked pages; in almost any case they are no worse, perhaps, than many books in your library at the present time which have been freely handled; and when you see at what ridiculously little prices you can buy them you will readily overlook the damage done by the water.

To give you an idea of the wide field of literature covered by the books in this sale of the Harper Bros.' damaged stock, we quote a few of the titles picked out at random from the piles and piles of books that will be offered.

MERCHANTS' BANQUET

no sooner had his name been announced than he was cheered to the echo. Every man in the room jumped to his feet, and it was almost a minute before "Jim" could be heard. When quiet was finally restored he soon had everybody laughing with his good-natured jesting at the expense of Mayor Fisk and Mr. Saunders, and then launched into one of those vociferous addresses that have earned him his sobriquet. A second demonstration followed when he ended his talk by reciting Thomas Moores poem, "Good Fellowship."

The committee in charge of the banquet comprised M. C. Van Arsdale, Frederick A. Duttenhofer, T. J. Shirley, Herman Schwed and Robert H. Bernard. The officers of the Merchants' Association are A. E. PAPERS ON MISSIONARY WORK WITH EMIGRANTS

Interesting papers on two classes of emigrants were presented at the meeting of the Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held in the lecture room yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Reuben Knox read the paper on the Russians, saying that these emigrants on their arrival in this country need to learn the first lessons in Americanism, civil and religious liberty. Her account of the colonization of Baron Hersch was most interesting. She told of the death of his son a number of years ago, when the Baron said, "I have lost a son, but not an heir. Humanity is my heir." In 1891 the New York fund for the education of Jews was established by him and 5,000 acres of land was purchased in New Jersey where the colony of Woodbine was started. At the present time Mrs. Knox said the colony has 2,000 inhabitants of self-supporting, self-respecting Jews.

Miss Whitney presented the paper on the Scandinavians, telling of the rapid increase in emigration in recent years and claiming that they were the most desirable of all the emigrants that come to our shores. She said they had a passion for the possession of land, and the broad prairies of the West are very tempting to them. Citizenship, she said, was their first aim and they were always on the side of good government. She quoted Professor Steiner's declaration that they were clay in the hands of Americans and urged the support of the Home Missionary Society whose aim is to take Christ into the homes of the people.

Explains Arc Lights.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I desire to take exception to your article in last night's issue in reference to arc lights, wherein you seek to convey the impression that the merchants want these lights to light up their stores, which is a gross mis-representation of the facts. For a number of years the Board of Trade has been endeavoring to secure arc lights for the business section and numerous petitions were sent to the Common Council in favor of the same. Some two years ago Mr. Francis L. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee in the Council, took up the matter and has been doing his utmost ever since to bring the matter to a head. Shortly after the Merchants' Association was organized they took up the arc light question, appointed a committee who circulated a petition throughout the city and secured over four hundred signatures which knocks in the head your theory that the merchants want the lights to light up their stores. The Board of Trade has been spending a great deal of money advertising Plainfield and I take it that there is nothing that will make so good an impression on a stranger visiting this city than good lights and plenty of them. There is no town in the State that is as poorly lighted as Plainfield is and the merchants are entitled to every consideration in their efforts to improve conditions here and should be commended instead of as I take it condemned by you, when you make the assertion that they want the lights for a selfish purpose, namely, to light up their stores.

Very truly yours,
J. V. E. VANDERHOEF.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Louis Mann will bring to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, one of William A. Brady's three new ingenues of the present season. The manager who is able to "discover" or develop one new ingenue a year is regarded as a Columbus of his craft; but Mr. Brady has had a triplicate record in this regard since so recently as the beginning of the current stage year. The actress who comes here with Mr. Mann is Emily Ann Wellman, and she will be seen as the daughter, Marie Krauss, in his performance in the Plainfield theatre of "The Man Who Stood Still," in which Mr. Mann will act here for the first time. Mr. Brady's other two new ingenues are the Misses Ruth Shepley and Lola May, both of whom are now in the cast of "A Gentleman from Mississippi."

If the sweet melodies of the old sod appeal to you; if the bravery and romances of the Emerald Isle stir your blood; if the loves of sweet lassies and bonnie laddies with a story wholesome and sweet as the eventide songs of the colleens on their way from the fields, move your pulses, go to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night for you have a treat in store when Joseph O'Mara appears in the Irish comedy, "Peggy Machree." "Peggy Machree" is all that one wants in Irish comedy. It has a strain of romance, a pretty love story most deftly told, a most witching heroine, and as brave and handsome a lover as ever stepped out of the pages of fiction, and is interpolated with a number of Irish gems which are sung as only Joseph O'Mara can sing them. Mr. O'Mara is new to America but his rendering of the old songs, so dear to all sons and daughters of the "old sod," will no doubt linger long in the memories of those who hear him sing "The Wearin' of the Green" and other favorites. Mr. O'Mara is surrounded with an excellent cast of well known stage favorites and the scenic production is said to be magnificent.

Dr. and Mrs. P. B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, have returned from Scranton, Pa., where they went to attend the funeral service of Mrs. Cregar's brother, Nicholas Mathewson, who took his life last week. He was a brother of "Christy" Mathewson, the famous baseball pitcher, and a student at Lafayette College.

MUNCIPALITIES TO HONOR "ABE" LINCOLN.

City Clerk James F. Connelly, of Newark, draughted and engineered the first bill to go to final reading in this session of the Legislature. It was his measure to allow municipalities to appropriate sufficient funds properly to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln next month. The bill provides that cities of the first class may expend not more than $2,000, and if the second class not more than $1,000, for this purpose.

Assemblyman William P. Martin, in introducing it, asking that the bill be placed at once on second reading, said that he took the initiative because but three weeks intervened between the present time and the date of the anniversary. It is his intention to have the bill go to third reading tomorrow morning, which will allow it to be signed by the Governor next week.

Mr. Connelly was also instrumental in having the Governor sign a proclamation concerning the celebration of the centennial.

NEWARKERS FORCED TO GIVE UP WALKING FEAT.

Edward Von Kaenel and Joseph Miller, the two young men who started out from Newark Saturday night to walk to Philadelphia, gave up the trip upon arriving at New Brunswick Sunday, and returned home by train. They had walked all night in a blinding snow storm, and were pretty well exhausted on reaching New Brunswick.

The Newarkers had walked from Iselin with the snow blowing so hard that they could scarcely see the roadway. On reaching New Brunswick their shoes weighed seven pounds each, so covered were they with the snow.

Von Kaenel and Miller left Newark at 8 o'clock Saturday night, and reached New Brunswick at 2:15 o'clock Monday morning. The distance covered by the men was twenty-eight miles. From Rahway they made the trip through the rain, and their clothes were frozen stiff. They intend to try the feat again as soon as the roads are in fairly good condition.

WOMEN VICTIMS IDENTIFY FOOTPAD AT RAHWAY.

Axel Larsen, the footpad, who was caught and jailed by a Rahway policeman Saturday night after he had held up Miss Lizzie Bozung, of 47 Seminary avenue, of that place, has proved to be a valuable catch. Seven women from various towns south of Rahway appeared there yesterday, each of whom identified him. Some received articles he had stolen from them after holding them up.

From Mrs. Oscar Wilson, at Woodbridge, on December 12, he took $24 after taking an infant from her arms and throwing it to the ground. He also robbed Mrs. Huber of that town and Mrs. P. Brachen, of 164 Broad street, Perth Amboy, of cash and gold eye-glasses, and Miss Flanning, of Metuchen, a school teacher, of $12 and a key which Chief of Police Wright returned to her. He pleaded guilty to all yesterday and Judge A. B. Cook committed him to the county jail at Elizabeth for action by the grand jury.

HARD TIMES HIT STATE PRISON.

Supervisor Samuel W. Kirkbride, of the State prison, asserts that the financial depression of more than a year ago has raised the cost of the keep of prisoners to the State. Mr. Kirkbride says in his annual report that it cost New Jersey thirty-two cents a day last year, as against a fraction under twenty-eight cents a day for the preceding years.

The supervisor said that hard times had cost the State $15,000 in last year's labor contracts, and was reflected in the fact that it had cost the State a fraction more than four cents a day to keep its prisoners.

The report further shows that the year's expenditures were $250,475.67; receipts, $97,304.41; net cost of administration of institution, $153,271.26.

It cost the State $7,008.46 for electrocution expenses, a new item last year; the other principal items being food, $57,307.46; fuel, $18,702.74; light, $12,713.21.

During the year 730 inmates of the prison were employed, gaining for the State $87,820.07 from the contractors who employed them.

POLITICIANS ON HAND.

Legislature Adjourns to Meet Again This Morning.

Monday night's session of the Legislature attracted a big crowd to the State House at Trenton. Among those who were visitors was former Governor Franklin Murphy, of Newark, State Republican chairman; Secretary Edward W. Gray, of the State committee, and a great number of active partisans were seen in the corridors. The Republicans want but few laws passed this year and hope to make a record by keeping down State expenditures.

It was noticeable that House Majority Leader Lewis didn't introduce a bill. Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, majority leader in the Senate, is ill and was not in Trenton.

—Walter Randall is the chairman of a committee appointed by the employes of Roth & Co., who will give a dance at Saengerbund Hall on Thursday night, February 11.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of it in Plainfield but Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help.
Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed.
Not one so important to health.
The kidneys are the filters of the blood.
When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.
There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.
Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble.
It is the kidneys' cry fo rhelp. Heed it.
Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted.
Are just what overworked kidneys need.
They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.
Read the proof from a Plainfield citizen.

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Violent headaches and a constant pain in my limbs were the principal symptoms of my kidney trouble. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised I procured a box at Randolph's pharmacy and soon after I began taking them, the pains in my head and limbs disapepared. I heartily endorse this splendid preparation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

WESTFIELD COUNCIL WANTS P. S. C. INDICTED.

Because the Public Service Corporation has ignored the order of Council to remove its electric light poles from Grove street, the Council Monday night voted to refer the matter to the grand jury, which will be done this week.

This action was decided upon after the advice of Town Attorney Paul Oliver, who declared the corporation was plainly violating the law in maintaining a public nuisance. Some time ago a representative of the corporation appeared before Council and contended his client was acting under the conditions of a public franchise and the State law. The Grove street branch is needed to complete the corporation's system from Plainfield to Elizabeth.

Recently Council ordered the removal of bare poles already placed, but the corporation refused and later strung the wires and turned on the current. Last night Councilman Edward Floyd urged the councilmen to go to Grove street and cut down the poles. Oliver suggested legal complications would ensue, and he advised appealing to the grand jury.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company applied Monday night for permission to place forty-two poles. The committee on sidewalks said the privilege heretofore allowed by Council would be abused and the telephone company will modify its request.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Deknatel, of Belvidere avenue, and Mr. and Mrs B. O. Bowers, of Franklin place, were among the passengers on the Steamship Carmania, this week, for an extended trip abroad. They will not return until spring.

Miss Lizzie Baldwin, of Somerset street, accompanied by her nurse, Mrs. Ettie Evans, of this city, went to Trenton yesterday, where she was admitted as a patient in McKinley Hospital. She has been ill for several months. Mrs. Evans has returned to this city.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Casa Fuerte.

Winter would have said that he was too old a man to stay awake all night, when he had a normal temperature; yet he saw the stars come out and the stars fade on that fateful April night. He entered his room at the hour when midnight brushes the pale skirts of dawn and misguided cocks are vociferating their existence to an indifferent world. Before he came there had been a long council with Mercer and his aunt. Mercer, who had been successful in his mission, had barely seen his chief for a moment before a gentle but imperious nurse ordered him away. Winter caught a queer, abrupt laugh from the financier. The latter beckoned to him. "See you are as obedient as I am when your time comes," he chuckled; and he chuckled again when both the soldier and Miss Smith blushed over his awkward jocoseness. Yet, the next moment he extended his hand with his formal, other-generation courtesy and took Miss Janet's shapely, firm fingers in his own lean and nervous grasp. "Allow me to offer you both my sincere congratulations," began he, and halted, his eyes, which seemed so incurious but were so keen, traveling from the woman's confusion to the man's. "I beg your pardon; I understood—Archie who was here, gave me to understand—and I heard you singing; you will hardly believe it, but years ago I sang that to my wife."

"So far as I am concerned, it is settled," said the colonel steadily.

"We are all," Keatcham continued, no longer with any trace of embarrassment, as he touched the hand which he still held with his own other hand, "we are all, as you know, my dear young lady, in considerable personal peril; I regret that it should be on my account; but it really is not my fault; it is because I will not relax my pursuit of a great scoundrel who is dangerous to all decent people. But being in such danger, I think you will be glad afterward if you are generously frank, and give up something of the sex's prerogative to keep a lover on the anxious seat. Excuse me if—if I presume on my age and my privileges as a patient."

Janet lifted her sweet eyes and sent one glance as fleeting and light as the flash of a bird's wing. "I—I—reckon it is settled," murmured she; but immediately she was the nurse again. "Mr. Keatcham, you are staying awake much too late. Here is Colvin, who will see to anything you want. Good night."

It was then that Mr. Keatcham had taken the colonel's breath away by kissing Janet's hand; after which he shook hands with the colonel with a strange new cordiality, and watched them both go away together with a look on his gaunt face unlike any known to Colvin.

Only three minutes in the hall, with the moon through the arched window; and his arm about her and the fragrance of her loosened hair against his cheek and her voice stirring his heartstrings with an exquisite pang. Only time for the immemorial questions of love: "Are you sure, dear, it is really I?" and "When did you first—" To this last she had answered with her half-humorous, adorable little lilt of a laugh: "Oh, I reckon it was—a—little—all along, ever since I read about your saving that poor little Filipino boy, like Archie; the one who was your servant in Manila, and going hungry for him on the march and jumping into the rapids to save him—when you were lame, too—"

Here the colonel burst in with a groan: "Oh, that monstrous newspaper liar! The 'dear little Filipino boy' was a married man; and I didn't jump into the river to save him. It wasn't more than wading depth—I only swore at him for an idiot and told him to walk out when he tipped over his boat and was floundering about. And he did! He was the limit as a liar—"

To his relief, the most sensible as well as the most lovable woman in the world had burst into a delicious bit of laughter and returned: "Oh, well, you would have jumped in and saved him if the water had been deep; it wasn't your fault it was shallow!" And just at this point Mercer and Aunt Rebecca must needs come with a most unusual premonitory racket, and Janet had fled.

Afterward had come the council. All the coil had been unraveled. Birdsall appeared in person, as sleek, smiling and complacent over his blunders as ever. One of his first sentences was a declaration of trust in Miss Smith.

"I certainly went off at half-cock there," said he, amiably; "and just because she was so awful nice I felt obliged to suspect her; but I've got the real dog that killed the sheep this time; it's sure the real Red Wull!" It appeared that he had, of a verity, been usefully busy. He had secured the mechanic who had given Atkins a plan of the secret passages of Casa Fuerte. He had found the policeman who had arrested Tracy (he swore because he was going too fast) and the magistrate who had fined him; and not only that, he had captured the policeman, a genuine officer, not a criminal in disguise, who had been Atkins' instrument in kidnaping Archie. This man, whom Birdsall knew how to terrify completely, had confessed that it was purely by chance that Atkins had seen the boy, left outside in the motor car. Atkins, so he said, had pretended that the boy was a tool of some enemies of Keatcham's, whose secretary he was, trading, not for the only time, on his past position. In reality, Birdsall had come to believe Atkins knew that Keatcham was employing Mercer in his place.

"Why, he knew the old gentleman was just off quietly with Mr. Mercer and some friends; knew they were all friendly, just as well as you or me," declared Birdsall. He had seen Archie on the train, for, as the colonel remembered, he had been in the Winters' car on the night of the robbery. Somehow, also, Atkins had found out about Archie's disappearance from the hotel.

"I can't absolutely put my finger on his information," said Birdsall; "but I suspect Mrs. Melville Winter; I know she was talking to him, for one of my men saw her. The lady meant no harm, but she's one of the kind that is always slamming the detectives and being took in by the rascals."

He argued that Mrs. Winter and Miss Smith knew where the boy was; for some reason they had let him go and were pretending not to know where he was. "Ain't that so?" the detective appealed to Aunt Rebecca, who merely smiled, saying: "You're a wonder, Mr. Birdsall!" According to Birdsall's theory, Atkins was puzzled by Archie's part in the affair. But he believed could he find the boy's present hosts he would find Edwin Keatcham. It would not be the first time Keatcham had hidden himself, the better to spin his web for the trapping of his rivals. That Mercer was with his employer the ex-secretary had no manner of doubt, any more than he doubted that Mercer's scheme had been to oust him and to build his own fortunes on Atkins' ruin. He knew both Tracy and young Arnold very well by sight. When he couldn't frighten Archie into telling anything, probably he went back to his first plan of shadowing the Winter party at the Palace. He must have seen Tracy here. He penetrated his disguise. ("He's as sharp as the devil, I tell you, Colonel.") He either followed him himself or had him followed; and he heard about the telephone. ("Somebody harking in the next room, most likely.") Knowing Tracy's intimacy with Arnold, it was not hard for so clever and subtle a mind as Atkins' to jump to the conclusion and test it in the nearest telephone book. ("At least that is how I figure it out, Colonel.") Birdsall had traced the clever mechanic who was interrogated by the eastern gentleman about to build; this man had given the lavish and inquisitive easterner a plan of the secret passages—to use in his own future residence. Whether Atkins went alone or in company to the Casa Fuerte the detective could only surmise. He couldn't tell whether his object would be mere blackmail, or robbery of the cipher, or assassination. Perhaps he found the insensible man in the patio and was tempted by the grisly opportunity; victim and weapon both absolutely to his hand; for it was established that the dagger had been shown Tracy by Mercer as a curio, and left on the stone bench.

Perhaps he had not found the dagger, but had his own means to make an end of his enemy and his own terror. Birdsall believed that he had accomplices, or at least one accomplice, with him. He conceived that they had lain in ambush watching until they saw Kito go away. Then an entry had been made. "Most like," Birdsall concluded, "he jest flung that dagger away for you folks to find and suspect the domestics, say Kito, 'cause he was away." But this was not all that Birdsall had to report. He had traced Atkins to the haunts of certain unsavory Italians; he had struck the trail, in fine. To be sure, it ran underground and was lost in the brick-walled and slimy-timbered cellars of Chinatown which harbored every sin and crime known to civilization or to savagery. What matter? By grace of his aunt's powerful friend they could track the wolves even through those noisome burrows.

"Yes," sighed the colonel, stretching our his arms, with a resonant breath of relief, "we're out of the maze; all we have to do now is to keep from being killed. Which isn't such a plain proposition in 'Frisco as in Massachusetts! But I reckon we can tackle it! And then—then, my darling, I shall dare be happy!"

He found himself leaning on his windowsill and staring like a boy on the landscape, lost in the lovely hallucinations of moonlight. It was no scene that he knew, it was a vision of old Spain; and by and by from yonder turret the princess, with violets in her loosened hair and her soft cheek like satin and snow, would lean and look.

Y si te meuve a lastima mi eterno padecer,
Como te amo, amarge, bellissima mujer!

Robert Eick, of East Third street, who has been in the employ of Horace Sherwin, the shoe dealer, for a great many years, has resigned his position.

Mrs. C. B. Tyler and Mrs. W. L. Righter gave a bridge whist party for a number of friends at the Watchung Hunt Club, Monday afternoon. The game was followed by the serving of refreshments.

"The Right Hand Pocket."

An honest man, who collected a good deal of money for other people, used to keep all this money in his right hand pocket, to distinguish it from his own, which he kept in the left. It was a good plan. His accounts never got mixed.

Bowling and General Sports

BOWLING.

Wetumpka versus Woodmen in the Fraternal League tonight.

Wilson Gary equaled the high score record of the season on Tuesday night when he put up a score of 263 at Campbell's alleys. Not satisfied with this Gary then handed in totals of 201 and 258. Skelly was the victim.

The two man tourney which is to begin at Campbell's alleys early next month is arousing much interest among local bowlers. Chief Kiely and Judge Runyon who won the two man championship in a tourney held here two years ago, have again teamed up and will endeavor to repeat.

Watchung Council, K. of C., will roll a series in the Knights of Columbus League tourney tomorrow night at Campbell's alleys, having for its opponents the team from Hoboken Council of Hoboken. The Hoboken team is made up of some "classy" bowlers and the local team, who by the way, are leading the league with a clean string of victories, will have to put forth their best efforts to maintain its clean record.

The entry blanks of the National Bowling Association are being sent out. The percentage table shows 100 prizes in the five man event, ranging from $1,000 to $26.00. In the two man event the winning pair will take down $765 and the 250th, team, $11.40. The individual champion is figured to receive $425 and the man finishing 500th $8.85. These amounts are based on an aggregate prize list of $50,000.

He "Blew."

He posed before the alley,
A duck-ball in his hand;
And, swiftly gliding forward,
Sent it down to beat the band.

And lo! Destruction loosed her folds
Upon those duckpins white,
And nine went sailing upward,
Higher than a kite.

The mighty bowler glanced around.
And haughty was his air;
"Don't worry now, my friends, said he,
"I'll beat you with this spare."

He chose a ball quite new and smooth,
He sponged his hand and chalked;
He dampened his shoe so carefully,
And to the mark he walked.

He sighted long the little pin,
His arm swung to and fro,
He gave the ball a last fond look,
And then he let it go.

Oh! could you have seen those smiles,
Heard the laughs that upward flew,
As every man who watched him
Yelled: "He blew!".

BASKETBALL.

The Holy Cross club basketball team will meet the team from N. P. H. S. on the Holy Cross court tonight at 8 o'clock.

ALMOST A GOOSE EGG IN GAME WITH WESTFIELD.

The N. P. H. S. five had no difficulty in running up a large score on Westfield H. S. last night at Debele hall. The boys are not chesty over it however, as Westfield had had no practice in a match game and in fact had not been organized but a short time. The score was 58 to 3.

The lineup:

N. P. H. S.		Westfield.
	Forwards.
Conroy		Cheery, Keeler
Stein		Reese
	Centre.
T. Overton		Delatour
	Guards.
A. Overton		Irving
Stiner		Parker, Sisserson

Goals: Conroy 12, Stein 3, T. Overton 5, A. Overton 3, Stiner 3, Delatour 1. Fouls: Conroy 6, Cherry 1. Referee, G. E. Webster.

BASEBALL.

The Cleveland club has sold Dave Altizer to the White Sox.

The Clevelands have sold Pitcher Prueitt to the New Orleans club.

President Pulliam is in favor of there being a single trophy after this for world's series championships instead of individual trophies. "Players come and go, but the club remains," he said. Besides, the plan would do away with a lot of unseemly grumbling by the players over their trophies.

George Moreland, of Pittsburg, has got out his percentage book for 1909 and a very handy little volume it is. It contains percentages for a full 154 game schedule.

The New York American League club has a perfect claim to the services of Joe Ward, according to President Pulliam, which means Philadelphia has no claim except in imagination. Shettsline of the Phillies wanted Mr. Pulliam to reopen the case before the national commission, but Pulliam refused to do so, telling the Philadelphia claimant that he would have to get some other member of the commission to do so if the case was to be reopened at all.

The official call for the schedule meeting of the National League for February 16 has gone forth, the meeting to be held in Chicago.

Fred Buelow, who caught for the Detroit and Cleveland teams, has been signed by Jimmy Casey for the Montreal club.

"Mike's acting is a revelation," says the baseball dramatic critic of the Chicago Tribune. "He isn't merely there because he's there. He's present because he has business to be. Nerve is supposed to be the ball player's most necessary asset. No one who has seen Mike dance ever will accuse him of being 'yellow' in any walk of life. To see him get out there and do fancy steps when you know it's hurting him fills you simultaneously with admiration and pity for the young man." Later in the evening Chicago friends of Mike gave him a loving cup.

The Roston Nationals have asked for waivers on Jack Hannifan, the infielder.

"For instance," says the sapient Stagg of Chicago University, "the professionals have many tricks which are not considered good sportsmanship in college circles." Such as being able to hit the ball and use their gray matter on the bases.

George McBride has signed a Washington contract for next season.

Billy Murray has finally decided on Southern Pines, N. C., as the training camp for the Phillies. This is a noted golf centre, but it's all right so long as Sherwood Magee doesn't get into the habit of slicing his drives.

Johnny Evers can't play in the bachelor's team any more. The boss second baseman was married in Troy last week.

All schedule meetings of the National and American leagues will be held in Chicago hereafter. Garry Herrmann is said to be responsible for this retrograde movement.

The White Sox have "secured" a hard hitting outfielder in Flanagan of the Pacific Northwest League, according to report. With a rope or padlock?

When the National League race begins C. Webb Murphy and F. Leroy Chance will shelve their publicity promoting differences for another six months.

Preparatory Service Tonight.

Services preparatory to communion on Sunday morning, will be held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tonight at 8 o'clock. Rev. Many new attractions will be added and ample accommodation will be made for the convenience of the patrons. A new advertisement appears in this issue.

Scott-Truesdale Nuptials.

Among the ushers at the wedding yesterday of Miss Margaret S. Scott, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Francis M. Scott, and Joseph R. Truesdale at the Church of the Epiphany, New York, was Robert C. Brown, of Delacey avenue.

THEIR EDIFICE BEAUTIFUL

Description of Costly Improvements at Crescent Ave. Presbyterian Church.

TO BE REOPENED ON SUNDAY.

Expensive Pipe Organ—Ornate Pulpit—Quartered-Oak Stalls—English Exposed Trusses.

The entire interior of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church has undergone a complete renovation and decorative treatment; so much so, in fact, that there are a few traces of the old church still remaining, excepting the pews and the old gallery rail. It will be used for worship again for the first time in months on Sunday.

For several years the congregation has contemplated beautifying the edifice, and at different times suggestions for decorative schemes and alterations have been submitted to Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the minister, and members of the congregation by a number of well-known architects and decorators. It was, however, finally decided to hold a competition and several firms of architects were invited to submit plans.

The church decorating committee wisely engaged the services of Professor A. D. F. Hamlin, professor of architecture at Columbia University, to act with them in making the award and the firm of James E. Ware & Sons, of New York, was selected. Its plans have been executed almost exactly as originally contemplated.

Soon after the award had been made the family of Louis K. Hyde offered to present the church with a handsome new organ as a memorial to the late Charles L. Hyde. This beautiful gift was immediately accepted by the congregation and at once included in the decorative scheme, adding greatly to the richness and architectural treatment of the interior. The instrument as constructed by the celebrated organ builder, Ernest M. Skinner, of Boston, is divided into three parts. The great, the swell and the echo organ, and is one of the finest which has been turned out of his works.

Among the important features of the changes to the interior of the church is the introduction of old English exposed trusses with their tracery, carrying the lines of the interior up to the roof ridge. These trusses are entirely of chestnut, showing a handsome grain and have been stained an antique walnut color. Under the ends of each truss are dignified Norman columns. The pulpit niche has been raised in height and beautifully treated in Old Norman architecture executed in Caen stone. On the back wall of the niche is a handsome lacquered gold plaque framed with a rich ecclesiastical painted border. Upon the plaque is stenciled in glass mosaic the symbols Alpha and Omega, and a text from the New Testament.

Five new handsome Gothic pulpit stalls executed in black walnut fill the remainder of the niche directly under the plaque. The centre stall will be occupied by the minister of the church. The other four stalls will be occupied by the ministers of the Warren, Bethel and Hope chapels, and the missionary minister, Changteh, Hunan, China. Each stall bears a beautiful bronze inscription plate.

A complete new lighting scheme has been introduced, adding greatly to the beauty of the interior. From the ends of each truss hang cast bronze electroliers, made from original designs, and carrying out the combined Gothic and Romanesque intermingling of style. Around each fixture is placed eighteen amber tinted incandescent lights, producing a soft golden glow. The fixtures under the gallery and in the vestibules and staircases leading to the gallery are carried out in harmony with the large electroliers and the effect when illuminated is very churchly. All the side walls and gable ends of the church have been treated with glazed colors to represent old mediæval stone work. All the electroliers, organ pipes and plaque in pulpit niche have been finished in dull antique gold. The new windows, throughout the entire interior, have been executed in simple amber glass, producing an effect of warm sunlight within, on the grayest of winter days.

The woodwork, throughout, has been kept in harmony with the present black walnut pews and gallery. The church floor has been covered completely with fine quality quartered oak. Down the aisles will be carried strips of handsome Wilton carpet of a soft olive green color and the gallery will be covered entirely with carpet to correspond. The pews have been re-cushioned, throughout, with fine hair cushions covered with a soft olive green Venetian plush.

IN HONOR OF LINCOLN

Committee of Representative Citizens to Arrange for Observance of Centenary.

MAYOR FISK ISSUES CALL.

Meeting on Saturday Night to Arrange Details for Plainfield-North Plainfield Celebration.

Arrangements are being made for a fitting observance of the centenary of Abraham Lincoln's birth, and there is reason to believe that an elaborate program will be provided for the celebration. In obedience to the proclamation of Governor J. Franklin Fort that the people of the respective municipalities give proper recognition to the event by gathering together in honor of the Matyr-President, Mayor Charles J. Fisk has appointed a general committee for the local demonstration. This committee will meet at his office on Saturday night at 8 o'clock when plans will be discussed and special committees appointed.

It is expected that the exercises will be held at the First Baptist church though this will be one of the matters to be decided upon definitely at the committee meeting. It is also believed that the celebration will be set for the afternoon of February 12 inasmuch as the Union county demonstration in honor of the "Greatest American" will take place in Elizabeth on that night. In addition to several speeches, there will be music and other features.

Representatives of the Civil War veterans' local post, Winfield Scott, G. A. R., together with other citizens conferred with the mayor last night. As a result the mayor announced these as a committee: George P. Mellick, Charles W. McCutchen, Alexander Gilbert, Ernest R. Ackerman, James R. Joy, L. W. Randolph, Edwin S. Hooley, William S. Mr. Vanderweg was fifty-four years old and was a plumber by trade having learned it with Berry & Thorn, this city. He resided on Elm place until about ten years ago when he moved to Lorraine, where he has since resided and where his eldest son, Fred Vanderweg, conducts a plumbing and heating business. He is survived by his wife, three sons and two daughters; also two sisters, Miss Annie Vanderweg, of Elm place, this city, and Miss Mary Vanderweg, who lives in Illinois, and one brother, Edward Vanderweg, of Elm place. The Day Nursery Needs.

The Charity Circle of King's Daughters will serve tea at the third anniversary reception to be given at The Day Nursery, on West Fourth street, tomorrow afternoon, from 3 to 6 o'clock. During the past year the work at the nursery has just doubled, there being twice as many children cared for now as a year ago and the needs are in consequence twice as great. The public is earnestly invited to attend and each one is requested to bring something for the store-room.

Another Adjournment.

Another adjournment has been made of the trial of Mrs. Helen Meyers, against the Public Service Corporation, which was set down for Monday in the Union county court, because of the inability of the defense to secure a material witness living in Brooklyn. CAN'T SELL ITS ASSETS

Restraining Order Prevents Safe Company Directors from Disposing of Plant.

A TEMPORARY INJUNCTION.

Court Notice Served at Meeting of Stockholders Here Yesterday Afternoon.

Samuel Rodman and Martha Rodman, complainants in the chancery suit against other stockholders of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, through their counsel, George Ball and Winfield S. Angleman, forestalled a plan yesterday on the part of the defendant stockholders to sell the assets of the company. It was alleged to be the intention of the company to dispose of the assets to the Mosler Safe Company and move the local plant to Hamilton, Ohio.

Having gained information about the meeting to be held here yesterday through a notice given on January 9, counsel for the complainants served notice on the stockholders of a rule obtained in the Court of Chancery to show cause why an injunction should not be issued. This rule is returnable on Tuesday, January 26. Following the service of the notice, the stockholders adjourned their meeting to Wednesday, January 27 at the works in this city.

On Tuesday a bill was filed in the Chancery Court by Samuel Rodman and Martha Rodman setting forth the corporation of the Manganese Steel Safe Company, that they own stock in the company and that they have been unable to obtain any information concerning the defendant company. The complainants filed their bill of complaint against the company for the purpose of preventing the company from carrying out the agreements of a lease of the company to M. & W. Mosler and the Mosler Safe Company and asking for appointment of a receiver. Said suit is now pending in the Court of Errors and Appeals.

On December 11, Alexander G. Humphreys, president of the defendant company and F. H. Bucklin, assistant secretary, issued a letter to the stockholders, calling for a meeting to be held here on December 24 to consider matters and recommendations in relation to the Managanese Steel Safe Company and the Mosler Safe Company.

The complainants filed an objection to the proposed action, claiming that it was not made known to all the stockholders or the complainants prior to the meeting. It is alleged that it was the intention of the defendant company to sell or transfer its business to Hamilton, Ohio. Then the complaints applied to the Court of Chancery for an injunction restraining the company from selling the assets until the suit in the Court of Errors and Appeals is decided. On motion of counsel for the complainants a rule to show cause why this injunction should not be issued was granted.

NUMBER YOUR HOUSE OR PAY A $5 FINE

Determined that all properties shall be properly numbered, Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett has undertaken the work of furnishing the residents of the city the official number of their lots according to the map on file in the office of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend. Personal notices will be served, requesting that the recipient shall have the number placed on his house at once, in compliance with the city ordinance.

The penalty for non-compliance with the requirements of the ordinance is $5 and steps will be taken to impose it promptly upon failure to properly display the house number.

FLOYD COOPER PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO MANSLAUGHTER.

Floyd Cooper, of Westfield, who was held responsible for the death of Jonathan Randolph, in this city, on December 5, last, and who was indicted by the Union county grand jury, was arraigned before Judge E. S. Atwater at Elizabeth, yesterday. Through his counsel, W. A. Coddington and C. A. Marsh, he entered a plea of not guilty, reserving the right to change the plea later. Cooper was allowed to go at liberty under the $10,000 bail originally furnished by Tuttle brothers, of Westfield, following the coroner's inquest here.

Judge Atwater fixed Thursday, February 4, as the date for the trial.

—Always a fine assortment of fancy fruits and fresh vegetables at Neuman Brothers. Special big display tomorrow and Saturday.

FARBMAN FOUND GUILTY ON DISORDERLY CHARGE

After remaining out two-and-a-half hours, yesterday afternoon, the jury in the case of the State against Morris Farbman, proprietor of the Arlington hotel, returned a verdict of guilty on the charge of keeping a disorderly house but not guilty on two other counts of permitting gambling in the hostelry and selling liquor to minors. Sentence was deferred but it is understood that when it is pronounced, the defendant's counsel, William G. De Meza and Alvah A. Clark, will make application for a writ of error on the ground that the judge's charge was prejudiced.

The summing up required two hours in all and the plea of Mr. Clark in behalf of Farbman was exceptionally strong. It is understood that on the first ballot the jury stood ten to two for acquittal on all the charges. Succeeding ballots showed a trend the other way until the disorderly house charge was upheld and the other counts were stricken out.

The trial was one of the hardest fought that has been in the Somerset court in some time and Mr. De Meza, who has been Farbman's counsel from the time of his arrest, stubbornly contested every step taken by the prosecution. Alvah Clark became associate in the case after the trial started.

WEBSTER'S FAREWELL DINNER ARRANGEMENTS

William H. Webster, of this city, who has become a convert to Dr. Wilfred H. Grenfell's work in Labrador, and who will leave for that place in March to assist the latter, will give a dinner at Hope chapel tomorrow night to the Boys' Club. The dinner will be served promptly at 7:30 o'clock and at the close there will be a number of speeches. G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the Sunday-school, will be the toastmaster. Among the speakers will be Rev. L. R. Howard, William H. Webster, Hugh B. Sweeny, Ira W. Travell and Clinton Firstbrook, president of the club.

Mr. Webster, who has been a resident of Plainfield about six years, is engaged in business in New York as a certified accountant. He has read considerable about Dr. Grenfell's work, heard him speak on several occasions and is a close personal friend. The character of the work in Labador appealed to him strongly and when Dr. Grenfell appeared here recently he signified his desire and willingness to join him. The suggestion met with the doctor's hearty approval and arrangements were made to have him go to Labrador in March.

COLORED PEOPLE JAILED ON CHARGES BY POLICE

Out of an ordinary non-support charge brought before Judge Runyon in the city court, yseterday afternoon, the police unearthed one of the worst cases of family depravity they have had to deal with in a long time. As a result three of the members were sent to jail this morning, and with the mtwo young men who were implicated. All are colored.

The defendant in the first instance was Thomas Waldron, who was charged by his wife with failing to take care of her. He was arrested at Neshanic by Detective-Sergeant Flynn and Judge Runyon attempted to dispose of the matter yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Waldron's two daughters came to court with her and it was through their testimony that the police gained an insight of the existing wretched conditions. The case was hastily adjourned until this morning and when it was again called, the daughters, Nora and Irene Waldron, and two men, Harry Hatchett and Thomas Harlan were made defendants on serious charges. All four were sentenced to Elizabeth for sixty days. The father was also committed in default of $250 bail to guarantee $5 a week for the support of his wife and two small children.

In addition to the other complaints, Nora Waldron made a serious accusation against her father which the police will consider later. The mother was aware of the condition of affairs and was told by Judge Runyon that but for her poor health, having recently been discharged from the hospital, she would have been sent to jail with the others. Harland is better known as "Holland" and is the man who served a term in Trenton prison following a notorious West End case.

MISS ENGLISH HIS BRIDE

Hugh Samuel Jarvis Marries Charming Daughter of Mrs. Geo. W. English.

AT GRACE CHURCH HERE.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the Rector, Officiates, a Throng of Society Folk Being Present.

Miss Edith English, daughter of Mrs. George W. English, of East Seventh street, and Hugh Samuel Jarvis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jarvis, of New York, were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Grace church in the presence of a large and fashionable throng of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and this city. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by two matrons of honor, Mrs. H. Bertram Legg, of New York, and Mrs. Leo McCall, of Englewood, and Dorothy English, of Pittsburg, a cousin, as flower girl. The best man was Charles Goodman, of New York, and the ushers were George W. English, brother of the bride; Bertram Legg, Frank Berger and George Welsh, of New York; Harry L. McGee and Lewis Williams, of this city.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with point applique and orange blossoms. She wore a veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and orchids. The matrons of honor were gowned in American beauty satin, with hats of American beauty roses and they carried marabout muffs. The flower girl was gowned in white and she carried a white basket filled with American beauty roses.

The ushers led the way as the bridal party entered the church, followed by the matrons of honor, the flower girl and the bride, who was accompanied by her brother, Harry Crawford English, who gave her in marriage. At the chancel they met the groom and best man. William E. MacClymont presided at the organ and assisted by W. Paulding De Nike, 'cellist, rendered the wedding march from Lohengrin. After the ceremony and as the party left the edifice, the wedding march from Mendelssohn was rendered.

The church was elaborately decorated for the wedding, American beauty roses and palms being used exclusively about the chancel. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, where a large number of guests gathered to congratulate the bride and groom and to admire the handsome array of costly gifts. The home was also decorated with American beauty roses, the arrangement in the reception room and dining-room being particularly effective.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis will spend their honeymoon in Cuba as guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Vaughn, the latter being a sister of the groom. They will be away until the middle of February when they will return to Plainfield to reside. The groom formerly lived in New York, but recently came to this city. He is engaged in business in New York as a stock broker. The bride is a favorite here in the younger social set.

ITALIAN YOUTH'S LOVE WAS TOO DEMONSTRATIVE

A fifteen-year-old Italian girl, Louise Du Bois, living with her parents near Warrenville, appeared as complainant in the borough police court last night against Michael Dana, twenty-one years old, of McDowell street, charging that he had threatened her life.

The girl testified that Dana had wanted her to marry him, and that on her repeated refusals, he had declared that he would shoot her if she did not comply. He had been giving her pretents for more than a year, and tha was real nice of him but that was about all she could see in Dana to admire. His letters to her were declarations of undying affection. In one he said: "Oh, I do love you terrible!"

The defendant was released under $100 bonds, to not molest the girl in the future, signed by Frank Ross. He was represented by Attorney V. W. Nash, Jr., while W. L. Hetfield Jr., appeared for the girl.

MUST PROTECT CROSSING

Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley Ordered to Place Gates at Cedar Ave. Lincoln.

VICTORY FOR PISCATAWAY.

Commissioner Sommer Decrees that Crossing is Dangerous—W. A. Coddington's Success.

Former Judge William Coddington won a big victory for the people of Piscataway township yesterday when Frank H. Sommer, of the State Railroad Commission filed a decree ordering the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley to protect grade crossings at Cedar avenue, Lincoln, Middlesex county. Both roads had put up a stubborn fight before the commission, each being represented by two lawyers, but the body decided that there was ample evidence to show that the crossing was a most dangerous one. As a result, the two roads must place gates at the crossing to be operated from a tower.

Commissioner Sommer's decree follows:

"Complaint having been made to the Board of Railroad Commissioners of New Jersey of the unprotected condition of Cedar avenue, in the village of Lincoln, Piscataway township, Middlesex county, at the point where said avenue is crossed at grade by the tracks of the Central Railroad Company and Lehigh Valley Railroad Company; and a hearing having been had on the said complaint, the complainants being represented therein by Messrs. Reed & Coddington, and the said companies, by their respective counsel, and statements having been taken on behalf of the complainants and said companies, and the matter having been considered by the Board; the said Board finds: that Cedar avenue at point complained of is crossed at grade by four tracks of the Central Railroad Company, two eastbound and two westbound, and two tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, one eastbound and one westbound; that in addition to the trains operated by said companies passing over said crossing at this point, trains of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad also pass over said crossing; that separating the tracks of the two companies is a space of forty-five feet up grade to the tracks of the Central Railroad Company, which tracks are three feet higher than those of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company; that the length of the crossing is about one hundred and eleven feet; that approaching the crossing from the west, obstructions prevent a view of the westbound track of the Central Railroad Company until a point is reached about thirty feet from the nearest rail; at this point westbound trains can be seen for one quarter of a mile and eastbound trains can be seen as they round a curve about one-eighth of a mile south of the crossing; and westbound trains of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company can be seen for some eight hundred feet. Approaching the crossing from the east there is a good view of the tracks of both companies; that about twenty people pass over this crossing on foot and about the same number of vehicles employ it daily; that some two hundred trains pass over the crossing daily.

"The crossing is wholly unprotected.

"The Board concludes that the crossing is dangerous and should be protected, and "Recommends to the companies that they protect the said crossing by gates operated from a tower.

(Signed) FRANK H. SOMMER, "Commissioner.

"Concurred in by Commissioners Congdon and Whiting."

ENDS LIFE WITH BULLET

George Newmiller, a Mechanic Out of Work and Despondent, Commits Suicide.

SLEEPING BABES IN ROOM.

Wife and Brother-in-Law Driven Out by Crazed Man, Summon Police, Who Arrive to Find Him Dead.

George Newmiller, a mechanic, living at 86 Summit avenue, fired a bullet into his own head last night about 10:45 and died instantly. In the room with him at the time were his two babies, asleep in bed. His wife had just gone downstairs to call for help, for her husband had already threatened to kill himself and had the revolver in his hand at the time. His brother-in-law, Louis Casenove, who lives on the floor below, rushed upstairs and confronted Newmiller, who pointed the gun at him and shouted, "Get out of here and leave me alone." Casenove pleaded with him but seeing he was determined, withdrew. As he ran downstairs he heard the gun snap. It had missed fire. But he had hardly got out the door when the shot was fired which ended Newmiller's life. Casenove hurried to the borough police station. Chief George Weiss and Marshall John Reinman went immediately to the house, after notifying Dr. Pittis, who responded, arriving there shortly afterwards.

Death had been instantaneous however. The bullet from a rusty old .38 calibre revolver had entered the temple. The children were awake then and staring in amazement at their father's lifeless body laying where it fell. The mother was below in a hysterical condition unable to nerve herself to go upstairs.

Neither Mrs. Newmiller nor Mr. Casenove could offer any reason for the suicide other than he was melancholy. He was thirty-four years of age. For several days the man had seemed absent minded, and at times morose and dejected. He had been working for several weeks steadily, though prior to that had been laid off much of the time. He had been employed intermittently at the Scott Press Works for several years. During the time he was not at work it was his custom to canvas from house to house selling small articles of merchandise or novelties.

About three years ago, a brother, William Newmiller, was killed in a railroad disaster near Kansas City, while traveling for the Scott Press company. The wreck was due to the washing away of the track during a flood in the Kaw river bottoms.

No definite arrangements have been made for the funeral. It was said by the police that no inquest would be necessary.

Lecture on Queen Victoria.

"Sixty-four Years a Queen" is the title of a public illustrated lecture to be given by George N. Cross, the well known traveler and lecturer, in the high school auditorium on Saturday evening. The slides used to illustrate the address are exquisitely colored, and are made from photographs many of which were taken by special permission of King Edward, and show scenes and art treasures inaccessible to the tourist. The lecture portrays the long reign of Queen Victoria, whose staunch friendship for this country was strongly shown in the dark days of our Civil War. A week later the third and last lecture of the series will present "Abraham Lincoln, the First American."

Y. W. C. A. Sleighing Party.

Almost thirty-five members of the Young Women's Christian Association enjoyed a straw ride into the country last evening. Days of sleighing are so uncertain that the party was planned yesterday morning. Two loads of merry girls enjoyed the ride. Many of them were members of the evening gymnasium classes in the association; among the others who attended were the Misses King, Miss Fedderman, Miss Laigh, Miss Head, Miss Butler and Miss Thorn. After returning to the association the girls enjoyed a supper.

Attractions Are Almost Unlimited in the January Furniture Sale

It is the almost universal opinion of those who know the great furniture stores of this country to accord to the Hahne & Co. Furniture Store, pre-eminence. Stocks here as full and varied as in any store in the United States. The display is almost bewildering, the qualities above reproach, the prices notably fair.

When the people have placed before them a proposition thru which they are enabled to select from this splendid stock the furniture as well as carpets and upholsteries at a positive reduction of not less than 10 per cent., it means that we are offering a gift of many thousands of dollars to our patrons. If there were any strings to this offer or any trade trick employed, the proposition would not be worth mentioning. But where, in any other way, can 10 per cent. be so easily earned as thru a purchase of furniture during this month of January? And we do not stop at the 10 per cent. reduction, for many things are reduced 25 per cent., 33 1-3 per cent., 50 per cent., and all thru the stock there is special pricing on the very things that are most in demand.

There are a lot of parlor suites, selling at 25 per cent. under price, and the sale of bedroom furniture this week brings notable reductions in this line. All sorts of metal beds are also liberally reduced.

In the Carpet Store, in the Upholstery Store, generous reductions are also being made, everything being priced 10 per cent. below usual. Thus are we

Saving Thousands of Dollars to the People

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

George Moriarty, the clever infielder and utility man of the Highlanders, has been sold by the local American League club to the Detroit club. The Detroit club has been after Moriarty for some time and a deal was expected by which the Tigers would get him, but it was supposed the New Yorks would get some player in exchange. It seems, however, that Moriarty was sold outright. Just how a club is going to strengthen by disposing of its players for cash and not getting one in exchange is a question the local rooters find it difficult to understand. Pennants aren't won that way. Meanwhile the petition of Hal Chase to be reinstated in the American League has been returned to that player by the National Commission. The commission decided that it was too brief, and so sent it back to Chase in San Jose, Cal., to get more details of why he deserted the New Yorks in such unceremonious fashion. The reinstatement of Chase therefore is delayed.

Charlies Murphy wants the National League to take care of Pop Anson by making him supervisor of umpires.

The Philadelphia Nationals have refused to waive claim to Jack Hannifan and will take the former New York and Boston player.

As the Highlanders are to open the season against Washington, it probably means they are to go against Walter Johnson and eight assistants and try to avoid a shutout.

It is said that Jiggs Donohue is not at all sure of being retained as the White Sox first baseman another season and that if Comiskey puts him on the market McAleer will gobble him.

"I do not agree with the idea that the influence of summer baseball is bad for university men," says Dr. Hutchins, University of Wisconsin physical director. "I have a keen respect for baseball as it is played. I have observed that the men who play the game are more orderly than those who follow it. There is more rowdyism in the grand stand and the bleachers than on the field."

Evans has signed to umpire in the American League again, which is well. Evans has improved immensely and come to be one of the best of umpires.

Outsiders who are arranging Stalling's team for him next season are taking no account of Charlie Hemphill, leading batsman for the Hilltoppers last season. It may be that Stallings will think it a good plan to sandwich a veteran in among his young outfielders for steadying purposes.

It begins to look as though Easton would be in the Tri-State League of baseball clubs the coming season. Prof. Charles S. Ketchner of the faculty of Albright College, Meyerstown, who played baseball while at Lafayette in the class of 1898 and is an honorary member of Tri-State League has been conferring with D. F. Ballentine, desiring Easton to take the place of Wilmington, which has withdrawn. Baseball fans in Easton are very favorable to the suggestion.

GOLF.

There are some golfers in the West who are satisfied that quite a few of the "palings were knocked off the stockade fence of the United States Golf Association" at the annual meeting in New York a few days ago, and that consequently "the Western wind of democracy has a chance to make itself felt." "The Referee," in "The Chicago Tribune," in commenting on the subject, says:

It was noted with pleasure by Western golfers that one of the men who led the attack on the fences was J. W. Minley, of the Columbia Golf Club of Washington, and if he can wield his clubs as powerfully as he did the sledge hammer he ought to be put on the scratch. He plainly demonstrated to the little coterie of Eastern players who have dominated the policies of the United States Golf Association for some years past that the cry for a more liberal organization was not the piping voice of a few insurgents but a deep toned note from a large and growing body of representative players. So it came to pass that from now on the clubs taking exception to the nominations of the powers in office will have a chance to put an independent ticket in the field. But there still remains the voting and non-voting classification of clubs, and until this is removed the United States Golf Association always will be looked upon as an un-American organization. The East has displayed an inclination to let down the bars. The rumblings have been deep and the earthquake may follow.

If the Western golfers can take any satisfaction over the outcome of the meeting of the United States Golf Association, something is gained, in that it would be most unfortunate that a split should come at this or any other time. As a matter of fact, however, there has never been a time when an independent ticket could not be put in the field if any golfer cared to take the chance of running in opposition to the regular nominees. The new amendment to the constitution, simply provides for a less indelicate way to put an opposition ticket in the field. It is true that a note of warning was sounded at the meeting, but the United States Golf Association is the same undemocratic body, according to certain Western views, as it was before the meeting was held.

Further details of the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association, held in Chicago on Saturday, are at hand. The Olympic team championship tournament will be held over the links of the Chicago Golf Club on September 4, the Saturday before the opening of the national amateur championship tournament, over the same course. The Western amateur championship tournament will be held on the links of the Homewood Country Club and the Western open at the Skokie Country Club.

Announcement was made that Peter Dawson, of Glasgow, Scotland, had offered a trophy valued at $1,000 to the association in memory of the late Tom Morris, the famous Scotch golfer. It is a statuette five feet high.

Play for the trophy will be along novel lines. Teams of eight, representing all clubs in the association, or at least as many as care to enter, will play against the par of their own course on some duly appointed day. The scores will be submitted to a committee and the winner determined. The winning club will hold the trophy for a year.

The report of the secretary showed that the association had grown in the ten years from eleven clubs to a membership of 124 clubs.

Resolutions relating to changes in the constitution, prepared by the committee as ordered at the last annual meeting, were carried, after there had been a long argument on permitting clubs to vote by mail. Clubs can now vote by mail except on amendments to the constitution. A resolution of sympathy with the family of former President Phelps B. Hoyt was passed and many tributes were paid to his memory.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey State Golf Association will be held at the office of the president, Leighton Calkins, at No. 25 Broad street, New York, on Tuesday, January 26, at 4 o'clock p. m. Each club is entitled to be represented by one voting delegate.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Runyon will leave today for Braidentown, Fla., where they will remain for the rest of the winter.

The effect of the color scheme is extremely quiet but very rich and dignified; the aim being to produce quiet and restful effects.

Renovations have also been undertaken in the church vestibules, Sunday-school section, and other parts of the building, but the chief point of interest is, of course, the interior of the church proper.

The decorating committee, the trustees and Rev. Dr. Zellie, have worked most earnestly to produce a successful result and they have cooperated with the architects and the decorators in every way possible, to attain these ends. The work has been somewhat slower in reaching completion than was originally hoped but considering the work which had to be done and the quality of the final result it is believed that the delays were justifiable.

The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church when entirely completed in its small detail will be one of the most interesting and successful of church interiors, considering the amount appropriated and the fact that it is an alteration to an old building which naturally limits the architect in a great measure.

Among the many firms who have contributed in producing the finished result were the Decorative Arts Company, of New York, represented by O. E. Pape, for many years with the Tiffany Studio; all the interior carpentery work and the large trusses were installed by Rimmer, Apgar & Cuzen, of this city; the mason work was executed by B. F. Tallamy & Brother, of this city; the electric work was installed by Edwin A. Craig, of this city; the electrical and the gas fixtures were made by the Enos Company, of New York city; all the windows, throughout, were installed by Duffner & Kimberly, of New York city; the carpets were furnished by W. & J. Sloane, of New York city; the pew cushions by Sperry & Beal, of New York city; the pulpit stalls, communion chairs, hymn boards, etc., were installed by R. Geissler, of New York, from designs by the architects.

MISS MAY BIRD BECOMES MRS. A. H. WINDHAM, JR

Miss May Alice Bird, daughter of Mrs. Rosanna Bird, and August Henry Windham, Jr., were married at 7:30 last night at the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Harvey Apgar, on Summit avenue. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, performed the ceremony, using the Episcopal service. Miss Maude Bowman was maid of honor and Charles Windham, brother of the groom, acted as best man. Miss Madeline Walker, the bride's niece, was flower girl and the ushers were Elmer Walker and Charles Mumford.

The rooms had been prettily decorated for the event, with palms, smilax and cut flowers. A large bell, formed of evergreens and having a red centre, was arranged in one corner, and beneath it the couple stood. Mrs. Frank Pursell played both wedding marches and Miss Margaret Bird sang "Heart of My Heart."

The bride wore a gown of soft white silk and a veil caught up with lillies of the valley, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a gown of yellow silk and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, while the little flower girl was dressed in pink silk. From a basket in her hand she strewed pink roses before the bride. Mrs. Bird, the bride's mother, wore a gown of gray crepe, trimmed with gray chiffon and lavender. Mrs. Apgar was attired in pale blue silk.

Following the ceremony a reception and supper were held. Among the guests present were a number from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Hoboken and Summit. The presents bestowed upon the pair were numerous and beautiful. They consisted of furniture, china, cut glass and pictures. After a brief honeymoon spent in visiting among friends, Mr. and Mrs. Windham will reside in Brooklyn, the groom being employed there in the navy yard.

GIVE UP EFFORTS TO FREE MERCER SUSPECTS.

Trenton, Jan. 21—It is announced here that the obstacles placed by Prosecutor Crossley in the way of accepting bail bonds from non-residents of the county have resulted in abandonment of the efforts to secure the release of William Rohrer, alias Roberts, and John O'Connor, alias Shevelin. The men are accused of being professional pickpockets and are in the county jail here. Major Carl Lentz, of Newark, is associated with J. Lefferts Conard and John H. Kafer as counsel for the men.

There was a charge that political influences were back of the effort on behalf of the men, but this has been denied. Major Lentz offered Robert H. Waldron, of 391 High street, Newark, and Theodore Brix, of Perth Amboy, as bondsmen. Affidavits as to their ownership of property were submitted. Prosecutor Crossley had the validity of the bail bonds submitted to the court, where directions were given that the sureties must be brought before the court to determine the positive ownership of the properties named.

Counsel for the accused men, being thus thwarted in their endeavor to effect the release of the prisoners, decided to abandon the case for the time being. The wives of the alleged pickpockets have been frequent callers at the jail from the time of their first commitment.

JEWISH FARMERS' GRANGE.

New York, Jan. 21.—Thirty Jewish farmers from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts, composing the first annual convention of Jewish agriculturists, met Tuesday in the Educational Alliance building, East Broadway and Jefferson street, and formed a national organization known as the Jewish Farmers of America. The gathering resumed the business of the coavention today, and tonight there will be a reception to the delegates.

It was decided to hold a Jewish agricultural fair every year on every Succoth, the Feast of the Booths, which is in October, a month after the Jewish New Year, and to offer prizes for exhibitions of agricultural products raised by members of the organization.

The following officers of the Jewish Farmers of America were elected: Chairman, S. P. Becker, Connecticut; vice-chairman, Samuel Hein, New York; secretary, J. W. Pincus, New York, and treasurer, Samuel Kleinfield, of Norma, New Jersey.

For a Lincoln Highway.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The construction of a Lincoln memorial highway from the White House to Washington to the battlefield of Gettysburg in Pennsylvania is authorized in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Lefean, of that State. The bill provides that the proposed highway shall be constructed under the direction of a commission to be composed of two members of the Senate, two members of the House, the Secretary of State and the Secretary of War. The sum of $25,000 is made available to defray the cost of a preliminary survey.

MAY BE GRAND JURY PROBE.

Trenton, Jan. 21.—Despite the fact that a coroner's jury exonerated Ballantine, the attendant at the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane, after investigating the death of Henry D. Rue, a grand jury probe is probable. Judge Reilstab, in his charge to the grand jury for the January term, yesterday, under direction of Supreme Court Justice Alfred Reed, who was unable to remain for the session, called attention to the death of Rue. The court pointed out that the death had been investigated by the prosecutor's office, and that a coroner's jury afterward found that death was due to injuries accidentally sustained.

The court, however, told the jury that it was their duty fully to investigate the death, and bring in an indictment, should they find that a crime had been committed. This was the only matter to which the jury's attention was called.

Charles J. Prigge a Suicide.

Trenton, Jan. 21.—Charles J. Prigge, of 10 Brown street, committed suicide Tuesday at Albany, N. Y. He was at the home of friends there. He had been to Europe for several months and was on his way home. His wife believes that ill-health and the failure of various efforts to regain physical well-being caused her husband to grow despondent. He was forty-seven years old and had been in business here for a number of years.

Elizabeth's Oldest Man Dies.

Elizabeth, Jan. 21.—William Mayer, believed to be the oldest inhabitant of this city, died late Tuesday afternoon at his residence, 25 Atlantic street. He was in his ninety-seventh year. Death resulted from general debility, caused by old age. He leaves a widow, four sons and two married daughters. He was born in Germany, and had lived nearly half a century at Elizabethport.

Sufficiently Married.

"You want to get damages, I suppose," said the lawyer to whom Mrs Donovan's husband escorted her on the day after she and Mrs. Leahy had indulged in a little difference of opinion.

"Damages!" echied Mrs. Donovan, shirlly. "Haven't I got damages enough already, man? What I'm after is satisfaction."—Youth's Companion.

"So you believe in telepathy?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton. "My wife knows what I am going to think about some time before I have made my mind up on the subject myself."—Washington Star.

Fads of Royalty.

Queen Maud of Norway keeps a scrapbook bearing the inscription on the cover, "Things We Have Not Said and Done," in which she has pasted newspaper cuttings giving stories about herself and her husband which have their foundation only in the imagination of enterprising journalists. It is said, too, that among the German Crown Prince's most treasured possessions is a scrapbook containing over 5,000 pages of adverse newspaper criticism. The first 500 pages are inscribed with a gold lettered heading "I hope I am not like this!" while some of the most out-spoken comments are accompanied by marginal notes in the Prince's own handwriting—such as, "The enemy's voice is no less interesting than the friends," etc.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Two accidents happened on Spencer hill yesterday to the coasters who have thronged the hill for several days past, enjoying the exciting sport. Frank Corrona's bob refused to take the turn near Johnston drive. Frank was thrown and injured his ankle and sprained the ligaments of his foot. Another bob beyond control struck Miss Lulu Hollingsworth, who was walking up the hill to her home and cut a bad gash in an ankle and bruised her severely. The hill has got packed so that it is practically a glare of ice and the sport has got where it is really dangerous.

Those who missed hearing Bugler Paul Kamerer give his reminiscent talk of the War of '61, entitled "From Reville to Taps," in Excelsior Hall last night, missed a treat. Mr. Kamerer's remarks were interesting, being actual incidents of the struggle by one who had been in the thick of the fight. His remarks were interposed with the numerous bugle calls used in assembling the men for meal, sick call, raville taps, etc. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Methodist church.

Unless some objection is made by the taxpayers, the proposed lighting contract with the Public Service Corporation will be signed at the meeting of the Township Committee which will be held tomorrow night in the town rooms.

The local ice company is ready to start cutting ice just as soon as it gets 9 or 10 inches in thickness. If good winter weather continues this should be not later than next week.

Charles Haberly, who has been detained at home for several days with an attack of the grip, has returned to his position with the C. R. R. of N. J.

A number of the young people of the borough are arranging to hold a dance in the Fanwood fire-house during the early part of February.

Ernest Wilson, a former resident here but now of Newark, has been visiting friends in town.

John Ford has returned from a visit with relatives and friends in Brooklyn.

Why It Was.

A party of Northerners was touring Virginia, some years ago, and as the crowded train was crawling through Stafford County, near Fredericksburg, an old and wizened woman, with a basket bigger than herself, came aboard, and edged diffidently into the vacant place beside one of the men. After a while her seatmate decided that it could be no harm to draw her out a little for the benefit of the rest of the party.

"This is very poor land that you have around here, madam," he began.

"Mighty pore," she assented, humbly.

"I never did see such worthless soil."

"No, suh," with an air of deep dejection.

"Don't you ever sow any crops at all?" he kept on.

The ancient dame did not lift her head.

"Naw, suh," she drawled. "This hyer land around hyer was sowed 'bout three foot deep with Yankees, 'long 'bout forty years ago, and we ain't been able to raise nary crap since."—Harper's Weekly.

Sunday Science.

Magazine Editor (New York Hotbox)—What you got for Sunday? Anything snappy?

Sunday Editor—Have we! Say, look at these proofs. Professor Hit-the Piper, the eminent scientist, has figured out for the Hotbox that if all the energy expended in gum chewing were to be concentrated in one powerhouse it would operate all the electric railways, trolleys, lighting and gas companies in the United States for two years, five months and twenty-four days.—Puck.

For the Sake of Business.

A country woman was taking her son to school for the first time and after impressing the schoolmaster with the necessity of giving him a thoroughly good education, finished up by saying:

"Be sure he learns Latin."

"But, my dear woman," said the schoolmaster, "Latin is a dead language."

"So much the better," replied the woman. "Ye ken he's gaun tae be an undertaker."—Tit-Bits.

The Horsemen.

The veterinary surgeon had pronounced the horse to be afflicted with an incurable disease.

"What had I better do?" queried Uncle Boffin, the owner, to his groom.

"Well, sir," was the reply, "conscientiously speaking, I should part with 'im to another gentleman.—Ally Sloper's.

PROPERTIES ALL TOO COSTLY.

Actor's Strenuousness Cost Him Regard of Worthy Lady.

David Garrick was the part best loved by the late E. A. Sothern, and concerning his acting in this play an amusing story is told. He was accorded a "benefit" one night, and selected "David Garrick." In this comedy, it will be remembered, Garrick feigns drunkenness, and in the drawing-room at Ada Ingot's he disgusts the guests at the tea table, and plays havoc with the tea service. Just before this scene it was discovered that the stage manager had forgotten the necessary crockery, and a messenger was dispatched to a neighboring house to borrow some teacups, etc. The worthy lady applied to had heard of the fame of the great actor, and, anxious to display her treasure, sent back her best china tea service, a family heirloom of great value. That night Sothern was playing with unusual energy, and very soon the precious porcelain was smashed in fragments and scattered about the stage. The old lady's indignation may be imagined, and to her death she maintained that Sothern must have been really drunk, "for no sober man would have smashed such lovely china."

$4,000 RETURN ON TEN CENTS.

Purchaser of Old Material Found Really Good Investment.

John Roberts of Watkins, Schuyler county, a well driller, recently purchased of Angelo Dupree, a junk dealer, an old pump for ten cents. It was apparently of no value, but he thought there might be some parts that he could use in his business. When Mr. Roberts and his assistant took the pump to one of the wells they were drilling and started breaking it up, they were greatly surprised to see gold coins drop out of the holes they made. They at once finished the job, and found $4,000, nearly all in $20 gold pieces. Whom the pump belonged to at the time the money was hidden, or how long it had been there, is a mystery. The latest date of one of the coins was 1888. Mr. Roberts at once deposited his find in the Farmers' and Merchants' bank at Watkins. He is willing to surrender the find to anyone who can prove ownership, but no claimant has yet appeared. The junk man will make a memorandum to examine the inside of every old pump before disposing of it at any price.—Utica (N. Y.) Press.

An Unsavory Charity.

In all the cafes and beer halls of Germany a large canister is placed on a table in the center of each establishment. Every time one of the guests lights a fresh cigar he gets up and deposits in the canister the end of the one he has just been smoking. This receptacle is a sort of alms-box with a funnel-shaped lid, secured by means of a padlock. A charitable association supplies all places of public resort with these boxes for the purpose of collecting odds and ends of tobacco, cigarettes and cigars. The produce of the sale is devoted to the purchase of clothing, which is distributed among poor children at Christmas. The charity is believed to be the most malodorous and unsanitary on record.

Benefit of Gymnastics to Golfers.

On the subject of gymnastics and golf Capt. Hutchison, who holds a gymnastic appointment in the Coldstream Guards, reports: "While actually going through five hours' daily work in the gymnasium I found that the heavy work was certainly detrimental to golf. But I think that it eventually proved of the greatest assistance, as it strengthened the muscles of the wrist and forearm, which play such an important part in all golfing strokes. I found it necessary to shorten my swing a little, and took to the overlapping or Vardon grip, two changes that certainly improved my game."—London Standard.

His Qualifications.

Traveling along a country road a revenue officer was attracted by frightful screams coming from a house not far from the road. Tying his horse he ran to the house and found that a little boy had swallowed a quarter, and his mother, not knowing what to do, was frantic. The revenue officer caught the little fellow by the heels, and, holding him up, gave him a few shakes, whereupon the coin dropped to the floor. "Well, mister," said the grateful mother, "you certainly know how to get it out. Are you a doctor?" "No, madam," replied the official, "I'm a collector of internal revenue."

What He Meant.

An old sea captain was visiting a certain exhibition, and was greatly interested in the mechanical section, where a fine array of steam whistles was on show. "How far can that one be heard?" he asked, pointing to a huge "buzzer." The young man in attendance was only a deputy, but he promptly replied: "Sixteen miles." "Sixteen miles?" said the old salt incredulously. "When I say 16 miles," elaborated the youth, "I mean eight miles this way and eight miles that way."

Keep Your Eyes on the Ground.

In walking about the Australian gold fields it is always advisable to keep your eyes on the ground. You can never tell when you may kick up a nugget—or fall down a deserted shaft. From Tarragulla, a district that has been very prolific in valuable nuggets, comes news of a remarkable find. A man walking across the fields picked up what he thought was a mushroom. It proved to be a nugget and contained £50 worth of gold.

PAPERING THE ROOM.

We should not go about papering our rooms as we buy pins or order a luncheon. The luncheon is soon over and we order another one the next day. But no so with our wallpaper. It remains "put" for sometimes several years, and care should be exercised accordingly in choosing it.

In papering any room it should be remembered that light is the first consideration, and that the paper must be chosen accordingly.

Pure white is the best choice when a specially light room is wanted, as it absorbs only about 15 per cent. of the light thrown upon it. Dark green, on the other hand, is the greatest consumer of light, absorbing about 85 per cent.

Next to white as a light producer are the soft pastel tints and light blues, which absorb from 20 to 25 per cent. of the light; then comes orange at 30 per cent.; apple and gray greens, almost 50 per cent., and the popular brown is almost as bad as dark green, as it takes up about 60 to 70 per cent. of the light it should throw out.

PETTY GRAFT CUT OUT BY THE SENATE

Petty graft in the shape of fountain pens and similar articles is to cease with the present session if the State Senate holds to the decision reached in executive session Tuesday, to do away with such extravagances. The total expenditure in this line has usually amounted to somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000.

There was such a flood of bills last night that there was not much business of that kind to be transacted yesterday. Only two bills were introduced in the Senate, one, an old-timer, by Senator Price, authorizing the State to loan money, not otherwise appropriated, to farmers; the other, by Senator Ackerman, an amendment to the mechanics' lien law, prohibiting the allegation of a promise to pay a debt as a bar to filing a mechanics' lien. John W. Bogert, of Bergen county, was confirmed as special judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Employers' liability measures appeared to be the favorites this week. Public utilities may receive the same amount of attention when the members get together next Monday night. Senator Gebhardt has a bill modeled on the Hughes law, but more drastic in its provisions, which he introduced last year.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

On the banks off Cape May hundreds of pounds of codfish are being caught daily.

Camden Italians yesterday sent a check for $500 to their stricken countrymen in Messina.

Mrs. Anna Wells, of Newark, delivered an address in the Glassboro M. P. church to a large audience Monday evening.

The eleventh annual charity ball of Hoboken to benefit St. Mary's Hospital was held in the German Club last evening, and was the crowning social event of the season.

Getting his hand caught in machinery at the Welsbach Light plant, Gloucester, Charles Pechin had all the fingers so badly crushed that they were amputated at Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Oscar Nichols was elected city treasurer of Somers Point, by Council last night, to succeed James Clarke, who resigned. The Council also officially gave its indorsement to Governor Fort's proposed ocean boulevard. It may pass through Somers Point, where it traverses Atlantic county.

For the thirty-seventh consecutive year, Mrs. Morris H. Keeler has been elected president of the Burlington County Children's Home. The other officers are: Recording secretary, Miss Maggie Semple; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Harker; treasurer, Mrs. Cynthia Sutter.

Announcements were received today by many in Jersey City of the marriage of Miss Maude Woolley McBurney to Ben Aldrich Curtis, which took place yesterday at the residence of the bride's father, H. D. McBurney, 343 Fairmount avenue, Jersey City. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Curtis, of Jersey City.

"Counting the time I served in prison I'm seventy-six years old," said Michael Hines in giving his pedigree at Paterson's police headquarters last evening. He was there as a lodger Monday night, under the name of Michael Mustard, and when he appeared last night he was locked up as a prisoner. The man's mind is apparently unbalanced.

In the Camden District Court before Judge Jones yesterday a jury gave a verdict of $400 in favor of Mrs. Mary Kimble against William Bachrach. The action resulted from Mrs. Kimble giving Bachrach a diamond ring and a pair of earrings, valued at $600, as a security for a loan of $150, and it was alleged he refused to return the gems.

The well-worn short change swindle appeared in Trenton yesterday when a man worked it twice in different parts of the town. He rushed into two restaurants and asked for a $20 bill for twenty ones. The old-time trick of having one short and then depositing the whole supposedly $39 in a sealed envelope while he rushed away for the remaining dollar was gone through with the usual result that when the envelopes were opened nothing but wastepaper was there.

Miss Marion Herr, of Flemington, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Edgar, of East Front street.

H. A. Todd, manager for Boice, Runyon & Co., has returned from a trip to Tampa, Fla. Mrs. Todd and the family will remain there for a time.

Miss Eliza Dufford, of West Front street, who recently sprained her ankle in New York, is much improved and she hopes soon to return to her position in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Legg, of New York, Mrs. Leo McCall, of Englewood, and Miss Dorothy English, of Pittsburg, Pa., have been guests of Mrs. George W. English, of East Seventh street.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Life lessons from the book of Genesis.—Gen. i, 1-8, 26-31.

Twelve books of the Bible, one for each month, have been selected for our study in the present year. In a note on the United society's topic card it is explained that these books were "selected by a large company of leading clergymen and laymen on the way to the Seattle convention, who chose the books of the Bible most helpful to them." It is also added that "in each case the entire book is open for comment." This gives to all Christian Endeavorers an excellent opportunity to study twelve of the most important books of the Bible, not in parts, but as a whole. This opportunity should be improved. Each month the entire book should not only be read, but also studied. Such study will prove most interesting and do away with much ignorance that exists concerning the Bible because of the tendency to study but short passages of each book. (1) Get a good general outline of each book. (2) Then familiarize yourself with the details under each head of the outline. The results will amply pay for the time and study given in following such a plan.

The book of Genesis, as its name implies, is a book of beginnings. In it we have recorded the beginning of the heavens and earth, the beginning of the Sabbath, of the human race, of sin, of God's punishment of sin and of the life of the chosen people of God from Abraham down to the death of Joseph. Its contents may be divided into four parts:

1. The creation, including man and his fall—i, 3.
2. The antediluvian history of mankind—iv, 5.
3. The deluge and subsequent events—vi, 11.
4. The patriarchal age, including the lives of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and his twelve sons to the death of Joseph—xii, 50.

Under some such outline the contents of the entire book stand out clearly before us and may help us greatly in the more detailed study of the book itself.

But Genesis is more than a simple statement of the early facts in human history. It reveals God as the Creator of the universe and all that is within it and thus lays the foundation of our faith in our God as the Creator and Preserver of all things. It tells the sad story of the corruption of the entire human race through the disobedience and sin of the first Adam. It tells how sin entered into the world, but not why it entered. Then with these things and what follows up to Abraham as a background its chief design is revealed in that it is to show how God revealed Himself to the first fathers of the Jewish nation in order that He might make to Himself a people who should be His witnesses on the earth and through whom the second Adam, or the Saviour of the world, was to come.

Genesis, above all, should speak to us of God—God in creation, God in us, we having been created in His own image; God in the human race and God in a people especially chosen to witness to the world of Him and to lead a lost world back to Him. "In the beginning—God."

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. ii, 1-3; iii, 1-13; iv, 3-7; vi, 1-8; vii, 1-7, 17-24; xi, 1-9; xii, 1-9; xxii, 1-17; xxviii, 10-22; xlvi, 1-7.

A Miracle of History.

The latest book by the popular pastor of Broadway tabernacle, New York city, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D., is entitled "The New Crusade." One of the chapters is on "Young People of the Church," and in the chapter is the following cheering and inspiring word about Christian Endeavor:

The century was more than three-quarters gone before the third great movement of our age was born. It was in 1881 that the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor started upon its phenomenal career. At the end of eighteen years it has 56,000 societies, with a membership of 3,400,000. But these figures do not tell the full story of its conquests. Like the river of God, it overflows its banks, and in all parts of Christendom new societies with new names spring into existence, begotten by the spirit which the Endeavor movement has created and strengthened and instructed by its examples and its methods. A million and a half of young men and women, although marching under other banners, belong to the great Endeavor army. Five millions of the young people of the world organized into a training school for Christian service in less than two decades! It is one of the miracles of Christian history. The future historian of the Christian church will say that Christendom entered upon a new era that February night when in the city of Portland the first Endeavor society was formed.

Spirituality and Success.

The gibe that we sometimes hear that a man who is eminent for his spiritual life is a weakling in human affairs is as untrue as it is silly. The road to true success here on earth, the road that leads to well balanced, sound, unerring judgment in earthly matters, is the road that leads to God. True spiritual mindedness does not unfit a man for this world, while it is fitting him for another. To be saintly toward the heavens is not to be sickly toward the earth.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D.

In Old Glasgow.

The Glasgow Christian Endeavor union is about seventeen years old and numbers 180 societies, of which sixty-three are Juniors. The total membership is more than 6,000.

Growth in India.

India in two years has added 10,000 members to the Endeavor societies.

THE LION'S SHARE

"An, no, little girl," he muttered with a shake of the head, "I like it better to have you a plain, American gentlewoman, as Aunt Becky would say, who could send me to battle with a nice little quivery smile—sweetheart! Oh, I'm not good enough for you, my dear, my dear." He felt an immense humility as he contrasted his own lot with the loneliness of Keatcham and Mercer and the multitude of solitaries in the world, who had lost, or sadder still, had never possessed, the divine dream that is the only reality of the soul. As such thoughts moved his heart, suddenly in the full tide of hope and thankfulness, it stood still, chilled, as if by the glimpse of an iceberg in summer seas. Yet how absurd; it was only that he had recalled his stoical aunt's most unexpected touch of superstition. Quite in jest he had asked her if she felt any presentiments or queer things in her bones to-night. He expected to be answered that Janet had driven every other anxiety out of her mind; and how was she to break it to Millicent?—or with some such caustic repartee. Instead, she had replied testily: "Yes, I do, Bertie. I feel—horrid! I feel as if something out of the common awful were going to happen. It isn't exactly Atkins, either. Do you reckon it could be the I Suey When, that bamboo-shoots mess we had for dinner?"

Although they spent a good 20 minutes after that, joking over superstitions, and he had repeated to her some of Tracy's and Arnold's most ingenious "spooky stunts," to make the neighborhood keep its distance from Casa Fuerte, and they had laughed freely, she as heartily as he, nevertheless he divined that her smile was a pretense. Suddenly, an unruly tremor shook his own firm spirits. Looking out on the stepped and lanterned arches of the wing, he was conscious of the same tragic endowment of the darkened pile, which had oppressed him that night, weeks before, when he had stood outside on the crest of the hill; and the would-be murderers might have been skulking in the shadows of the pepper trees. He tried vainly to shake off this distempered mood. Although he might succeed for a moment in a lover's absorption, it would come again, insidiously, seeping through his happiness like a fume. After futile attempts to sleep he rose, and still at the bidding of his uncanny and tormenting impulse he took his bath and dressed himself for the day. By this time the ashen tints of dawn were in his chamber and on the fields outside. He stood looking at the unloveliest aspect of nature, a landscape on the sunless side, before the east is red. The air felt lifeless; there were no depths in the pale sky; the azure was a flat tint, opaque and thin, like a poor water-color. While he gazed the motionless trees, live-oaks and olives and palms, were shaken by a mighty wind; the pepper plumes tossed and streamed and tangled like a banner; the great elms along the avenue bent over in a breaking strain. Yet the silken cord of the Holland window shade did not so much as swing. There was not a wing's breath of air. But gradually the earth and cloud vibrated with a strange grinding noise which has been described a hundred times, but never adequately; a sickening crepitation, as of the rocks in the hills scraping and splintering. Before the mind could question the sound, there succeeded an anarchy of uproar. In it was jumbled the crash of trees and buildings, the splintering crackle of glass, the boom of huge chimneys falling and of vast explosions, the hiss of steam, the hurling of timbers and bricks and masses of stone or sand, and the awful rush of frantic water escaping from engine or main.

"Quake, sure's you're born!" said the colonel softly.

Now that his invisible peril was real, was upon him, his spirits leaped up to meet it. He looked coolly about him, noting in his single glance that the house was standing absolutely stanch, neither reeling nor shivering; and that the chimney just opposite his eye had not misplaced a brick. In the same instant he caught up his revolver and ran at his best pace from the room. The hall was firm under his hurrying feet. As he passed the great arched opening on the western balcony he saw an awful sight. Diagonally across from Casa Fuerte was the great house of the California magnate who did not worry his contractor with demands for colonial honesty of workmanship as well as colonial architecture. The stately mansion with its beautiful piazzas and delicate harmony of pillar and pediment, shone white and placid on the eye for a second; then rocked in ghastly wise and collapsed like a house of cards. Simultaneously a torchlike flame streamed into the air. A woeful din of human anguish pierced the inanimate tumult of wreck and crash.

"Bully for Casa Fuerte!" cried the soldier, who now was making a frenzied speed to the other side of the house. He cast a single glance toward the door which he knew belonged to Janet's room; and he thought of the boy, but he ran first to his old aunt. He didn't need to go the whole way. She came out of her door, Janet and Archie at her side. They were all perfectly calm, although in very light and semi-oriental attire. Archie plainly had just plunged out of bed. His eyes were dancing with excitement.

"This house is a dandy, ain't it, Uncle Bertie?" he exclaimed. "Mr. Arnold told me all about the way his father built it; he said it wouldn't bat its eye for an earthquake. It didn't either; but that house opposite is just kindling-wood! Say! here's Cousin Cary; and—look, Uncle Bertie, Mr. Keatcham has got up and he's all dressed. Hullo, Colvin! Don't be scared. It's only a 'quake!" Colvin grinned a sickly grin and stammered, "Yes, sir, quite so, sir." Not an earthquake could shake Colvin out of his manners.

"Are you able to do this, Mr. Keatcham?" young Arnold called breathlessly, plunging into the patio to which they had all instinctively gravitated. Keatcham laughed a short, grunting laugh. "Don't you understand, this is no little every-day 'quake? Look out! Is there a way you can look and not see a spout of flame? I've got to go downtown. Are the machines all right?"

"We must find Randall; the soul has a mortal terror of [illegible] Aunt Rebecca's wellbred accents a unruffled; she appeared a thou stimulated, nothing more; danger al ways acted as tonic on Winter nerves —"Archie, you go put your clothes on this minute, honey. And I suppose we ought to look up Millicent."

The colonel, however, had barely set foot on the threshold when Mrs. Melville appeared, propelling Randall, whom she had rescued from the maid's closet where she was cowering behind her neat frocks, momentarily expecting death, but decently ready for it in gown and shoes. Mrs. Melville herself, in the disorder of the shock, had merely added her best Paris hat and a skeleton bustle to her dainty night-gear. She had not forgotten her kimono; she had only forgotten to don it; and it draggled over her free arm. But her dignity was intact. The instant she beheld her kindred she demanded of them, as if they were responsible, whether this was a sample of the Californian climate. Keatcham blushed and fled with Colvin and the giggling Arnold and Archie, who was too polite to giggle.

Mrs. Winter put on her eye-glasses. "Millicent," said she in the gentlest of tones, "your bustle is on crooked."

One wild glance at the merciless mirror in the carved pier-glass did Mrs. Melville give, and, then, without a word, she fled.

"Randall," said Mrs. Winter, "you look very nice; come and help me dress. There will most likely be some more shocks."

Randall, trembling in every limb, but instinctively assuming a composed mien, followed the undaunted old lady.

The colonel was going in another direction, having heard a telephone bell. He was most anxious to put himself into communication with Birdsall, because not even during the earthquake had he forgotten an uglier peril; and it had occurred to him that Atkins was of a temper not to be frightened by the convulsions of order; but rather to make his account of it. Nor did the message through the telephone tend to reassure him.

The man at the other end of the telephone was Birdsall. No telling how long the telephone service would keep up, he reported; wires were down around the corner; worse, the water mains were spouting; and from where he stood since he felt the first shock he had counted 36 fires. Ten of them were down in the quarter where some of his men had homes; and a field-glass had shown that the houses were all tossed about there; he couldn't keep his men steady; it seemed inhuman to ask them to stay when their wives and children might be dying; of course it was his damn luck to have all married men from down there.

"Well, I reckon you will have to let them go; but watch out," begged the colonel, "for you know the men we are after will take advantage of general disorder to get in their dirty work. Now is the most dangerous time."

Birdsall knew it; he had had intimations that some men were trying to sneak up the hill; they had been turned back. They pretended to be some wandering railway workers; but Birdsall distrusted them. He—no use to ring! Vain to tap the carriage of the receiver! The telephone was dead, jarred out of existence somewhere beyond their ken.

By this time the cold sunlight of the woefullest day that San Francisco had ever seen was spread over the earth. The city was spotted with blood-red spouts of flames. The ruin of the earthquake had hardly been visible from their distance, although it was ugly enough and of real importance; but, even in the brief space which they in Casa Fuerte had waited before they should set forth, fires had enkindled in all directions, most dreadful to see; nor did there seem to be any check upon them.

Tracy had waked the domestic staff, and, dazed but stoical, they were getting breakfast. But Keatcham could not wait; he was in a cold fury of haste to get to the town.

$2,000 FOR LINCOLN DAY CELEBRATION

The House at Trenton Friday passed the first bill to go through this session. The measure was drafted by Colonel James F. Connelly, Newark's city clerk, to permit first-class cities to appropriate $2,000 for celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of Lincoln's birth February 12. Second-class cities may appropriate $1,000 and all other municipalities are limited to not more than $500.

Colonel Connelly went to Trenton Monday as a representative of the city of Newark and of the Grand Army of the Republic. Newark desires to work with the war veterans in celebrating the centenary and to meet the expense. The city clerk is determined to secure the necessary legislative authority, and with his usual perseverance and success had a bill introduced last night, put to final reading under suspended rules and recalled for amendment today, to be passed just before adjournment for the week. The bill will now go to the Senate. It will be in Governor Fort's hands by next Tuesday.

Assemblyman William P. Martin, of Essex, introduced the Connelly measure and handled the matter on the floor of the House.

Patriotic Instructor Uriah Seely, of the New Jersey Department, G. A. R., is chairman of a department committee to arrange for the celebration of the Lincoln centenary generally, and Colonel Connelly is a member of the committee. The bill passed yesterday is the first step in the plan to make the day memorable.

FAMILY CLAIM HAGEY.

Was Held for Flagging Pennsylvania Train at Deans.

Daniel Hagey, who was locked up at New Brunswick last week for flagging a Pennsylvania Railroad train at Deans, was claimed Tuesday by his daughter and taken back to his home at Denver, near Lancaster, Pa. Miss Hagey said that her father had been acting queerly since Thanksgiving Day and they did not know what was the matter with him. They kept a watch, but he slipped away from them about a week ago, and although they made diligent search and wide inquiry they were unable to learn anything about him until they received a message from the New Brunswick authorities.

Hagey has been a traveling salesman for twenty-three years, selling pottery for Trenton and Pennsylvania concerns. He has been successful and is prosperous and business troubles could not have affected his mind. He is not a drinking man.

Explosion of Water-Back.

The water-back in a range belonging to Frank Ribblett, Milton avenue Rahway, exploded Tuesday morning when a fire was started. The water in the pipes had frozen during the night. Mrs. Ribblett was thrown to the floor and her clothing was ignited by blazing coals. She received bad bruises and burns. Mr. Ribblett extinguished the flames. A young colored boy, a general helper, employed in the kitchen, was dust-covered, scorched and scared almost to death. The flames were out before the fire department arrived. Mrs. Ribblett will be forced to stay in bed a day or two on account of her injuries.

Last Rites for Nonagenarian.

The funeral of William Corbett, ninety years old, will take place this afternoon from his late residence at Logansville. The services will be conducted by Rev. E. W. Hall, curate of St. Mark's Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. John T. Reeve, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Corbett was born in 1819 in New York city and was of French descent. His early life was spent in New York, where he engaged in shipbuilding in partnership with his brother. In 1849 he removed to Green Village and later to Logansville, where he resided until his death. He was twice married.

Dean Gessner Will Keep Pact.

Dean Martin Gessner, pastor of St. Patrick's church, who was an intimate friend of the late Bishop McQuaid, of Rochester, expressed deep regret Friday on being told of the demise of his friend. "He was the best friend I ever had," said the dean. "Many years ago we were talking together, and we made an agreement between ourselves that whoever should be the first to die should always be remembered by the other in his prayers. God has called him first, and I shall not forget our agreement."

PARK BOWLERS CERTAIN TO CAPTURE THE TROPHY

The Park Club bowling team has cinched the Central Journal Bowling League championship, with a total of twenty victories out of twenty-four games rolled. The locals took two of the three games with Newark Bay, at the latter place, last night, giving them the championship by a good margin. As a result they now become permanent owners of the league trophy, this making the third win for the crack bowlers.

The high team average is 880 and the Parks also hold the high team score, 970. The locals had their bowling togs on last night when in the two games won by them they put up scores of 946 and 914 against 839 and 874 for Newark Bay. The third game was lost by a score of 896 to 903.

In the first game Mulford rolled 213 and Ball 206, while Barlow materially helped the good work with a 190 and Daniel put up a 183. In the second game, while no double centuries were recorded, the Parks almost reached those figures and kept a safe distance from their opponents. Ball put up a 193, while Barlow rolled 188 and Mulford a 182.

Great excitement prevailed in the third game. Despite the fact that Long rolled a 206, Ball 203 and Barlow 197, they could not overcome the lead obtained by Newark Bay The match was noted for high scores throughout, and the Parks, who were out for a record, set the pace from the start. The scores:

GOLF.

It turns out that the dire threats which have come out of the West concerning secession from the United States Golf Association have had some weight. But it will probably take one year at least to accomplish the fell purpose. The revolutionary members of the Western Golf Association, true to their promise, offered an amendment to the bylaws to change the name of the association to that of the American Golf Association, and by so doing take down the territorial bars, so as to make it national in its scope, but this proposition failed in its purpose. Those who are opposed to what they see fit to call the "autocratis, capricious, undemocratic mutual admiration society" had a chance, however, to air their grievances. The more radical seemed to feel that the amendment would turn out to be the big stick to accomplish needed reforms in the parent body.

WETUMPKA BOWLERS SWAMPED BY WOODMEN.

The Wetumpka bowling team didn't have a ghost of a show against the Westfield Woodmen in a Fraternal league series at Johnny Campbell's alleys last night. The Red Men failed to reach even the 600 mark in aggregate tallies and lost all three games by wide margins. The Westfielders rolled in their usual good form. The scores:

Mayor Sebring was an officer in the Confederate army and had a long and honorable career as a judge on the bench in Florida.

Forced to Withdraw Tickets.

While recognizing the importance of continuing the students' commutation tickets on railroads, the New Jersey State Railroad Commission yesterday handed down a decision declaring that under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, it was forced to do so, as that body had claimed that the school tickets were an unjust discrimination in favor of a certain class. The New Jersey Central has abolished the school tickets to and from places outside the State.

VINCENT COLYER DIES AT DAUGHTER'S HOME

Vincent Colyer, aged sixty-four years, died last night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John W. Kirkner, on West Seventh street, following a protracted illness. Three years ago he underwent a severe operation for a trouble of long standing and he never fully recovered. Mr. Colyer's home was in New York, where he resided the greater part of his life. He came to Plainfield on New Year's Day and had been with his daughter since that time.

Mr. Colyer held a position of great responsibility in the New York postoffice for thirty-six years, and was a man of great executive ability. He frequently visited his daughter in this city. DOCTOR'S DREAM TRUE; CHIEF DOANE HAPPY

Through a strange coincidence, Chief T. O. Doane this morning recovered a rubber tire which came off his gig several weeks ago, while on the way to a fire. The loss of the tire was advertised in the local newspapers, but nothing was heard of the tire until today. Chief Doane was passing the home of Dr. Marcus L. Clawson on Park avenue, this morning, when the latter stopped him and asked whether the department had lost a rubber tire. Being informed that it had, the doctor replied that he had such a tire in his stable and it was returned to the chief.

Dr. Clawson then related the interesting part of the story. He said that last night, while asleep, he dreamed that Chief Doane was on his way to answer an alarm of fire and while driving at top speed, one of the rubber tires came off a wheel. The dream so impressed itself on his mind that when he awoke this morning he decided to relate the incident to Chief Doane. In this way the tire was recovered. In his conversation with the chief, Dr. Clawson said that he found the tire in the street and placed it in the barn awaiting an owner.

RULING OF EXCISE BOARD

Ten Signatures to Be Required on All Liquor License Renewal Applications.

THE COURT SO DECREES.

Licensees to Receive Notice Tonight —Councilmanic Committee to Be Strict this Year.

All applicants for license to sell liquor in Plainfield the coming year will be required to furnish the ten signers which must accompany their application, when t s presented to the Common Council. The decision to return to the former method was reached yesterday by the Councilmanic license committee following a conference. Justice Garertson within the past few days has given an opinion on the subject and Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh accordingly has informed the committee that to remove any doubt as to the legality of granting licenses, has advised that the signatures be required of all applicants.

A few years ago the Common Council decided that in the case of license holders the ten signatures would not be necessary as it was simply a repetition each year of the names accompanying such petitions In the case of new applications, however, the signatures were required. All the liquor dealers will be notified tonight of the new ruling so that they can govern themselves accordingly when applying for licenses.

Although there has been no official statement on the subject, it is known that the license committee this year will require an absolute conformity to the law under which licenses are granted and anw infraction will be treated accordingly.

MISS EMILY CORRIGAN THE BRIDE OF JOHN CORRIGAN.

Miss Emily Corrigan, daughter of Patrick Corrigan, of West Fourth street, and John Corrigan, of Philadelphia, were married at St. Mary's church, Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock by Father B. M. Bogan, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The bride was gowned in a grey traveling suit with hat to match and carried bridal roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Corrigan, who wore a suit of brown cloth with hat to match and carried pink carnations. The best man was Joseph McDermott, of Philadelphia, cousin of the groom.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's father, which was attended by one hundred guests from this and other cities. The bride received many handsome gifts. Both the church and house were attractively decorated for the event. Mr and Mrs. Corrigan are now residing in West Philadelphia, where the groom is employed. He built and completely furnished the home for their occupancy.

Mrs. Edward Weed.

Mrs. Edward Weed, mother of Frank W. Weed, of West Front street, died at 6:30 o'clock this morning at her home in New York, following a protracted illness. A few days ago she suffered a stroke of paralysis, accompanied by other complications and her death was not unexpected. Mrs. Weed had been a resident of New York for many years and was well advanced in years.

The funeral service will be held from the late residence, 108 West 84th street, New York, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Rev. Geo. A Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, will officiate. The burial will be at Oswego, N. Y.

Bechstein to Remove.

A. C. Bechstein, who has been living a greater part of the year at his beautiful summer home on Park avenue, near Oak Tree, has sold the house and thirty acres of land adjoining to a wealthy New York man and will vacate within thirty days and take up his residence in New York city. The action of Mr. Bechstein is a source of great regret to the residents of Plainfield and Oak Tree, who have appreciated his civic pride in local affairs, and his interest in Marconnier chapel.

New Vaudeville Makes a Hit.

The new vaudeville bill put on at Proctor's yesterday and which will remain for the balance of the week made a hit with big audiences in the afternoon and evening. The La Franc Sisters sing operatic and popular songs, both having exceptional voices. Walsh brothers give a fine exhibition of buck and wing and clog dancing. Both teams were recalled many times last night.

SCHUYLER'S FRIENDS CIRCULATE PETITION

Friends of Sidney S. Schuyler, who will probably be chosen to fill the unexpired term of Robert E. Hall in the Common Council have obtained a large number of signers to a petition recommending his selection. Most of the taxpayers in the hill section of the Netherwood district have attached their names to the document which will be presented at the next meeting of the city fathers after Mr. Hall's resignation is accepted.

The Second ward members are divided on a candidate and it is likely that they will make no recommendation to their colleagues. Mr. Schuyler has planned to go abroad next month but will be absent only a for a few weeks. Another candidate was mentioned yesterday in the person of T. M. Day, Jr. The others in the field are Robert H. McCready and Wilbur S. Alling.

Some of the Second ward people favor a political meeting to settle the contest.

MR. OTTERSON'S HOUSE IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

A fire at the home of A. L. Otterson, located at 1,333 Evergreen avenue, gave the city department a two-hour fight, last night, and resulted in damage estimated at $1,000. The flames started in the basement, evidently from hot ashes placed in a barrel, and because of their location proved hard to get at. Despite the drawback, they were kept from getting through the first floor and none of the living rooms were touched.

The alarm was first given over the telephone at 9:24 by Mrs. Howard Colby, who lives directly next the Otterson residence, and Chief Doane went out with No. 2 truck, the chemical engine and the ladder truck. On arriving at the house, it was found there were not sufficient men to fight the flames and box 27 was pulled to secure help. The basement was so hot and the smoke so thick at first it was impossible for anyone to get in until after the chemical stream had been played through a window for some time. The flames for the most part were in the forward part of the basement, directly beneath the reception room. It was 11:20 before the recall was sounded.

The damage estimate is quite large because of the fact that the greater part of the floor beams will have to be replaced, making it necessary to tear out the hard wood flooring and part of the side walls. The loss is covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Otterson are in the south at the present time and the only member of the family at home was the latter's father, who is partially an invalid. He suffers from heart trouble and the excitement affected him somewhat but not seriously.

The names of Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, Herbert W. Parker and W. S. Angleman have been added to the committee on the Lincoln centenary celebration, making the entire membership thirty-five. The first meeting for organization will be held at Mayor Fisk's office tomorrow night and a large attendance is expected.

Sub-committees will be appointed at that time. Speakers will also be arranged for. In all probability the observance will be held at the First Baptist church.

On the Trail of Burglars?

Constable William Reilly, of South Plainfield, whose store was looted a few nights ago, believes that he has a clue to the thieves and it is said that arrests are expected soon. The manner in which the store was entered shows that the thieves were well acquainted with conditions and the contents of the place. In all about $100 worth of goods was taken.

The directors of the Plainfield Trust Company elected these officers for the coming year at their meeting held yesterday afternoon for that purpose: President, O. T. Waring, first vice-president, A. REV. MR. CONOVER TO SUCCEED REV. MR. BROEK

Rev. Garret M. Conover, of Rocky Hill, who is well-known and has relatives in this city, has received a call to become pastor of the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, to succeed Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city. The decision was reached at a congregational meeting held at the Asbury Park church, last night, when the action to call Mr. Conover was unanimous.

Whether Mr. Conover will accept the call is not known. It is understood that he has two other calls under consideration from leading Reformed churches. He has been in the ministry fifteen years and has been successful as a preacher and pastor. He recently preached in the Asbury Park church and made a favorable impression. Mrs. Conover, his wife, has always been a great help to his work of the ministry.

TO ENLARGE SCHOOL IN DUNELLEN BOROUGH

At a meeting of the voters of Dunellen held in the borough hall, last night, it was decided to build a two-story addition to the Whittier School, which will comprise two rooms, each 23x25 feet. To meet the expense for the improvement a bond issue was authorized. There will be ten bonds of $500 denomination each, the sum of $5,000 being necessary for the work.

The meeting was called by the Board of Education to discuss and act on the proposition and J. Newton Apgar was made chairman with Wilson Frederick, secretary. Several citizens spoke concerning the improvement and not a dissenting voice was heard. It is proposed to begin work on the addition as soon as the frost gets out of the ground.

WANT A NATIONAL CHILD LABOR BUREAU

The Union county branch of the State Charities Aid Association, has sent to United States Senator John Kean a petition asking him to use his influence in securing the adoption of a bill providing for a national bureau for the care of children. This movement is in the interest of the child labor law which has aroused interest in all parts of the country.

In addition to the petition sent by the county branch, Miss Tiffany, of this city, who is also identified with the State Charities Aid Association, has personally written a letter to Senator Kean in the interest of the proposed measure. It is intended to improve and better the conditions of child labor and prohibit the employment of children under a certain age in factories and other places. The Plainfield Mothers' Association is also interested in the question and it will also send a petition to Washington urging the passage of the proposed law.

There were also several fine vocal selections rendered by Mrs. Edward McCrea. Friends were present from New York, Newark and this city. Supper was served at midnight.

GET HUMOROUS ANSWERS FROM WOULD-BE CITIZENS

A United States Senator serves thirty-five years and the President of the United States makes all the laws unassisted, according to one of the applicants applying for his final naturalization papers in the Court of Common Pleas before Judge Atwater at Elizabeth yesterday. It is hardly necessary to say that this applicant did not receive his papers. He was not rejected, however, for Special United States Attorney Jas J. Reilly, who was examining the applicants, held the case over until March, advising the man in the meantime to study just a little of the constitution. This particular applicant was not the only one who was told to study a little, for there were many before and after him on the axamination stand who made just as many humorous answers to questions.

Today was "naturalization day" in court, and long before the "crier" called the opening of the tribunal the court-room was jammed with the citizens whose native homes are in many parts of the world.

During the first several hours about eleven applicants were examined. Five of this number received their papers, two were rejected and the others were continued over to the next naturalization day, which is one the third Tuesday in March.

Many peculiar and humorous answers were given to the questions of Mr. Reilly. One applicant said that the Legislature meets twice a year in this State and that the United States Senators are elected in Washington. Another said that he was too old to remember what the Senators and Congressman went to Washington for, but he guessed it was to "make the law and everything like that." One man, when asked what his business was, said that he was a "workingman." One claimed that the judges in New Jersey were elected by the direct vote of the people.

Many points were taken by Mr. Reilly in his examination. One was that an applicant cannot substitute a witness whose name did not appear on the first papers unless the witness was sick or left the State. If a witness does not care to come, Mr. Reilly said that the United States had made special provisions whereby he could be compelled to do so by subpoena.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

"CHARITY NIGHT" WAS A DISMAL FAILURE

The returns from the "Charity Day and Night" affair have been made and it is learned that there was a net profit of $108.50 to be divided among the local charities according to the plans of a committee, of which Mayor Charles J. Fisk is the chairman. Harry S. Sanderson, representing Proctor's theatre, sent a check for $84.50 to W. F. Arnold, treasurer of the committee, as a percentage of the profits from that playhouse on the day set apart for charity. Ames Brooks, as treasurer of the committee in charge of the bachelors' dance at the Hartridge School auditorium, has forwarded a check for $40 as the profits from that affair. The advertising expenses aggregated over $16.

No profits were reported from the New Plainfield theatre, where "45 Minutes from Broadway" was presented; the Bijou or Park theatres.

REV. DR. W. R. RICHARDS TO SPEAK HERE SUNDAY

The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be re-opened Sunday for the regular services of worship, following the extensive alterations. The communion service will be held in the morning and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, will be in charge, and receive new members. He will be assisted by Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel and Rev. F. D. Tildon, of Bethel chapel.

At the evening service there will be special music by the choir. There will also be a brief address by the pastor in relation to the re-opening of the edifice and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, former pastor, will speak.

ARRANGING FOR STATE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

A largely-attended meeting of the local Christian Endeavor Congress was held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night, when plans for the State Christian Endeavor convention to be held here in 1909, were discussed. Local President Clarence B. LaRue was in the chair. State President J. T. Sproull, made some suggestions relative to the arrangements for the convention.

While the matter has not been definitely settled, it is more than likely that the convention will be held at the First Baptist church, and the First M. E. church will be used for the overflow meetings. The date for the gathering is October 6, 7 and 8. Because of the fact that Plainfield is so easy of access it is believed that it will be one of the largest and best in recent years. The program will include a number of prominent speakers from all parts of the country.

Installed as Desk Seregant.

Sergeant Herbert L. Overbaugh, who has been doing outside duty at night since his promotion from patrolman, has been regularly installed as day desk sergeant at police headquarters. He will be in charge of department affairs during Chief Kiely's absence, thus insuring prompt response to urgent calls. The innovation has already proven a commendable move.

P. H. S. Against Westfield.

The basketball team of the P. H. S. will journey to Westfield this afternoon and meet the team from the high school at that place. A game was scheduled with Newark Academy for today, but it was cancelled by the Newark management. The lineup for today's game follows: Forwards, Prior, Doane. Clarke, guards, Snyder, Robins, Riffert; centre, Wilcox.

"Knife Night" at the Theatre.

The weekly "try-out" will be the bill at the New Plainfield theatre tonight and it is needless to say that there will be plenty of fun on tap. The program will include ten acts in addition to the regular bill of moving pictures and songs. At last week's "try-out" the theatre's attendance record was broken.

HAD NO WITNESSES TO PROVE HE'D BEEN ROBBED

A gray haired old Frenchman, giving his name as Eugene Lapone, appeared at the borough police station yesterday morning with a tale of having been robbed of $47, and beaten the night before, while visiting at the home of a supposed friend on Chatham street. He declared that after giving up his money he had been kicked into the street.

Chief George Weiss went with the aged man to the house where he said the robbery had occurred and arrested Frank Terro. His wife was also declared to be implicated, but she was allowed to remain at home until time for the hearing yesterday afternoon.

Justice Snape dismissed the charge against the couple because of a lack of evidence to substantiate the claim of Lapone. The defendants declared that the man was drunk when he came to their place, but those to whom the old man appealed shortly after the alleged robbery were willing to deny that statement.

PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE THE BOARDS OF TRADE

Milton Mendel, Hugh B. Sweeny and F. A. Duttenhofer, representing the Board of Trade, attended a conference held in the office of the New York and New Jersey Realty Exchange, Terminal building, New York, yesterday afternoon, upon the invitation of President Kempner of the Exchange. The purpose of the meeting, as outlined by Mr. Kempner was to adopt a plan for the consolidation of Boards of Trade and similar bodies within the section of the State known as Northern New Jersey, the idea being to develop this section. Whenever possible every effort should be made to bring manufacturing industries to this part of the State.

It is also planned that each organization shall have a number of representatives in the central body, the number to be decided later and these representatives shall keep their various organizations posted as to what is being accomplished in New York and vicinity. It is further planned to advertise this section of the State as a whole, without mentioning any particular locality.

All inquiries to the organization will be open to all of the representatives to be used for the advancement of business interests. It was pointed out that this scheme would cause a strong feeling of rivalry among brokers in various towns and make them hustle for business and also make them more interested in their own localities. No definite action was taken at this meeting, the idea being to present the matter to the various organizations, through their representatives so that it can be taken up at the respective meetings to follow soon. Later another meeting will be held to perfect the details for a permanent organization.

SUGGESTS ETHICAL CODE FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The teachers of the city and borough gathered at the Somerset school yesterday afternoon and listened to a lecture by O. I. Woodley, superintendent of Passaic schools, under the title "Professional Growth." He believed that the teachers should have a code of ethics, just as is found among physicians, as teaching was as much a profession as the practice of medicine.

The relations between the teachers and the superintendent should develope in courtesy, he said, and the teachers' attitude toward the pupils should be confidential. In speaking of the development of character, Mr. Woodley said that what would be considered ideal, in one locality, would not be in another. Defining character, he said that the best one is that which embodies the greatest number of ideals in the circumstances in which that one lives.

Going Back to England.

E. H. Clevely, the former North avenue restaurant proprietor, who recently returned from London and is now living in New York, has decided to return to England. He will sail for the other side within a week or ten days. "Ted" declares that conditions in this country have changed greatly within the past year or so and that business opportunities are not what they used to be.

Pastor Shoop One of the Speakers.

The new pipe organ recently installed in the Methodist Episcopal church, High Bridge, was dedicated last night with imposing ceremonies. Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, was among those who spoke. The organ is one of the finest in that section of Hunterdon county.

"BIG BROTHERS" AT FEAST

Impetus Given to New Movement by Speakers at Y.M. C. A. Annual Banquet.

MANY GOOD SPEECHES MADE.

Association Now in Perfect Working Order, President J. W. Gavett Reports—Wants Athletic Field.

That the Y. M. C. A. is a most popular institution was demonstrated last night at its annual banquet in the association auditorium. One hundred and twenty men enjoyed the excellent dinner and heard with satisfaction the sound expressions and bright sayings of a number of good speakers. As each yearly banquet has been bigger than the last, so this year's was grander than the rest.

Joseph W. Gavett, President. —Photo by Langhorne.

Five long tables accommodated the guests, while the speakers' table occupied the platform. Vases of cut flowers and large globular lamps adorned the feasting boards, and added beauty to the brilliantly lighted room.

Joseph W. Gavett, president of the association, was toastmaster, and seated at the speaker's table, besides Mr. Gavett, were: H. A. Wheeler, of New York, general secretary of the Big Brothers' Association; H. O. Williams, secretary international committee; W. D. Murray, Rev. John Y. Broek, Henry M. Maxson, H. O. Newman, A. B. Beers and E. L. Bonney.

The address of H. A. Wheeler was an interesting explanation of the "Big Brothers Movement," which has for its object the aiding and encouraging of unfortunate boys who either have no parents or have indifferent fathers and mothers. Each member of the association devotes his attention to one boy and becomes a "big brother" to him. If the lad is old enough to work he secures a position for him, and for the other members of the family as well, and helps them in other ways if they are needy.

Having secured the boy's friendship and confidence, the "big brother" finds out his weak points. In the case of a school boy, sometimes his studies have become a burden to him and he stumbles along, finally abandoning them altogether and giving away to idle companionship With such a youth the "big brother" wins out by helping him to overcome the thing that was a bugbear at school. In every way possible he helps the boy to fight against harassing troubles, and to fortify himself against temptations. He takes him to clean shows and places of interest, thus giving the lad a cheerful view of life.

Mr. Wheeler pointed out that if there were great temptations and pitfalls for the boys who have good parents, it must be even worse for the tenement children who have none, or are being reared by drunkards. He stated that more than ninety per cent. of the criminals are unskilled workmen, and asked how, if the boys grew up without any training for work, they could be expected to be anything else but criminals. They would naturally resort to crime to gain a livlihood, he declared.

One of the most satisfactory and fruitful plans that had been adopted in New York, Mr. Wheeler said, was the gymnasium class for slum boys. At each association building classes for these lads were being accommodated, and the interest that the youngsters displayed in them proved their great value, furnishing innocent and healthful amusement and giving the young minds something to occupy their attention and look forward to.

W. D. Murray, former president of the association, in a brief address, mentioned the wonderful growth of the Y. M. C. A. in this city and in Court Paterson No. 4, Foresters of America, celebrated its twenty-ninth anniversary with an entertainment and banquet in Foresters' Hall, Main street, Paterson, last evening. One of the features of the evening was the presentation of a substantial token of appreciation from the lodge members to Past Chief Ranger C. R. Akhurst, the supervising deputy.

William Bogart, of 176 Jackson street, Paterson, engaged in a scuffle with a companion a week ago, during which the former's ear was badly lacerated with a pair of scissors. Yesterday the wound began to bleed profusely, and Bogart was taken to the General Hospital. There the physicians found that three arteries were severed. Four sutures were required to close the wounded parts.

CROWS WERE TOO LATE TO HONOR EDGAR POE.

School children at Basking Ridge are convinced that although a day late the great flock of crows which settled in the pines near here last night, came with the intention of helping them observe Edgar A. Poe's birthday, which was celebrated Tuesday. The pupils believe the birds were misinformed as to the date, and desired to add an effective background to the recitation of Poe's "Raven" in the school.

The crows arrived early last evening, and it is estimated that many thousands of them were in the flock. Their cawing made a noise that attracted many people to the spot, and every branch of scores of trees were weighted with the birds. The presence of such an immense number of crows here has not been known in years. The sky was black when the flock began to settle upon the trees to spend the night. It is probable that they will use the pines as a temporary rookery for several nights.

REQUEST FOR TICKET REVEALS WOMAN'S DEATH.

Suffering with pneumonia, Mrs. Mary Garofano died in her seat on a Lackawanna train yesterday afternoon as she was on her way from Bernardsville to the Overlook Hospital in Summit. She was accompanied by a nurse, Miss Emma Reed, who did not notice that her charge was dead until the conductor came to collect tickets. The body was taken from the train at Murray Hill and sent back on the next train to Bernardsville.

At Summit Health Commissioner Lawrence wanted an undertaker to take charge of the body, but the nurse's objections prevailed and the body was returned to Bernardsville.

Mrs. Garofano, who was thirty-five years old, was indicted by the last grand jury for selling whiskey without a license last August from her house in the Italian quarter. She was convicted and refused a new trial. Her illness from pneumonia prevented her appearing in Somerville for sentence this week. She leaves a husband and four children.

FEARED EARTHQUAKE IN BASKING RIDGE HOMES.

A shaking of the ground in Basking Ridge was so severe Wednesday afternoon that many residents took fright fearing an earthquake. It is now believed that the dustrubance was caused by the explosion at the Forcite works at Lake Hopatcong.

At the home of Luther Childs, the windows shook with violence and the crockery was displaced on the shelves. At the home of Edward M. Waldron, similar circumstances caused a temporary panic in the household.

At the home of William J. Kearn, a lawyer, the house shook with such force that the family was fearful of a repetition of the seismic disturbance in Italy. It was not until information of the explosion became general that the town was calmed. The shock was also plainly felt in Bernardsville where much alarm was occasioned.

Chinaware Case Decision.

New York, Jan. 22.—Another step in a long-drawn out customs controversy was taken Tuesday when Judge Martin, in the United States Circuit Court, handed down a decision in the Haviland chinaware cases in favor of Haviland & Co. The court held that the prices at which the firm is invoicing its entries are correct. A special board increased the appraisals sixteen and one-half per cent. The differences between the government and the importers began several years ago, and were the subject of an exhaustive investigation by the Treasury authorities.

STIFF JOINTS AND THEIR CURE.

Do you feel stiff and sore upon rising in the morning, and have you a stack of bottles of new-fangled liniment ornamenting your dressing table of chiffonier?

That old remedy, beloved of our grandmothers—goose greese—is still considered an excellent cure for stiff joints. Probably the friction and hard rubbing have more to do with the cure than the special variety of grease, and if the goose product is not at hand, hot vaseline, lard and turpentine mixed, or even hot olive oil are excellent lubricators.

If the stiff joints come from rheumatism, internal remedies should be taken as well. Litha water will counteract the first endencies, but should the pains continue it is best to consult a physician.

Should stiffness arise from overexertion, before rubbing with grease take a bath as hot as one can bear it. A few handfuls of rock salt added will heighten the good effects.

After greasing, special exercise for the joints affected help in the limbering process. If the shoulders are stiff, for instance, try the circular head and shoulder movements, first to the right, later to the left. The lower part of the back can be quickly limbered by raising the hands over the head and bending with them to the floor, thus bringing into play all the waist muscles.

A stiff knee should be rubbed with a circular movement, and the lower part of the leg should be slowly moved backward and forward. Any of these exercises may seem somewhat painful at first, but will give relief if presevered in.

NATIVE HEADDRESS.

"One of the most interesting things that came under my observation was the odd manner in which the people wore their hair," said Dr. Harry Dorsey, describing a recent visit to New Guinea and the leading traits and characteristics of the inhabitants, known as Papuans. "One type wore the hair standing up from the head at a length of seven inches or more. It was trimmed with wonderful regularity and with mathematical accuracy. The hair was greased with cocoanut oil and painted red. At a distance it looked like a rising sun."

Another type of the inhabitants who wear their hair in an unusual fashion was described by Dr. Dorsey.

"Starting from the forehead," he said, "the hair is brushed back over the scalp and hangs down to the waist. It is a perfect mass—an intricate jungle. I am sure it was never combed and it was impossible to run the fingers through it. At a distance it looks like a cap with the visor turned downward.

"One other odd type of hair dressing—coiffure, if you will—was observed on this visit. The hair was gathered at the front and back, then brought together above the head, where it was enclosed in a basket-like cylinder. The end spread out about two inches. Apparently these caps are never removed from the head."—Baltimore Sun.

Natural History.

A certain father who is fond of putting his boys through natural history examinations is often surprised by their mental agility. He recently asked them to tell him "what animal is satisfied with the least nourishment."

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

The Harvard football management announces that a game has been provisionally arranged with Cornell for next year, to be played in Cambridge on November 6. The approval of the Harvard athletic committee is required to make the arrangement final, but this will undoubtedly be forthcoming. This game will take place on the corresponding date to that on which Harvard and Carlisle played last fall, but Harvard will not give up the game with the Indians for next fall. Instead the game with Carlisle will probably be played on October 23, if their team will consent to that date.

This will be the first time that Cornell and Harvard have met on the gridiron, though relations between the two colleges have been very friendly for some years. It looks as though Brown would be the one to be dropped from the Harvard schedule next fall. Their date at the end of October has already been given to West Point for the newly arranged game, and it is not considered likely that Brown would be given the last date before the Yale game, which has always been reserved for Dartmouth. It is still possible that Brown will get October 16 if they will consent to play so early in the season.

The dates so far definitely arranged for next fall are: West Point, October 30; Cornell, November 6; Yale, November 20. Both West Point and Cornell are new teams for Harvard as compared with the 1908 schedule, though the Army and Harvard played up to two years ago.

GOLF.

The many New Yorkers who annually play golf over the links of the Country Club of Pittsfield will be interested to learn that two professionals have been engaged for the coming season. They are Tom Clark and John Irving. The former had previously been attached to clubs at Portsmouth, N. H.; Providence, and Wilmington, Del. Irving was at one time connected with the St. Andrews Golf Club, the Ardsley Club and the Fall River Golf Club. Both "pros" intend to compete in all the nearby open tournaments this year.

Several changes are being made in the Pittsfield course, and when the work has been completed the playing distance will have been considerably lengthened. A new tee at the second hole will make that 565 yards long, instead of 476, as formerly. Sixty yards have also been added to the fourth hole, which is now 335 yards long. A water hazard has been placed in front of the tee and the green is now guarded by a bunker. As the green is on an elevation, the approach is difficult. It is planned to lengthen the first hole to 420 yards and have the green guarded by a brook.

An international professional tournament has been announced to take place over the North Berwick course, in Scotland, on July 2 and 3. Already entries have been received from the leading "pros" of Great Britain and the Continent, but the North Berwick officials are desirous of players from America, as well. First prize will be $375, and provision has been made for twenty moneys. The competition will consist of seventy-two holes at medal play.

Plainfield, N. J., January 22, 1909.

Not only should be members of the police force be given an eight hour day, but fair play in other respects. Shifting from night to day duty and vice versa and a day off duty occasionally are among these. Such treatment is accorded elsewhere; why not here?

The fund contributed by the people of Plainfield through this paper for Red Cross relief work in Italy is but one of innumerable instances where they have responded to appeals in the name of humanity. No city in the State, in proportion to population, has done anywhere near so well. In fact it would be difficult to find in the whole country a community of 25,000 which would quickly raise as large a sum as was given here. In addition to the $1,018.86 sent through this paper, at least $2,000 was given through other channels by local residents.

A correspondent makes the suggestion that the best way of preventing any friction in selecting a Second warder to fill the unexpired term of Robert E. Hall in the Common Council would be to settle the contest at a ward meeting. Such gatherings do not by any means result in reflecting the public sentiment for experience has shown that political meetings of the sort are generally packed by the more active boomers of some aggressive candidate, and that the larger percentage of the tax payers do not attend. A better plan would be by petition. The friends of one candidate have already obtained a large number of signatures to such a document and it would not be a bad idea for the supporters of the other avowed candidates to do likewise.

Mourning Costume.

Not necessarily must one leave fashion lines from a mourning dress. One of the most becoming dresses imaginable was a high-waisted one made entirely of black crepe over dull black silk. It was slightly en train and was worn with a long directoire coat of black broadcloth trimmed with crepe. The hat was a small style, the brim uplifted at the left side, with a graceful veil arrangement that decorated the hat from the front to the back and fell to the shoulders. The slashed hip seams of the coat were joined with dull cord trimming.

the State. He announced that the thirty-fifth State convention which is held every two years, would take place this year at Atlantic City, February 11 to 14, inclusive.

The annual report of President Joseph W. Gavett showed that the association is having an unprecedented growth. He praised all connected with the organization, from the officials to the janitor. The latter, Henry Weller, he considered to be a prize. "The entire association is now in perfect working order for the first time in its history," he said.

Mr. Gavett's chief desire now is to secure an athletic field, and he announced that splendid progress had already been made. A $200 donation had been received from Mr. Hooley, who is very much interested in the project, and who has promised to assist in raising the balance of the money needed. Mr. Gavett has in mind a tract of land which is near a car line and can be bought for $4,000. An energetic effort is to be made to raise a sufficient proportion of the amount necessary to secure possession.

President Gavett's message follows:

"To the Members of the Y. M. C. A.—The most notable feature of the association's religious work for the year has been the maintenance of the Sunday afternoon meetings with an average attendance of 128 men for 31 Sundays. Since the Religious Work committee adopted the policy of bringing to this service speakers whose personalities and whose themes had a particular appeal to young men, it has become more and more a place where young men come to find help and inspiration. Following the appeals of Dr. Munhall, and William Phillips Hall, three men decided for the christian life. Our Bible study work has been weak. A total attendance of 150 in three classes is reported. One of these classes, however, ought to furnish the nucleus of a Bible study committee which is essential to the promotion of vigorous work in this department. Seven shop classes at the Scott Press Works have been held with an attendance of 675.

"We have looked forward for years to the time when we could support our own representative on the foreign field. This would mean the raising of $1,200 annually, that amount being the foreign secretary's salary. As previous contributions of the association to foreign work have never amounted to more than $400, it would be necessary to provide $800 additional to realize this hope. It is gratifying to be able to report that two generous friends offered last month to provide this amount, and that in the future, the Plainfield Association will have a representative on the foreign field in the person of A. C. Hull, who is soon to take the secretaryship at Santiago, Chili. Plainfield thus will be the second association in New Jersey to undertake the support of a foreign secretary, Trenton being the other. It is not at all improbable, indeed it is practically certain that this forward movement means at least the doubling of the volume of our work once the work in Santiago is well under way. Mr. Mott states in his annual review of the work of the foreign department, that through maintaining an educational director in Seoul, the Grand Rapids Association more than doubled its enrollment in educational classes; that Trenton multiplies by two the adults in its Bible study groups by maintaining a secretary in Madras.

"All the departments of the association are intended to make for one end, the making of the young man a full size man. A boy that is taught to play a square game to extend himself to the limit to play to the finish under all conditions, and to take defeat in the right spirit has learned a lesson that will benefit him all his life.

"As in the past, we have had difficulty in keeping our committees filled, and the need of workers is a condition that is ever present with us.

"The physical department, under our efficient physical director, A. L. Listman, has done its accustomed good work. He has been liberal in giving all the members the benefit of the class work, and also all the different sports they would be interested in such as basketball, baseball, athletics, aquatics, wrestling, etc. Tournaments have been held, and groups and individual contests have been fostered. The classes in all the departments show a gain over the attendance of last season.

"Men in regular classes, gymnasium, 3,774; boys in regular classes, gymnasium, 4,375; total, 8,049; men in athletics, baseball and basketball, 1,497; boys in athletics, baseball and basketball, 976; total, 2,473; men and boys in Sunday-school athletics, 492; individual exercise (approx), 1,000; interscholastic basketball and athletics, 100, grand total, 13,114; examinations, 126.

"The basketball teams played 30 games, winning 17, losing 13. The two business men's teams and boys' team also had a series of games. The Sunday-school Athletic League started by Mr. Listman has been a great success; 492 different men and boys have taken part in the events of the league during the year. Athletic meets between the different churches were given, tennis tournaments and basketball contests were the interesting features of the league.

"The association should own its own athletic field. We have many hundreds of men and boys in our gymnasium in winter but have no place to offer them in summer for exercise. We have spent a large amount of money in the last 20 years in laying out baseball diamonds, tennis courts, etc., only to find we had to give them up on account of the short leases we have been compelled to sign. We are satisfied a field of our own could be turned into a place for exercise for many who cannot get the kind of recreation they want in any other place. One New Jersey city has all the newsboys in the city organized into baseball nines.

"The association is conducting three educational groups, the mechanical drawing class, the orchestra, and the class in English for Italians. The organization of the Italian class with the co-operation of the Young People's committee having the work for Italians in charge marks the association's first definite work on behalf of the most unfortunate and least intelligent of the industrial groups of the community. One of the members of this class which has been most successfully lead by Mr. Cubberley has recently joined the association.

"The Ladies' Auxiliary has been indispensible during the year. We can only begin to recite the different services this helpful ally has rendered. They have given dinners to the mechanical drawing class, baseball team, orchestra and Bible classes. They have paid for the telephone, provided flowers for the Sunday meetings, purchased racks and magazine holders for the reading room, bought a new typewriter for the office and as a crowning achievement have refurnished the parlor handsomely at an expense of over $250.

"We are grateful to M. A. Korff, who organized and for many years lead our orchestra. It is one of the largest and best in the country, and we wish to thank its members for their help in so many ways. They have also given benefit concerts for the Baby Camp, Salvation Army and some of the missions.

"Last June, we called C. B. Batchelor as boys' secretary, and this work for the first time has been in first class condition since Mr. Robbie left two years ago. We have now 138 boys in this department. The boys had a camp at Lake Hopatcong last summer, and six outings were given. A club has been organized for street boys with twenty-five members, each paying twenty-five cents a month, having two evenings for games, and one evening for gymnasium and pool. It is planned to get a big brother for each one of these boys, that is, one man who will try to look after and help along one boy. The boys gave a minstrel show in December, about thirty boys taking part.

"Twenty-three leading high school boys were organized for Bible study under the leadership of William D Murray, through the efforts of D. R. Porter and C. R. Scott. The class has been held eight sessions with an average attendance of fifteen. A grammar school Bible class was organized which has had an average attendance of ten.

"Our own light plant has been running full time all the year and we save in the winter at least $50 per month in our light bill.

"The past year was a difficult one in which to raise our budget. Many members could not afford to renew, and some of our regular contributors had to reduce their gifts. Our membership is now 676. We have had to borrow to make up the needed amount. A total of $11,586 was received during the year, $700 being loaned on a note. $11,534 was expended, and we have notes amounting to $3,000 to be taken care of.

"We have been fortunate in having during the year each one of our three departments in charge of a most competent director, and the work they have all done has been thorough and efficient. The large amount of personal work done by our secretaries cannot be reported but the constant stream of men coming to our rooms for advice and help is a proof that we are expected to furnish aid in many diverse ways.

"We cordially invite all our friends to visit our building. Our books are always open, and the month's reports of our secretaries and committees are always on file."

General Secretary Herbert E. Parker in response to an invitation from the toastmaster, addressed the banqueters. He said that the success of the association had not been due to any one person but to the many, who had worked together. Co-operation was the great force which had accomplished it, and he was sure that the loyal spirit which had not permitted the association to suffer during the past four years would protect and support it in the future.

Charles B. Batchelor, boys' director, spoke briefly on the ambitions of his department. While there were 130 boys enrolled at the present time, there were 2,000 youths in the city between fifteen and seventeen years of age, and he wanted as many of them as he could get. There had been an erroneous impression, he said, that the membership was open to only a select clique. That was by no means the case and every boy was welcome.

The case of four boys who boarded a freight train to run away from home had been called to his attention recently, and he had since had a talk with one of them. From the boy he learned that a group of fifty such youths had been banded together, but that all had dropped out except these four.

Mr. Batchelor said it was his purpose to interview each of the fifty. He thought there must be something in boys who were capable of organizing themselves and conducting their own club. The fact that their meeting place had been a cellar and under vicious circumstances was to be deplored. He would like to bring them into the Y. M. C. A.

A. C. Williams, who is one of the secretaries of the international committee, delivered a short address which was full of fun and poetry. It was also somewhat reminiscent as he is a former secretary of the local association. This was his second visit here in twenty-five years, and he was pleased to note great changes.

Speaking of the Y. M. C. A. work in general, he said that the association has a standing among large employers for genuineness and truthfulness. They want Christian men on the railroads and street cars, nowadays, he declared, because they find that the best work is done by them.

BOY INSTANTLY KILLED IN COASTING MISHAP.

High Bridge, Jan. 22.—While coasting here Monday Lester Philhower, twelve years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Philhower, of East High Bridge, was instantly killed.

He was coasting on Academy Hill, when he collided with a sled on which was seated Frank Latimer's son, who was riding down an opposite incline. Both were going at great speed and struck head on. The Philhower boy was lying on his sled. He was carried to the home of Mr. Meade, nearby, and a physician and his parents notified.

Coroner Jacob K. Naughright viewed the body and issued a burial permit. The Latimer boy escaped injury. Both hills are considered dangerous, and the authroities have issued an order prohibiting coasting.

Earlier in the day Leslie Hann, eleven years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hann, collided with a tree and was taken to his home in an unconscious condition. He was badly cut, bruised and hurt internally.

Former Chatham Man a Suicide.

Chatham, Jan. 22.—Word has been received here of the death by suicide at Chicopee Falls, Mass., of Ernest M. Long. Up to about two years ago he lived in Chatham. About six months before leaving Chatham Mr. Long met with an accident in New York, and was missing for several days before his whereabouts could be located. He was finally found in a New York hospital suffering from an injury to his head. Since that time he had acted queerly.

GIVES SITE FOR A LIBRARY.

Summit, Jan. 22.—The Summit Home Land Company, which is composed of the Bonnel family, this city's pioneer settlers, has donated a tract of land at Maple street and Morris avenue to this city as a site for a free public library building. The property has a frontage of 175 feet on Maple street and a depth of 220 feet on Morris avenue. It is said to be worth $20,000.

It is known that the trustees of the library have been in communication with Andrew Carnegie and that he will donate a building which is to cost probably $50,000. The only restriction made by the donors of the property is that the library building shall not cost less than $35,000. The property is a portion of the site which the Board of Education endeavored to purchase and on which it was proposed to locate a public school building.

Plan Entertainment Course.

New Brunswick, Jan. 22.—The Athletic Association of Rutgers College has arranged an entertainment course of four numbers for the winter season. The first of these will be given on Wednesday evening, January 27, and will consist of a vocal concert by Mr. and Mrs. A. Hobart Smock. Mr. Smock, who has a member of the class of '93, has been heard in this city several times in the past. Mrs. Smock is a gifted singer.

The second will be held on February 10. This will consist of a reading from her own works, by Margaret Deland. Mrs. Deland is well known as a reader and lecturer, as well as an author of wide repute, whose "Old Chester Tales" are long-standing favorites. This city has a peculiar interest in Mrs. Deland on account of the fact that her uncle, the late Dr. Campbell, was so long president of the college. On February 24 an illustrated lecture of travel will be given by Rev. Lewis Gaston Leary, of the class of '97. Mr. Leary won considerable reputation as an orator during his college days. Since then he has traveled extensively and has become well known as a lecturer. A recital by Professor E. Livingston Barbour, of Rutgers, assisted by his daughter, will be given on March 4.

Asbury Park Y. M. C. A. to Open.

Asbury Park, Jan. 22.—The formal opening of the new headquarters of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held in a few days, and a program of entertainment is now partially completed. Early in the fall the Asbury Opera House, in Sewall avenue, was purchased by the association, and during the past few weeks extensive alterations have been made. The association has a large membership. Among the features of the opening will be an illustrated talk on "The Boys of New Jersey," by Charles R. Scott, of Newark, State secretary for boys, which will be followed by a moving picture entertainment. The initial housewarming will take place Monday night next. A reception will be tendered the ladies Tuesday afternoon.

An Accepted Story.

"Quills has had a story accepted at last," remarked a journalist to a colleague.

"Surely not!" was the rejoinder.

"Yes. He went home at 2 o'clock this morning with an awful yarn, and his wife believed it."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Louis Mann told a magazine interviewer a few days ago that he would like to make up a repetoire consisting of Ibsens "John Gabriel Borkmann," Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," Hauptmann's "Fuehrmann Hensche.," and Pinard's "Sweet Lavender." The interviewer inquired why he did not do so. Mr. Mann's answer was that he believed the public was slow in revising its opinion of an actor, and that a man who had begun in the frivolity of musical comedy might emerge from it only by easy stages. He regards "The Man Who Stood Still," in which he is to act at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, as the logical outcome of his ventures forward from the days of "The Girl from Paris" and "The Telephone Girl."

All lovers of Irish music should not fail to hear Joseph O'Mara, the distinguished Irish actor, sing "The Wearin' of the Green" at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, when he will appear in "Peggy Machree," a romantic Irish comedy with music. Besides this old time favorite Mr. O'Mara will also sing "The West's Awake," "Birds Fly South," "The Exile's Return" and "Believe Me." Mr. O'Mara is under the management of Messrs. Joseph Brooks and A. W. Dingwall, who have provided him with a lavish scenic investiture and a splendid supporting company.

The American humorist-tourist, Fred Niblo, whose travel-talks on zig-zag journeys around the world have become a fashionable fad among the discriminating theatre-goers of this city, will present the fifth of his delightfully entertaining talks of travel at the New Plainfield theatre on next Wednesday evening. The subject will be "London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel." This offering is probably the most popular of the entire series, being equally well illustrated as were Africa, Egypt, Italy and Russia, which were presented at this theatre during the past few weeks to large and appreciative audiences.

The magnificent first part of the Al. G. Field greater minstrels called "The Fiesta of Flowers," has been fittingly renamed by a dramatic critic as "The Bay of Naples." Bursting as it does suddenly on audiences almost totally unprepared for anything quite so magnificent, the Fiesta of Flowers never fails to make an impression that is pleasing. Possibly the "Bay of Naples" would have been a better name for this magnificent depicture. Nothing not fully as beautiful as the world famous Bay of Naples can be compared with it scenically. A number of the best scenic artists have been at work on this setting for over a year. Design after design was drawn and rejected, until finally the artists caught and executed Mr. Field's idea. It is impossible to fully describe the rich and harmonious coloring, the thousands of colored lights that blend and become a part of the whole, the rich costumes of the singers and dancers. Altogether the effect is the most beautiful of the many beautiful productions that have always been a feature with the Field minstrels. The Fiesta of Flowers marks an epoch in modern minstrelsy. The Al. G. Field greater minstrels is booked for this city for the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, January 30.

No Rest for the Weary.

WORKING A REFORM

"Aunt Nancy honored me with her undivided attention nearly all this morning," said Nannette. "And a decidedly uncomfortable time I had of it — at first."

"Unload Your Woes.

"Unload your woes, Nannette," briefly observed her bosom friend.

"She followed me to my room directly after breakfast, before I had time to put it in order, and you know how it looks sometimes."

"Rather," said her bosom friend.

"Well, it looked worse than that. Aunt Nancy didn't seem to notice. She sat down on the bed, just as sociably as you might have done.

"'I have come to have a little talk with you, Nancy, she said. Nothing will induce to call me Nannette. 'I take an interest in you for your father's sake and also because you are my namesake. 'I know I ought to do my duty by you and I shall.'

"That made me groan inwardly and wonder which of my many imperfections had attracted her notice. She did not long leave me in doubt.

"'Nancy,' she said, 'you have the most extraordinary coiffure I have ever beheld upon a human being. How comes it that a slight young creature like you should be possessed of such an enormous head of hair? Couldn't you manage to compress it within reasonable bounds? It gives your head a size ridiculously disproportionate to your body. Such a growth of hair is almost a deformity.'"

"Did you ever!" ejaculated the bosom friend.

"There was a wicked twinkle in her eye and a smile about her mouth. My eyes strayed involuntarily to her own sparse locks, which were twisted into a hard knot at the back of her head. If you will believe me, surmounting that excrescence was the most magnificent comb—real tortoise shell, set with seed pearls and tiny diamonds—the most exquisite object you can imagine."

"How incongruous in that connection!" murmured the bosom friend.

"Decidedly so," agreed Nannette. "Well, Aunt Nancy kept harping upon my frightful growth of hair—one would imagine that I was a monstrosity, to hear her talk—until I had to admit that it was not all my own.

"'Do you mean to tell me that you wear false hair—a young girl like you?' she cried, lifting her hands in horror. 'That all those little puffs, and—and sausages and beautifully waved locks are artificial?'

"'The marcel wave is my own,' I answered sulkily, 'but the—sausages, as you call them, are false. Why, Aunt Nancy, it is the fashion—everybody wears them.'

"'A most ridiculous fashion,' said Aunt Nancy emphatically, 'and not at all becoming. Why, my dear child, do you know that much of the false hair that is sold is from the heads of Chinese criminals, many of whom have been executed for their crimes? Do you not know that America competes with France and other countries for this stuff? To think of the women of this enlightened country being willing to make caricatures of themselves by wearing bushels of hair from the heads of heathen foreigners! And to think that my own niece is among the number!'"

"A trifling exaggeration on Aunt Nancy's part," murmured the bosom friend.

"She grew quite warm on the subject," went on Nannette. "I believe she would have been holding forth yet if I had not meekly submitted to her views and promised to moderate the size of my head arrangement."

"You promised that!" exclaimed the bosom friend, incredulously.

"Yes, and I don't know that I regret it, either, especially since Charles seems to consider it a sensible idea. When I told him this afternoon what Aunt Nancy thought about it he said: 'That's about the size of it, Nannette. Wasn't your—coiffure a trifle—er—exaggerated?'"

"I wish I could see that comb," observed the bosom friend, somewhat irrelevantly.

"You shall," exclaimed Nannette, exultantly. "Behold!" turning her head. "It is an heirloom in the family and Aunt Nancy has handed it on to me. I do not believe that she would have trusted me with it if I had not capitulated at the psychological moment."

"It was the very wisest thing you ever did in all your life," declared the bosom friend, eyeing the comb enviously. "And I do not see but that your hair looks at least as well as it did before."

"Wait until you see me in my new hat!" moaned Nannette. "It's as big as a wagon wheel."

Very Difficult.

"I am going to be vaccinated," she said. "It mustn't show, you know."

"And where," we inquired, "do you intend to have it done?"

"Ah, that's the question!"

So saying the Salome dancer shook her head sorrowfully, almost despairfully.

Fine Finish.

The man who writes thrilling melodramas rushed into the manager's office in a state of great excitement.

"I've got it!" he shouted, triumphantly. "I've got it!"

"Got what?" asked the surprised manager.

"Why, the sensation of the year. In the third act of my new play there is a mill scene. Harold Headlight, the hero, casts the villain down into the yawning jaws of two great emery wheels."

PUT TO QUEER USE

PICTURES DIVERTED FROM THEIR PRIME PURPOSE.

Have Been Known to Aid Greatly in Conviction of Criminals—Once Efficacious in the Collection of Debts.

Though the prime purpose of pictures is to please and instruct, they have at times been diverted to other uses. During the recent hearing of a case at a London police court a witness gave evidence that the prisoner, who was charged with attempted murder and suicide, had drawn his attention to a couple of pictures on the backs of which, written in pencil, was a statement by the accused setting forth the reason for his premeditated crime.

Ere now pictures have been enlisted in Hymen's cause. That celebrated painter of flower and figure subjects, William Hunt, was on one occasion commissioned by a gentleman to paint his portrait in the attitude of kneeling and holding in his hand an open scroll whereon was written a declaration of love and offer of marriage. The lady to whom this unusual proposal of marriage was sent replied with a chalk drawing of herself with a sheet of paper in her hand on which was inscribed a laconic "Yes."

As debt collectors, too, pictures have proved efficacious. Etty, when a young man, received an order from certain Marylebone tradesmen to make a dozen caricature sketches of a resident of the locality who was notably averse to settling his accounts. These portraits when finished were displayed in the windows of their subject's long-suffering creditors, who refused to remove them from the public gaze until their bills were paid. Seeing no way of escaping ridicule save by yielding to their just demands, the gentleman, on condition that the objectionable portraits were destroyed, agreed to discharge his debts.

Soon after he settled in London, Sir Thomas Lawrence, then a mere youth, was a witness to a dastardly assault on a lady by a ruffian, who managed to make good his escape, not, however, before he had been well noted by the young artist, who, at once returning to his studio, drew from memory a speaking portrait. This, which he handed to the police, was the means of bringing the criminal to justice.

That wayward genius, George Morland, was often sore pressed for money to pay his debts. On one occasion he stayed at an inn where he speedily ran up an account which he was unable to meet. He offered a picture in payment, but Boniface shook his head. Suddenly, however, his eye brightened, and he invited the artist to step into his yard, where, he trusted, means of settlement might be found. Morland did so, and a few days later received his bill receipted. The following Sunday mine host appeared at church in a truly novel waistcoat, being nothing less than the painter's payment, which, stretched across his ample chest, displayed to the amazed congregation the picture of a gigantic pig.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Winter Drainage Suggestion.

Winter drainage is not the same as summer drainage, and it must be attended to very carefully at this closing up season. In summer we simply want capacious tiles running through the soil capable of keeping it from being waterlogged, and we want a sloping of drives so that swift showers shall be carried quickly by surface ditches. But in winter, there is often a body of melting snow very suddenly let loose, that will wash the best soil off your land, tear gutters through your strawberry beds, and possibly even heave out your young trees. It is extremely important just as you wind up your work, to cut surface drains of a temporary sort, where the slopes are likely to be washed, and so as to catch the flush of water before it accumulates, and throw it out of your garden and off your lawn. These superficial drains can be closed in the spring, or, if left at all, can be modified to very shallow and almost unnoticeable suices.—Outing Magazine.

The Final Word.

It is related of Phil Spayce, the minor author, that he never is long at a loss for a simile, drawing freely upon his personal experiences. When he seeks to indicate the ill humor of his characters he does not write:

"They were as cross as two sticks" or "they were as mad as hornets" or "they were as angry as demons."

For these be phrases all too hackneyed. Rather does this keen observer pen it:

"They were as snappy as a man and wife who have spent Sunday in flat hunting."

And with this the final word has been spoken.

Its First Telling.

Eve had fabricated her first biscuits.

"Just like mother used to make," declared Adam, fulsomely.

Tears sprang to Eve's eyes.

"If you hadn't eaten that apple, you would never say so!" she protested.

Yet it was no bigger lie, on the whole, than plenty of men have since told in those identical words.

"KIT" CARSON NOT FORGOTTEN.

Many Traces of the Famous Scout In the Southwest.

Every American in whom a spark of romance is alive knows the name "Kit" Carson, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. And the majority of us began young to know it, for "Life and Adventures of 'Kit' Carson" was among our choice boyhood books. To be a "Kit" Carson was and long will be boyhood's ambition. "Quick to act and never known to boast," is the Carson epitaph, and one that any boy may well emulate.

"Kit" Carson, this greatest, perhaps, of American scouts and frontiersmen, can be claimed by old Missouri. To be sure, he was born in Kentucky, but he was only a year in age when the family removed to historic Howard county, which, although now in the center of civilization, at that time was exposed to savage beasts and Indians.

Howard county in the '20s grew too tame for him, and his apprenticeship to a saddler, David Workman, (a good name), waxed uninteresting. The call of the wilder wilds was insistent, and when he was 17 he joined a Santa Fe caravan. He already was an excellent shot, a proficient hunter and a strong, alert, steadfast youth.

In November, 1826, he turned up at Fernandez de Taos, now of northeastern New Mexico, then of Mexico itself. Here to-day are to be found many traces of him, for Taos was his rendezvous and home through 40 years. At Taos he and his wife are buried.

The house which he occupied for many years while he was Indian agent still stands and also the low adobe structure containing his office In Taos lives Aloys Scheurich, a Carson close friend, holding whose hand the scout died, and Mrs. Scheurich, the scout's niece.

The doings of "Kit" Carson after his arrival in what is now New Mexico have been faithfully recorded and embodied in print. But unfortunately his boyhood in Howard county seems vague. It is to be hoped that the right effort will result in more information concerning this not unimportant period of his life—the crucial period really. He was well schooled in all the perils and vicissitudes and lore of frontier life and he extended his locale, according to hazy report, by hunting buffalo with the Sioux. His knowledge of the Sioux tongue afterward stood him in good stead.

He is a character of whom Missouri may be proud. His honors apparently are untarnished by the vices so prevalent in his rough and ready day.

Worry.

One who could rid the world of worry would render greater service to the race than all of the inventors and discoverers that ever lived.

We Americans pity ignorant savages who live in terror of their cruel gods, their demons which keep them in abject slavery, but we ourselves are the slaves of a demon which blasts our hopes, blights our happiness, casts its hideous shadow across all our pleasures, destroys our sleep, mars health and keeps us in misery most of our lives.

This monster dogs us from the cradle to the grave. There is no occasion so sacred but it is there. Unbidden it comes to the wedding and funeral alike. It is at every reception, every banquet; it occupies a seat at every table.

No human intellect can estimate the unutterable havoc and ruin wrought by worry. It has forced genius to do the work of mediocrity; it has caused more failures, more broken hearts, more blasted hopes, than any other one cause since the dawn of the world —Success.

Apropos of "The Devil."

Now that those two "Devils" are exhibiting themselves at the Lyric and Garden theaters, weak jokes and plays on words regarding his Satanic majesty are all the rage, says the New York Times.

"I'm going to the devil to-night," one remarks, listening hopefully for the ensuing cachinnation—or else "So-and-So has gone to the 'Devil,'" etc., through delightfully bewildering variations.

And then, of course, there is this gem: When some one tells you heatedly "go to the devil!" you suavely inquire: "Which 'Devil,' please?"

All this recalls something that happened in Boston a few years ago, which, though somewhat similar to these "Devil" jokes, was distinctly funny. There was a dog show at the time. Whoever ran the press agent end of the thing conceived a brilliant idea. Instead of having ordinary signs hung on the street cars going to the show, he caused to be placed on each one a placard announcing in big black letters:

"This car goes to the Dogs."

Religious Joke.

Lawson—What is the difference between the cows of ill-omen that Pharaoh saw in his dream and the typical Boston girl?

Dawson—I'll bite. What is it?

Lawson—The cows were the lean kine, and the typical Boston girl is one of the lean kind.—Somerville Journal.

Not So Worse.

"Our band was in a smashup last night," said the man with the big bass drum.

"Any bones broken?" queried the innocent bystander.

"Only the trombone," answered the drum thumper.

VISITING OVER SUNDAY AND THE CLOTHES PROBLEM.

We are oftentimes puzzled, when going away for the week end, about just what are the clothes we should take with us. And if the invitation comes late the wonder increases as the time grows shorter.

There are girls who are so popular that scarcely a week passes that they are not off somewhere for over Sunday or to spend a couple of days. This popularity has its drawsbacks if bags must be constantly packed and unpacked.

One girl who does not have a maid and is given to getting into rushes has simplified her visits by keeping her suitcase stocked with all the toilet necessities. She keeps a separate set just for visting, and they are not removed fro mthe bag on her return.

This plan proved such a convenience that the girl added to her bag several changes of underclothes, which were only taken out to be laundered and immediately replaced. Thus, when an invitation came in a hurry, nothing need be done but slip in a frock or two that were to be worn.

A workbag, jewel box and a small collar box weer also tucked in and kept filled with enough ties, collars and small pins to help out in an emergency. A pair of special patent leather pumps and silk stockings were ever in the bag, thus preventing the possibility for forgotten footgear.

The girl says she now enjoys visits, when formerly she went off in such turmoil that she and her family were half wild.

TO GIVE TO THE WOULD BE TRAVELER.

Do you wish to give the friend starting on an extended journey some little useful remembrance? You could make her no more acceptable parting gift than a safety pocket to be worn under the dress. In it can go extra money and jewels without fear of loss or robbers.

Such pockets can be made of many materials and in several different styles, but the following one will be found generally acceptable:

A pocket is made from gray suede or a piece of chamois, eleven inches long, six inches wide at bottom, and five inches at top. The bottom is rounded and the top is cut square across.

Two pieces of leather are cut and the edges stitched together on the machine, about half way up. An inner pocket of stout gray cambric is sewed on the inside of the suede, the edges finished with nickel rims and a stout clasp.

One side of the leather is then cut shorter than the other, which folds down over the purse in a flap. This is fastened by snap clasps such as are used on gloves. One is sewed on each side of the flap for extra security.

On the under side of the case an extra piece of the leather or chamois is stitched to form a flat pocket. This is stitched up the centre as well as on edges to form two narrow pockets for bills or jewels. A shallow flap is added which also fastens with the snap clasps.

The finished pocket is stitched to two strips of gray belting, one at each edge.

THE MORNING MEAL— DON'T MISS IT.

Those who are "banting" in order that they may have the unutterable joy (?) of wearing a directoire gown, and those who are not—

There are a surprising number of people who do not break their fast each day until luncheon time. To this abstemiousness they attribute wonderful health. To hear the devotees of the no breakfast fad talk one could rival Methusaleh if she can but refrain from eating in the morning.

To eat or not to eat, is, or should be, a personal matter; but the non breakfasters do not see it that way. They are not content unless all the world goes breakfastless too. They rub in their theories to boredom.

A man or woman should no more go without breakfast save by the advice of a physician than he or she should stop eating altogether.

Undoubtedly there are many with whom the practise agrees, but there are more who could not stand it at all. To advise the working man to go hungry until he could open his tin pail at noon would be to lay up for him seeds of ill health. His active life demands nourishment before starting to work.

In the same way a girl who must sit in an office all day makes a mistake in starting forth without a substantial breakfast; to eat none at all means a headache and a half sick morning for most women.

"But," says the non breakfaster, "you can get used to going without food!" Possibly you can, but why should you? The average wage-earner can not afford to pay for a heavy lunch downtown and to make the usual sandwich or sundae or slice of pie do duty until the late dinner is folly on the face of it.

Lesson From the Past.

The Chinese were building their great wall.

"This will prevent unjust discrimination," they said. "It will keep everything out."

Thereby, too, they saved the trouble and expense of having to rexise the tariff every few years.—Chicago Tribune.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Life without a definite port at the end, life unthrilled and unfed by the Father, life unsanctified, however sleek, is the veriest failure.—Rev. Dr. George Clarke Peck, Methodist Episcopal, New York.

Lesson From Politics.

The problem of politics in the final analysis is the individual voter. This is the secret of successful method in Christian work, getting at the individual man.—Rev. James J. Dunlop, Presbyterian, Roxbury, Mass.

Art of Living.

The greatest art in the world is the art of living. The greatest thing in living is in knowing how to get along with other people. The highest state of happiness can only come from the most perfect companionship.—Rev. W. W. Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

Knowing God.

We know because we believe. Thus it is in our attitude toward God. No one of us has ever seen him, yet we trust him and have faith in him. We know him by faith, not knowledge.—Rev. T. P. Thurston, Episcopalian, Minneapolis.

Knowing Life.

No man knows life who has not been quickened intellectually, made sensitive to every human need about him, conquered the beast within him and been thrilled with a great love of divine beauty.—Rev. Dr. Edwin H. Delk, Lutheran, Philadelphia.

Spreading the Gospel.

A wonderful change would be wrought in the world if those who knew the joy of being followers of Christ would go forth and tell it to each one they met. The world would soon realize that the Christian life was a vital matter and would be changed.—Rev. J. W. Baer, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

True Faith.

He that has the true faith must, first, be able to give a reason for that faith; second, desire that others share it, and, thirdly, by comparison with other religions prove its superiority over others in the blessedness and excellence of its virtues and its influence and power for the larger number of the people in the world.—Rev. Maurice Ruben, Baptist, Pittsburg.

Kingdom of the Heavens.

Jesus came to bring "the kingdom of the heavens." We shall have this kingdom when we learn sky lives—to love as royally as sunsets, to trust as purely as stars, to order our society and government as smoothly as the punctual planets and to suffer as summer storms which leave the landscape breathing freshness behind them.—Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, Congregationalist, Worcester, Mass.

Sacredness of Small Things.

We should realize the sacredness of small things which we ignore or despise—the deed that uplifts, although it is unheralded; the word that inspires, although uttered so gently that your neighbors do not hear it; the hand clasp which puts your brother firmly on his feet without public applause. Hence the small things dare not be despised by those of us who wish to rise to higher things.—Rev. Abram S. Isaacs, Hebrew, Paterson, N. J.

Effective Prayer.

Prayer to be true prayer must come from a penitent heart that has submitted everything to the will of God. It is only when you are in accord with his will that you are clothed about with his righteousness. When you have squared your life with God's laws, then you will have confidence; then whatsoever you ask you will receive. Why? Because he has put his wishes in you, so when you ask you ask only for those things agreeable to his will, and of course you receive.—Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Faith and Prayer.

Faith is the passive attitude of the soul where we surrender ourselves to it and are molded by it. It is opening the shutter of the soul and letting the heavenly image impress itself on the place. Days of darkness will be required to develop it. Temptations will fix it there. The image stays forever when once so fixed. Prayer is the attitude of the man by which he contemplates his own best self and for the moment surrenders himself to that. It molds in clay the life which by chisel and hammer is to be carved in the marble real.—Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Unitarian, Washington.

Cure For Worry.

Worry reduces our power of resistance. Hope is the best defense against a foe. The cure for worry is certain. There are specifics, and the prescription is not hard to take. Cultivate a personality. Get above merely trying to make a living and seek to make a life. Let some noble ambition throb in your breast. Get out of doors in God's pure air and under the blue sky and by the chanting sea. To see nothing but man's handiwork is enough to give a man the blues. Stop feasting at night and late hours, plan for seven or eight hours of healthful sleep, drink quarts of pure water daily, eat an abundance of plain food. Indigestion destroys more happiness and religion than atheism. Three-fourths of the worry of life is due to careless treatment of our bodies. Have a few good friends. Make yourself worthy of them. Many persons by neglect lose their choicest friendships. Read great books until their authors are your abiding companions. Look for the bright side of things. An advertisement appeared in a metropolitan paper: "Wanted—A companion; a Christian, but cheerful." A merry heart is a good medicine.—Rev. Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Methodist, Los Angeles, Cal.

COULDN'T TEAR HIMSELF AWAY.

Really Excellent Reason for Reportorial Persistency.

Once a reporter went around to a certain residence in New York to get details about the master of the house, who had just died, in order that an obituary notice might appear in the newspaper which he represented. Such details, as a rule, are easy to get, as few people have objections to giving them out for publication. The reporter, therefore, was intensely surprised when the widow of the deceased, with scarcely a word, slammed the door in his face.

She retired into the house. Presently the doorbell rang furiously. She refused to stir. Again the doorbell rang, more furiously than before. Still the lady of the house would not stir.

"I had told him that I don't want to say anything about my husband," she thought to herself, "and he has no right to be so persistent."

So she sat still, while the doorbell rang again and again and again.

At last she could stand it no longer. So, opening a window over the front door, she poked her head out and remarked, severely:

"Young man, I do not desire to say anything to you. Kindly do not disturb me any more. Go away, young man."

"I can't!" roared the reporter, beside himself with exasperation. "You've shut my coat tails in the door!"

VALUE OF THE PRECIOUS STONES

Price Put Upon Them Can Be Nothing But Artificial.

The London Chronicle says that diamonds are getting on the public nerve with the cutting of the great Cullinan. They have split it, and are making two stones of it, and, when all is done, it seems that we must calculate the value in carats. It is a matter of so much a carat. And the Cullinan stone at its biggest will be worth less than four million pounds, while its little brother will be only half as valuable. And this is nothing to the "Braganza," which weight 1,680 carats in its present state, and is worth, according to the expert, more than £58,000,000. This is—we may say it bluntly—not true. You cannot eat a diamond, or drink it, or sleep in it, or make any use of it but to win a woman's smile. As a solemn fact of economy, it may be asserted that there is no man on earth who would give £58,000,000 for a diamond. Because there is no man on earth that will buy a thing at the price he cannot sell it at. Now, is there a man who will buy a diamond for fifty-eight millions on the chance of another man's wanting another woman's smile?—The Argonaut.

A Little Chaw.

One of our abler industrial captains is always crewing the cud, as they say in ordinary slang; yet so far as he is concerned, in reality. Lots of financiers chew gum, but this one in particular who never tasted chicle or rubber-elastic, as the boys call it, chews a bit of biltong. "Biltong" is a hunk of South American bull-beef (the rump) dried in the sun. It is as tough as rawhide, and will make a man who can digest it as strong as a bull kubu. Our industrial captain always carries a small shaving in his vest pocket, and when getting into a hard deal he takes a bite. It is just about as good as a piece of walrus hide, or the sole of an old shoe, but "it makes spit," and saliva is the soul of good digestion.

Wrecking the Typewriter.

"We sold one of our machines to Mrs. Van Rensaleer for her boy," said the typewriter man when he had fixed the machine so it would write: 'The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog,' all right. 'He was ten years old. It was Christmas time. She bought it for one of his Christmas presents. It cost her a hundred dollars. Two days after Christmas she 'phoned me to come up and see about the machine. I wish you could have seen it. The boy had taken it all to pieces. He hadn't left two little pieces of it together any more. He had it in a soap box. It was the worst wreck of a machine you ever saw. It took me two days to put it together again. I have great hopes for that boy."

Machine-Cured Sleeplessness.

A unique machine has just been put on the market which claims to cure sleeplessness. The machine resembles an instrument like an electric fan, the wings of the fan being studded with small round mirrors. It is based on the principle that most insomniacs can sleep at the window of an express train. The sight of the landscape rushing by them invariably brings on a refreshing nap. The machine with its whirl and glitter of revolving mirrors acts on the eye and brain in the same soothing manner and sends the patient off into a deep slumber.

On Being Mean.

The question arises, can one be economical without being mean? A man who is naturally mean will always be economical. If a man who is not economical attempts to become so he will learn that the easiest way is first to learn to be mean. If he has a generous impulse he must curb it. During the first part of our lives we should be as mean as we can. When we have accumulated more than we need we should devote the last part to cultivating our generous impulses. No successful man is a philanthropist before he is 50.—Life.

WHEN PA GIVES INFORMATION.

Just the Chance for Display of His Sense of Humor.

"Pa, what is a hypochondriac?"

"A hypochondriac, Wilfred—"

But just a moment. "Pa" in this anecdote is not a good and kind father, yearning to impart useful information to his son, but one of those smart answer-givers whose main object in life is to get into the back pages of the magazines. Such fathers look upon their little sons, groping for knowledge, as providers of openings for senseless domestic epigrams. Hence—but we'll go back.

"Pa" takes off his glasses and looks benignly at his son.

"What did you say, my boy?"

"Pa, what is a hypochondriac?"

That gives "Pa" his chance.

"A hypochondriac, Wilfred"—names like Wilfred add humor to this sort of thing. John, for instance, would fall flat and James would be indefinitely worse; but to resume—"a hypochondriac, Wilfred, is a man who has such a dread of catching cold that, whenever he takes a bath, he stops up all the holes in the sponge for fear of draughts."

And Wilfred not quite seven years old! Isn't it a shame?

OBSERVANT PEOPLE ARE JAPS.

Trouble Is They Are Liable to Carry It to Extremes.

The Japanese are a most imitative and observant people and copy everything they see with minute fidelity. A Newport man recently engaged a Japanese valet, who was very attentive and satisfactory.

His duties rarely took him into the kitchen, but when he had a chance of watching the cook he did so with extraordinary interest.

The cook caught a severe chill and left somewhat suddenly. The lady of the house was in despair, as she could not replace her.

At last the valet announced diffidently that he thought he could cook a little and the mistress gladly agreed to give him a trial.

The first thing he started on was the potatoes. He took off his shoes and socks and put his feet in a bath of hot mustard and water.

The lady wanted to know what on earth he was doing. He replied that he saw the cook do that when she was peeling the potatoes, and nothing would persuade him that this was not a necessary part of the process.

The Thundering Legion.

In the year A. D. 174 a Roman legion, made up wholly or in part of Christians, fought under Marcus Antonius against the Marcomanni. The Roman army was shut up in a defile and ready to perish with thirst, when a severe thunder storm, with heavy rain, relieved them of their distress, and at the same time so terrified their enemies that a great victory was gained. The Christians attributed their deliverance to the prayers they had just presented, and considered it miraculous, and the term "Thundering Legion" was applied to the soldiers.—New York American.

Moroccan Proverbs.

In an article on the people of Morocco a writer in Figaro says: "They have some queer adages and some that closely resemble ours. Thus, they say: 'The camel cannot see its hump, but plainly sees one on its neighbor;' 'He who depends on his neighbor will go to bed hungry:' 'A wise enemy is better than a stupid friend;' 'Cross the rushing stream, but beware of the quiet, noiseless one;' 'In this world there are three things not to be trusted—luck, women and horses;' 'Mounting a horse, loosing the hunting dogs and hearing earrings rattle drives dull care away.'"

Love and the Law.

Now love makes the mind clean and clear, so that it stops liking unclean things like bad food and ugly squeezed bodies and cigars. And love makes the mind kindly, so that it does not yearn for more than its share of other people's money. So in the gaining or the maintaining of health, too, love is the fulfilling of the law

And how about beauty? Why, beauty is merely health—plus love. Therefore, if you have love you have all things, for all things are ruled by law; love is the fulfilling of the law.—Nautilus.

Womanly Logic.

"Never," groaned the picture dealer, "never try to argue a woman into believing that she ought to pay a bill when she thinks otherwise. I tried it this morning—presented a bill for some stuff ordered two months ago. Here was the irrefutable logic:

"'I never ordered any pictures.'

"'If I did you never delivered them.'

"'If I did I never got them.'

"'If I did I paid for them.'

"'If I didn't, I must have had some good reason for it.'

"'And if I had, of course, I won't pay.'"—Wasp.

A Terrible Threat.

"You say your titled son-in-law holds threats over you?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "He has us where we can't give him any argument at all. Mother and the girls say we must yield for the sake of the family honor."

"Is there—er a skeleton in the closet?"

"Not at all. He simply announces that unless he has his own way he'll get naturalized and be a plain American citizen."

CARE OF THE SILVERWARE.

Only a Little Trouble to Keep It in Perfect Condition.

Shining silver upon snowy linen is beautiful, but it takes trouble to keep it in good condition. The tarnishing of silver does not by any means indicate that it is of poor quality; on the contrary the finer the silver the more quickly it becomes discolored.

Silver kept in a room with open gas burners or coal stoves keeps its brilliancy for a short time only. Tarnishing can be prevented by having the pieces lacquered; but the lacquer, though serviceable for ornamental pieces and toilet articles, cannot be used on the table service. The lacquered ware can be kept in excellent condition simply by dusting it lightly and carefully and about once a month wiping it with a soft slightly dampened cloth. Never allow these pieces to become wet.

The silver that is used daily can be kept in excellent condition by washing thoroughly in soft warm water and soap every day. All such silver should be washed well every second week. In doing this be careful not to put several pieces in the pan together, for this causes dents and scratches.

Rain water or water that has been boiled is the best to use. Make a heavy suds with a pure soap and add a few tablespoonfuls of ammonia. A soft sponge is most suitable for washing silver, and a fine brush may be employed on the chased pieces or around the handles.

After washing the silver well in the ammonia suds rinse in clear cold water and let it stand for a few minutes. If any polishing is necessary it can be done at this time. Common whiting, wet with alcohol and rubbed on with a soft flannel, makes an excellent polish. After polishing wash well again.

Finally dip all the pieces in a bath of boiling water and dry with a very soft cloth. This last dip in the clear boiling water does much to prevent further oxidation.

Cassa Roll (Original).

Cook one and a half cupfuls of rice. Have a half gallon bucket greased inside; put part of the rice into the bucket, pasting it all around the side, leaving a hollow in the center. Fill this with chili made as follows: Put a tablespoonful of lard in pan; grind an onion size of cup, put in grease and fry for a minute; add two cups ground beef; fry for ten minutes; then add water to keep covered. Cook for an hour. Season with a pinch of salt and two teaspoonfuls chili powder. Pour chili into rice and cover with remaining rice. Cover bucket and boil in a double boiler for one or two hours.

Watercress Jelly.

An odd flavoring for gelatine, from an American standpoint, is watercress. A German housekeeper declares it makes a delicious variety, much appreciated by her family.

The gelatine is made in the usual way and while still hot the juice of three or four large handfuls of fresh watercress is poured into it.

Pound the cress in a clean mortar, add half a glass of cold water and squeeze in a jelly bag or cheesecloth to extract all the juice.

If the plain taste of the cress is thought too insipid the juice of one lemon can be added.

Home-Made Cream Cheese.

Take two quarts of thickly clabbered milk and pour into it a quart of boiling water. Let it stand for ten minutes or longer, then put into a perfectly fresh cheesecloth bag and drain over night. The next morning rub this cheese to a smooth pulp and press through a rather coarse sieve. Salt to taste, add gradually a half teaspoonful of thick cream, pack into small jars or cups and stand away in a cool place for two weeks. At the end of that time scrape off the top and turn from the cups for use.

Turkish Delight.

Boil 2½ pounds loaf sugar with 1¾ pints of water. When it is clear add 65 drams of starch, dissolved in a little cold water. Stir until the sugar has become a thick paste; add 2½ drams of water and one cup of chopped almonds. Flavor with rose, lemon or any fruit extract. Pour into oiled pans one inch deep. When cold cut into squares and dip each into powdered sugar. They will keep some time in tin boxes. These are the sweetmeats that are imported at such high prices.

Four Good Things to Know.

When broiling steak, brush it over with butter and flour to keep the juice in. Add chopped sweet peppers to hash, and you will find the new flavor delightful. Should soup be too salt, add a sliced raw potato and cook a few minutes longer. To cut a loaf of hot brown bread, take a piece of twine and place it round the loaf, cross the ends and pull; there will be a clean cut, without any crumbs.

A Gage Filling for Cake.

If you have wearied of the different fillings for your cup cake, instead of using currant jelly or chocolate try spreading the layers thickly with green gage jam. Cover the top with a thick boiled icing, or, if the cake is to be eaten the same day that it is baked, the top can be covered with whipped cream beaten stiff.

Stewed Fruit Before Breakfast.

There are few better or more pleasant laxatives than to eat stewed figs, apples or prunes a half hour before breakfast. It is important to take this fruit on first awakening in the morning, as twice the quantity at breakfast or later has little effect medicinally.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

He had consented to wait for his breakfast under Miss Smith's representation that it would be ready at once and her assurance that he couldn't work through the day without it.

"Happily, Archie," explained Tracy, whose unquenchable college levity no earthquake could affect, "happily my domestic jewel has been stocked up with rice and oatmeal, two of the most nutritious of foods; and Miss Janet is making coffee on her traveling coffee pot for the Boss. That's alcohol, and independent of gas-mains. Lucky; for the gas-range is out of action, and we have to try charcoal. Notice one interesting thing, Archie? Old Keatcham, whom we were fighting tooth and nail three weeks ago, is now bossing us as ruthlessly as a football coach; and Cousin Cary is taking his slack talk as meek as a freshman. Great old boy, Keatcham! And—oh, I say! has any one gone to the rescue of the Rogerses? I saw Kito speeding over that way from the garage and Haley hiking after him. I hope the nine small yellow domestics are not burned at the stake with Rogers; the bally fire-trap is blazing like a tar-barrel!"

As it happened, the colonel had dispatched a small party to their neighbor's aid. Haley and Kito were not among them; they were to guard the garage which was too vital a point in their household economy to leave unprotected. Nevertheless, Haley and Kito did both run away, leaving a Mexican helper to watch; and when they returned they were breathless and Haley's face was covered with blood. He was carefully carrying something covered with a carriage-robe in his hand.

"I've the honor to report, sir," Haley mumbled, stiff and straight in [illegible] a very grimy and blood-stained hand at salute, "I've the honor to report, sor, that Private Kito and me discovered two suspicious characters making up the hillside by the sekrut road. We purshooed thim, sor, and whin they wu'dn't halt we fired on thim, sor, ixploding this here bum which wint off whin the hindmost man tumbled."

Kito smilingly flung aside the carriage-robe disclosing the still smoking shell of an ingenious round bomb, very similar to those used in fireworks.

The colonel examined it closely; it was an ugly bit of dynamite craft.

"Any casualties, sergeant?" the colonel asked grimly.

"Yes, sor. The man wid the bum was kilt be the ixplosion; the other man was hit by Private Kito and wounded in the shoulder but escaped. I mesilf have a confusion on me right arrum, me ankle is sprained; and ivery tooth in me head is in me pockit!

"Report to Miss Smith at the hospital, sergeant. Any further report?"

"I wu'd like to riccommind Private Kito for honorable minshun for gallanthry."

"I shall certainly remember him; and you also, sergeant, in any report that I may make. Look after the garage, Kito."

Kito bowed and retired, beaming, while Haley hobbled into the house. The consequences of the attack made on the garage did not appear at once. One was that young Arnold had already brought the touring car into the patio in the absence of Haley and Kito. Another was that he and Tracy and Kito all repaired to the scene of the explosion to examine the dead man's body. They returned almost immediately, but for a few moments there was no one of the house in the court. The colonel went to Keatcham in a final effort to dissuade him from going into the city until after he himself had gone to the Presidio and returned with a guard. He represented as forcibly as he could the danger of Keatcham's appearance during a time of such tumult and lawlessness.

"We are down to the primeval passions now," he pleaded. "Do you suppose if it had been Haley instead of that dago out there who was killed that we could have punished the murderer? Not unless we did it with our own hands. They are maybe lying in wait at the first street corner now. If you will only wait—"

Keatcham chopped off his sentence without ceremony, not irritably, but with the brusquerie of one whose time is too precious for dilatory amenities.

"Will the fire wait?" he demanded. "Will the thieves and toughs and ruffians whom we have to crush before they realize their strength, will they wait? This is my town, Winter, the only town I care a rap for; and I propose to help save it." I can. Danger? Of course there is danger; there is danger in every battle; but do you keep out of battles where you belong because you may get killed? This is my affair; if I get killed it is in the way of business, and I can't help it! No, Arnold, I won't have your father's son mixed up in my fights; you can't go."

"Somebody has got to run the machine, sir," insinuated young Arnold with a coaxing smile; "and I fancy I shouldn't be my father's son if I didn't look after my guest—not very long; he'd cut me out. Tracy is going, too, he's armed—"

"You are not both going," said the colonel, "somebody with a head on him must stay here to guard the ladies."

He would have detailed both Tracy and Mercer; but Mercer could really help Keatcham better than anyone in any business arrangements which might need to be made. And Keatcham plainly wished his company. Had not the situation been so grimly serious Winter could have laughed at the grotesque reversal of their conditions; Tracy and Arnold did laugh; they were all taking their orders from the man who had been their defeated prisoner a little while back. Mercer alone kept his melancholy poise; he had obtained the aim of years; he was not sure but his revenge was subtler and completer than he had dared to hope. Being a zealot he was possessed by his dreams. Suppose he had converted this relentless and tremendous power to his own way of faith; what mightn't he hope to accomplish? Meanwhile, so far as the business in hand was concerned, he believed in Keatcham and in Keatcham's methods of help; he bowed to the innate power of the man; and he was as simply obedient and loyal as Kito would have been to his feudal lord.

In a very brief time all the arrangements were made; the four men went into the patio to enter the touring car. They walked up to the empty machine. The colonel stepped into the front seat of the machine. Something in the noise of the engine which was panting and straining against its control, some tiny sibilant undertone which any other ear would have missed, warned his; he bent quickly. A dark object gyrated above the heads of the other two just mounting the long step; it landed with a prodigious splash in the fountain, flying into a multitude of sputtering atoms and hurling a great column of water high up in air. Unheeding its shrieking clamor, the soldier sprang over the side of the car, darted through the great arched doorway out upon the terrace toward a clump of rubber trees. He fired; again he fired.

In every catastrophe the spectators' minds lose some parts of the action. There are blanks to be supplied by no one. Every one of the men and women present on that fatal morning had a different story. Colvin was packing; he could only remember the deafening roar and the shouting; and when he got downstairs and saw—he turned deadly sick; his chief impression is the backs of people and the way their hands would shake. Janet Smith, inside, dressing Haley's wounds, was first warned by the tumult and cries; she as well as Archie and Haley who were with her could see nothing until they got outside. All Mrs. Melville saw was the glistening back of the car and Mercer stepping into the car and instantly lurching forward. The explosion seemed to her simultaneous with Mercer's entering the car. But Mrs. Rebecca Winter, who perhaps had the coolest head of all, and who was standing on the dais of the arcade exactly opposite the car, distinctly saw Keatcham with an amazing exertion of vigor for a man just risen from a sick-bed, and with a kind of whirling motion, literally hurl Mercer out of the car. She heard the crackle and a roar and Kito screamed in Japanese, running in from the carriage side. She cannot tell whether Tracy or Arnold reached the mangled creature on the pavement first. Arnold only remembers how the carriage robe flapped in Tracy's shaking hands before he flung it over the man. Tracy's fair skin was a streaky, bluish white, and his under jaw kept moving up there and down like that of a fish out of water, while he gasped, never uttering a sound.

Young Arnold was trembling so that his hands shook when he would have raised the wounded man. Mercer alone was composed although deathly pale. He had the presence of mind to throw the harmless fragments of the bomb into the fountain and to examine the interior of the car lest there should be more of destruction hidden therein. Then he approached the heap on the flags; but Keatcham was able to motion him away, saying in his old voice, not softened in the least:

"Don't you do that! I'm all in. No use. They got me. But it won't do them any good; you boys know that will you witnessed; it gives a fifty thousand for the arrest and conviction or the killing of Atkins; his own cut-throats will betray him for that. But—where's Winter? You damn careless fools didn't let him get hurt?"

"Shure, sor, he didn't let himsilf git hurted," Haley blurted out; he had run in after Miss Smith, brandy bottle in hand; "'tis the murdering dagoes is gettin' hurted off there behind the big rubber trees; I kin see the dead legs of thim, this minnit. 'Tis a grand cool shot the colonel is, sor."

"Bring him in, let them go; they were only tools," panted Keatcham weekly; but the brandy revived him; and his lips curled in a faint smile as Janet Smith struck a match to heat the teaspoonful of water for her hypodermic. "Make it good and strong, give me time to say something to Mercer and Winter—there he comes; good runners those boys are!"

Tracy and Arnold, acting on a common unspoken impulse, had dashed after Winter and were pushing him forward between them. Keatcham was nearly spent, but he rallied to say the words in his mind. He kept death at bay by the sheer force of his will. When Winter knelt down beside him, with a poignant memory of another time in the same place when he had knelt beside a seemingly dying man, and gently touched the unmarred right hand lying on the carriage-robe, he could still form a smile with his stiff lips and mutter: "Only thing about me isn't in tatters; of course you touched it and didn't try to lift me where I'm all in pieces. You always understood. Listen! You, too, Mercer. Winter knows the things I'm bound to have go through. I've explained them to him. You'll be my executors and trustees? A hundred thousand a year, not too big a salary for the work—you can do it. It's a bigger job than the army one, Winter. Warnebold will look after the other end. He's narrow but he is straight. I've made it worth his while. Some loose ends—it can't be helped now. Maybe you'll find out there are more difficulties in administering a big fortune than you fancied, and that it isn't the easiest thing in the world helping fools who can't . . . help themselves. There are all those Tidewater idiots . . . made me read about . . . you'll have to attend to them, Mercer . . . old woman in the queer clothes . . . chorus . . . girl . . . those old ladies who who had one egg between them for breakfast . . . you'll see to them all?"

"Yes," said Mercer, looking down on the shrunken features with a look of pain and bewilderment. "Yes, suh, I'll do my best."

"And—we're even?"

"I reckon I'm obliged to call it so, suh," returned Mercer, with a long, gasping sigh, "but—my Lord? you'd better have let me go!"

"Very likely," said Keatcham, dryly, "the city needs me. Well, Winter, you must look after that. I've been thinking why a man throws his life away as I did: he has to, unless he's a poltroon. He can't count whether he's more useful than the one he saves . . . he has simply got to save him . . . you were a good deal right, Winter, about not doing the evil thing to get the good. No, it's a bad time for me to be taken; but it's an honorable discharge. . . . Helen will be glad . . . you know I'm not a pig, Winter . . . do what I tried to do . . . where's my kind nurse?" Janet was trying by almost imperceptible movements to edge a pillow under his shoulders; he was past turning his head, but his eyes moved toward her. "I've left you . . . a wedding gift . . . If I lived . . . given to you; but made it safe, anyhow. Mercer?"

"Its a Bigger Job Than the Army One, Winter."

His voice had grown so feeble and came in such gasps from his torn and laboring chest that Mercer bent close to his lips to hear the struggling sentences. "Mercer," he whispered, "I want . . . . just tell you . . . you didn't convert me!"

Thus, having made amends to his own will, having also, let us humbly hope, made amends to that greater and wiser Will which is of more merciful and wider vision than our weakness can comprehend, Edwin Keatcham very willingly closed his eyes on earth.

HIS IMPORTANT MESSAGE.

He led her away from the crush on the dancing floor to a bench beneath an artificial palm.

"I—I have brought you here to tell you something that has been on my mind for some time," he whispered nervously.

Visions of a romantic proposal flitted across her mind.

"You have?" she responded coyly.

"Yes, something I know will interest you."

Now she was almost looking for the gleam of the ring in his hand.

"Gracious! What is it you wish to tell me, Mr. Basswood?"

"Well—er—I don't know exactly how to go about it?"

"Oh, don't be bashful."

"Why, you see—"

"Yes! Yes! Go ahead, dear."

"Er—I brought you off from the crowd to tell you—"

"Yes, George."

"To—to tell you that there are two buttons loose on the back of your waist and—"

A FULL ASSORTMENT OF SLEDS

THE SUNFLOWER GIRL

"Perhaps I am absurdly jealous, as you say," Madge plaintively admitted, "but, oh, Laurence, you say such pretty things about such lots of other girls!"

"Naturally," replied her lover blandly, "I am a poet." He had once, at his own expense, published a slender volume of verse, entitled, "Petal Dust and Pansies," bound in white vellum, tied up with green ribbon, and dedicated "To the Ideal Girl."

"I—I should have thought," she faltered, "that your ideal girl was the one you'd ask to marry you."

"You take me so literally," he complained, with a twinkle which she did not see. "You confuse the ideal with the real. Besides, I was talking of poems and pictures; and, talking of pictures, let's go out and see Ainsworth's picture at the academy before tea. Run and put your hat on, child."

Now, this picture by Ainsworth was the center of attraction. It represented a beautiful girl in a yellow gown leaning over a golden balcony. Her yellow ringlets blew across her cheeks to mingle with the bunch of sunflowers that nodded beside her golden head, and over everything seemed to shimmer the yellowish haze of a warm spring afternoon.

"Exquisite," exclaimed Laurence.

"Do you admire her?" asked Madge.

"So much that I shall buy the picture," said Laurence.

"You cannot, for it is already marked sold," said Madge. "And, as for being exquisite, look at her hair all across her face. You can't even tell whether she is pretty or not."

"That's the charm of it," said Laurence. "She symbolizes the ideal. Come along to lunch. You don't need to admire yourself in the glass, Madge. Your hair is as smooth as satin."

His remark was the last drop in Madge's cup of exasperation. Her brown tresses were long, thick and glossy, but they had not the slightest wave or "kink" in them. And the girl would have given her pretty ears for hair that curled; but once, when she had "crimped" her own with tongs, Laurence had forbidden her ever again to use such artificial abominations.

The quarrel grew as luncheon progressed, until finally Madge pulled off her engagement ring and dropped it into Laurence's coffee.

"You needn't see me home," she said. "I'll take a carriage. You can go to your friend Ainsworth and get him to take you to the fair unknown."

Half annoyed, half bewildered, Laurence was left to fish the ring out of the eclair.

"She'll expect me to go round this evening, as I did when she broke off our engagement because of Stella," thought he. "She deserves a lesson. I shan't go. What a storm in a teacup!"

That evening Madge awaited him, sure he would come and bring back the ring. But he didn't come. After a sleepless night Madge sent a note to Laurence's home. It said:

"Unless you come to meet me at four o'clock, I shall know you do not wish to come again. M."

Until four o'clock she spent the time in waiting for Laurence's ring at the bell. It did not come.

From four o'clock to six she spent in wishing that she had never been born.

At six o'clock her brother volunteered to go 'round to Laurence.

"But he wasn't at home," the brother said on his return. "His man said that he'd gone down to see Mr. Ainsworth, and that he didn't know when to expect him home."

After dinner she ran up stairs to her own sitting room, flung herself down on the sofa, buried her brown head in its yellow cushions, and—oh, why do servants insist upon bringing in coffee to people with broken hearts?

But it was not the coffee.

It was Laurence! Dusty, disheveled, carrying a parcel.

"A little peace offering," said he, "a study by Ainsworth of the sunflowers at his place. D'you like it? I meant to bring it around at four this afternoon. You asked me to call then."

"It's half past eight now," said Madge, icily.

"I know it, dear. But when I got down to Ainsworth's I found he'd just fallen down the studio steps and broken his leg. No one to look after him but his landlady's daughter—the sunflower girl.

"She had red arms," Laurence responded later, in answer to Madge's questions; "she wore a cruel pink cotton frock; she had freckles, also a slight squint."

"And her curls?" Madge put in eagerly.

"Those curls were screwed up tightly round her head in curl-papers."

"Quite out of place," suggested Madge mischievously, "in the ideal girl!"

"The ideal girl," declared the poet, smoothing Madge's soft hair, "is never a patch upon the real one. You are worth 50,000 academies full of Sunflower Girls, Madge."

A Premium on Obscurity.

"What," inquired the melancholy philosopher, "is fame?"

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum, "to be candid, fame doesn't seem to amount to much at present. The man who seems to stand the best show in politics seems to be the one who hasn't any public record to speak of."—Washington Star.

KEPT FUNDS FOR WOODSMEN.

Conductor as a Walking Bank for Reckless Workers.

"For more than thirty years the most popular woodsman's bank in Maine was a bank on two legs," says Maj. Holmes Day, author of "King Spruce." "Until he was over seventy years old Uncle Nate Swan was conductor on the Bangor & Piscataquis railroad, running between the city and Moosehead lake. With him rode the woods and driving crews. When they forgot themselves and made a racket on his train he used to cuff them into submission and no man ever raised his hand against Uncle Nate. When the men came out of the woods with their pay most of them realized from bitter experience that the city folks would get all their money away from them in a few days. As soon as they would get aboard the train they would begin to strip ten-dollar bills off their rolls and hand the money to Uncle Nate to 'sink' for them—banking it on call. They never forgot, nor did he; and in all the years there was never a dispute between Conductor Swan and any of his depositors. When they came back on his train they were sure of enough money for their fare and their tobacco at the lake outfitting store. They wouldn't have known very well what to do with more."

HE TOOK NO CHANCES ON EGGS.

Man with "Hen Fruit" Refused Admittance to Theater.

A theatrical company that played in repertoire in country villages barred a citizen of a town, not long ago, when he entered the theater with a basket, after having purchased a ticket. Just as he was going in, the cover of the basket unaccountably slipped off, revealing two dozen eggs.

"Hi!" said the ticket taker. "This isn't Easter! Where are you going with them eggs?"

"None o' your business! Here's my ticket, all paid for an' reg'lar!" declared the citizen.

"Well, you don't take any eggs inside while I'm here," said the ticket taker; and then the other saw the reason his burden was suspected and roared with laughter.

He left the eggs in charge of the man at the box office and entered; and he enjoyed every moment of the show. When it was over, the manager returned the eggs to him, and said:

"I was afraid you might put your foot into the basket while you were applauding."—Modern Society.

Indian Girl's Plea.

A woman salesman for a department store recently went to the school for Cherokee Indian girls in Tahlequah to take measurements for their uniforms, and here is what she told about the girls: "Those Indian girls are splendid specimens of womanhood. They are all splendidly formed, blooming with health and overflowing with good spirits. And the eternal feminine asserts itself as strongly among those pretty Indian maidens as among any of the girls in eastern colleges with whom I have been brought in contact. All of them make the same plea. Every girl in that seminary as I took her measure begged: 'Please make my suit a little tighter in the waist than this is and do be sure to have the skirt cut longer, won't you?' They all want to feel grown up and to don long skirts."

Vigorous Maine Maple.

A rock maple tree standing and still growing in a flourishing state on the farm of A. L. Hardy in West New Vineyard measures 14 feet in circumference at the base. It has a short trunk but heavy spreading branches and was growing on this farm 102 years ago when the late Samuel Nevens, great-grandfather of Mr. Hardy, who was the first settler on the farm, came here in 1806, and was then about four inches in diameter. It stands not far from the dwelling house and has been tapped nearly every year for 75 years. Scarcely a dead limb is to be seen about it.—Kennebec Journal.

Enemies to Big Trees.

Natural influences in nearly all parts of Block island are so unfavorable to tree growth that the planting of trees with the expectancy of having them attain even a fair size is not practicable, is the conclusion reached in a report prepared by R. L. Rogers, a special investigator connected with the United States bureau of forestry.

Mr. Rogers says that he finds the residents of the island so discouraged through failure to combat successfully the gales and salt vapor of the island that there is no sentiment that would guarantee a united effort for reforesting the island.

Not Amphibious.

After a scorching day's work Ben Smith lighted his corncob pipe and sat down on the little wharf to rest. Near him lay an alligator, the visible result of his labors. A tourist from the north approached and loftily remarked: "Ah, I see you have an alligator."

No answer.

"It is amphibious, is it not?"

The tone nettled the old man.

"Amphibious, h—l!" he growled. "He'd bite yer arm off before ye could say Jack Robinson!"—Everybody's Magazine.

How He Figured It.

"Howard says he has four mothers."

"How does he make it out?"

"Own, god, step and in-law."—Harper's Weekly.

KNEW VALUE OF GOOD WATER.

Greek Writer Advised Countrymen to Sterilize Fluid.

The ancient Greeks already recommended the use of sterilized water. Rufus of Ephesus in the first century of this era taught that "all water from rivers and ponds is bad, except that from the Nile. Water from rivers which flow through unhealthy soil, stagnant water and that which flows near public bathing places is harmful. The best water is that which has been boiled in baked earthenware vessels, cooled and then heated a second time before drinking."

This hygienic prescription was intended both for healthy and sick people, since it was applied to the armies. "During marches and in the camps pits must be dug successively from the highest point to the lowest level of the place. These holes should be lined with clay such as is used for making pottery and the water should be made to percolate through it. The water will leave all its impurities in these pits."

It may be inquired how the ancient Greeks, knowing the processes of sterilization and filtration of water which they applied to that of the most limpid waters, should have drunk without precautions the water of the Nile, which our microscopes allow us to declare "sound," but which is in appearance the most worthy of suspicion of all, and is so muddy, so yellow, that it resembles wine.

WIDOWS MORE THAN HOLD OWN.

Have No Trouble in Maintaining Advantage in Matrimony.

Sam Weller's immortal advice to his son still seems to hold good. Widows are still hard to beat in the matrimonial stakes. During the last year the spinsters have practically had it all their own way between the ages of 20 and 40, but after 40 it has been the widow who has scored all along the line, says the Philadelphia Record. They would seem to acquire, after their fourth decade has been reached, a way of dealing with man that proves irresistible. The spinster apparently gives up to readily, takes too modest a view of her seductive charms; whereas the widow, having a better knowledge of the frailty of the other sex, goes in and wins a second time.

Proving It.

When the earth comes between the sun and the moon it always casts a round shadow. A place chosen for an experiment to prove the roundness of the earth "was near Bedford, England, where there is a straight six-mile stretch of water. At both ends and in the middle of this stretch of water posts were erected, each of the same definite height above the water level. Upon looking with a telescope along the tops of these three posts it was clearly seen that the center one overtopped the other by about six feet, thus marking the curvature of the earth's surface." This experiment has been repeated, and with every latest appliance brought to bear to effect absolute accuracy. The statement as to how a ship at sea shows the tops of her masts first and then gradually parts below that, but above the water, is a familiar one, and satisfies most minds.

The Cosmopolite.

Breadth of view for his.

Intolerance — narrowness — all that drove him absolutely wild. Little, petty, local prejudices—Oh, Lord! He used to boil positively with rage at all that sort of thing. And the man who made him really boil over was Sniggles.

Sniggles was a New Yorker, and to Sniggles Manhattan Island was Alpha and Omega. Hence the rage of the afore-mentioned advocate of the breadth of view.

"Why, Sniggles!" he roared, pounding the table with his fist. "Sniggles is the kind of man who would label a map of the universe 'New York and Vicinity'!"

The Goose Liver Trade.

In Strasburg this month the canning of the famous goose livers begins, and will keep several thousand people busy till next April. The finest livers come from geese that have never laid an egg.

Johann Clauss, in 1790, began to make goose liver pates in a small shop. He succeeded, but a competitor named Doyen, adding truffles to the goose liver pastry, soon outdistanced him. Now all pates de foie grass contain truffles; all are made according to the recipe composed by the talented Doyen over 100 years ago.

At the Riding School.

"Mount your horse on the left side."

"Why? What difference does it make?"

"It's the rule."

"But why should it be the rule?"

"Because in the past horsemen wore swords. They wore them on the left hip. Hence, had they mounted on the right side, the sword would have got in the way. So they mounted on the left, and we still mount on the left. Horses are accustomed to it, and if you try to get up from the right you are liable to be kicked."

Knew His Wife.

"I spent some of my salary to-day. I think even a married man has a right to do so."

"There's a great deal to be said on that subject."

"Well, I guess my wife will be equal to saying it all."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TRINITY'S 'DUTCH ARMS.'

Men's Association Organized at Reformed Church with Goodly Membership.

MOTTO, "THE OTHER FELLOW."

Rev. Alburtus Broek Makes Address and Officers Are Chosen for the Year.

Under favorable auspices a meeting was held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church last night for the purpose of forming a men's association. There were about sixty present and practically all were enrolled, which was encouraging to the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, and others who have been associated with him in the movement. The title will be "The Dutch Arms," and "The Other Fellow," was adopted as a motto.

Horace J. Martin, Sr., was chosen temporary chairman and after a few well chosen remarks regarding the object of the meeting, introduced Rev. Alburtus Broek, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, of Newark, brother of Trinity's pastor, who spoke on the subject, "How to Successfully Conduct a Men's Organization."

Congratulating the men on the large attendance, Mr. Broek said that that was a good sign to start off with and he felt sure the organization would be a strong adjunct to the church. He said that he did not know that he would be able to tell the men anything but what his younger brother could relate to them, but as it was always a good rule to do what your younger brother wants you to do, he felt compelled to say something.

"There are two kinds of men's clubs," said Mr. Broek, "namely, one composed of the men of the church for the men of the church and the other for the men who do not belong to any church and who are just waiting for someone to invite them to attend the meetings. The great problem is how to reach the men who don't belong to any church.

"I had five years experience with a men's organization at Newburg, N. Y., and in all that time I never heard a man say that he was displeased with the organization. We would devote about ten minutes to devotional exercises, have a good and welfare period, with a simple entertainment. And right here I will say that you will probably find an abundance of talent in your church. Then you will find it easy to reach a man's heart through his stomach and light refreshments are always an attractive feature.

"One of the most helpful features of the organization," continued Mr. Broek, "is a sick committee, who will look after the sick members and render such assistance as possible. I would advise you to avoid striving to make money. Have reasonable dues, but do not have as one of the objects the purpose of revenue. The chief aim should be the making of men. Don't leave all the work for the minister and thereby make it a one-man organization. Have good officers and then let every member co-operate with them. It is often easier for a layman to get new members than it is for the minister. While I was at Newburg sixty men joined my church either directly or indirectly through the men's association and in this way their families became identified with the church."

In connection with Mr. Broek's remarks, Rev. John Y. Broek said a few words and incidently presented a copy of the constitution of the "Dutch Arms" association which he had in his church at Asbury Park. This was adopted, with the understanding that it may be amended to suit local conditions. Remarks of encouragement were made by others, including representatives of other men's associations in the city.

Officers for the coming year were chosen as follows:

President, F. S. Cutter; first vice-president, F. E. Smith; second vice-president, A. L. Force; secretary, Frank Storr; treasurer, William F. Oliver.

This completed the business of the evening and a social hour was enjoyed during which refreshments were served by the men. Much enthusiasm was shown at the outset and the new society promises to be one of the strongest among those in the city.

Announces Shift of Priests.

The Rev. John P. Callaghan, rector of the Church of Our Lady Help of Christians, East Orange, announced yesterday that his assistant, the Rev. William L. Cunningham, would become assistant rector of the Church of the Star of the Sea, in Bayonne, succeeding the Rev. William Mackinson, next week. Father Mackinson will take the place left vacant by Father Cunningham.

SIDEWALK CYCLIST INJURES LITTLE GIRL

George Feller, a young man who conducts a milk business, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court, this morning, charged with Special Marshal Martin with riding his wheel on the sidewalk and knocking down the six-year-old daughter of Carmock McDonough, yesterday afternoon. His case was aggravated from the fact that he had continued on after the child had been felled to the ground and though instructed to be in court last night failed to do so. He was fine $3.

The accident occurred on Fairview avenue near Watchung, and but for the fact that other children witnessed it, Feller would not have been apprehended. They informed Special Marshal Martin, who carried the little girl to a neighboring home. She was badly rurt by the blow from the wheel and trough eventually recovering still feels the effects today.

The marshall arrested Feller afterward but released rim to finish delivering milk to customers on his promise to appear in court last night. When he failed to do so, a warrant was made out and he was arrested this morning. Feller explained his non-appearance last night by saying that he did not believe Martin had authority to arrest him because he was in citizen's clothes.

THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF THE DAY NURSERY

The third anniversary of The Day Nursery was observed yesterday afternoon uder the auspices of the City Union of The King's Daughters, at the nursery on West Fourth street, and it was the most successful in the short history of this charitable institution. During the hours from 3 to 6 o'clock, nearly one hundred friends of the nursery called, each one bringing something for the store-room. In addition there were a large number of people who, unable to be present, sent dry groceries, canned goods, etc.

The guests were received by Mrs. Frank W. Jones, president of the city union, assisted by Mrs. A. M. Most, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, Miss Hayes, Miss Olive DeLany, the last named being the city nurse.

Members of the Charity Circle were in charge of the tea, those serving as a committee including Mrs. D. N. Van Vliet, president; Mrs. M. A. Zook, Mrs. G. Harry Squires, Mrs. W. C. Kinney and Mrs. G. A. Chapman.

At present the average number of children cared for at the nursery every day is twenty, while some days it reaches thirty-five. The oldest child is seven years. There is now an Italian baby girl three weeks old there while her mother is being treated at the hospital. Mrs. Emma L. Bird is the matron of the nursery and she has had great success in her work. Those who have charge of the nursery are grateful for the many remembrances which will help to feed the children brought there while their mothers are at work.

SURPRISE PARTY IN HONOR OF MISS McDONOUGH.

Young people from this city tendered a surprise party to Miss Margaret McDonough at her home in South Plainfield, last night. The affair was arranged by Jerry Walsh, Frank McInerney, Edward O'Loughlin and Earl Moran and the trip each way was in the nature of a straw ride. Music, games and dancing were features of the party and refershments were served at midnight.

Among those who were present were the Misses Sadie Lee, Gertrude Smalley, Lillie McInerney, Marion Blimm, Ruth Moore, Ruth McCarthy, Nora Maguire and Margaret McDonough, Harold Rogers, Frank, James and John Casey, Thomas Bebout, Joseph Miller, John and Andrew McDonough, Jerry Walsh, Frank McInerney, Edward O'Loughlin and Earl Moran.

WHITE PLAGUE CAMPAIGN

Plainfield Tuberculosis Society Plans to Establish a Camp for Victims.

AT THE ANNUAL ELECTION.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson Chosen President of Local Society Which Is Doing a Noble Work.

Believing that the time is right for the establishment of a camp in the vicinity of Plainfield for the care and treatment of people suffering from tuberculosis, the Plainfield Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis at its annual meeting, yesterday, decided to take steps in that direction. Just where this camp will be located has not been determined, but a suitable site will be selected, one where patients suffering from tuberculosis will have every opportunity to recover, provided the disease has not reached the advanced stage.

In this connection the society will

at once begin the work of increasing its membership, the idea being to interest as many Plainfielders as possible in this work. The payment of a dollar will make a person a member and money secured in this way will go directly toward the alleviation of the ravages of the terrible disease. There are now about twenty-five cases of tuberculosis on record at the office of the Board of Health and the society wants to provide ways and means for their care before the disease reaches the helpless stage.

These officers were elected yesterday for the coming year:

President, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson; first vice-president, A. V. Heely; second vice-president, Henry L. Hall; secretary and treasurer, Leon R. Thurlow. Three committees were appointed as follows:

Camp—Henry L. Hall, chairman; Miss Marguerite Holly, Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Duncan W. Taylor. Finance—Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, Dr. F. J. Hughes, A. V. Heely. Visiting nurse—Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, chairman; Dr. William H. Murray and Leon R. Thurlow. These committees together with the officers comprise the executive committee.

Miss Swackhamer's Surprise.

Miss Bertha M. Swackhamer, of West Front street, was surprised at her home last evening by about thirty friends. Among those present were some from Lake Hopatcong, Middle Valley, Newark, Paterson, Elizabeth, Woodbridge, Rahway, and Scotch Plains, as well as a number of Plainfield friends. The evening was spent with games and music and refreshments were served about midnight. The affair was a complete surprise, especially as a number of those present were campers and boarders at Lake Hopatcong last summer, where Miss Swackhamer spent her vacation.

Gospel Addresses.

It is desired to call attention again to the series of gospel addresses on Sunday evenings as noticed in another column by George MacKenzie. Mr. MacKenzie's first address was marked by much clearness of exposition and much solemnity of appeal. If you have not settled peace with God, or if you are not saved, come and hear him. ***

Turkey Supper at Trinity.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, a turkey supper will be given in the lecture room of the church, Thursday and Friday evenings, January 28 and 29. Supper will be served from 6 to 9 o'clock and patrons are assured of a fine meal for which the society is noted.

MORE MONEY FOR RELIEF

Four Bright Little Tots Ask This Paper to Send Their Contribution to Italy.

TOTAL FUND IS $1,021.86.

Mary Buchanan, Gladys Lee, Marion Blair and Dorothy Lee Collect $3.00 for Cause.

Four bright little girls, who have been taught by their mothers to help those in sorrow, in sickness and in death, appeared at The Daily Press office this morning with a purse containing $3.00. "Please, Mr. Editor," said their spokesman, little Miss Buchanan, "we want you to send this money to the little girls in Italy who have lost their papas and their mammas. You have closed your fund but please, Mr. Editor, won't you send tris to those little girls who have no homes and no papas and no mammas?"

The pretty little girls, who were assured that the contribution would be sent as they directed through the New Jersey Red Cross Society, were Marion Blair, Dorothy Lee, Mary Buchanan and Gladys Lee. They had collected the fund from friends and neighbors and were anxious that "Mr. Editor' see that it go to Italy. The sum was sent this afternoon to Daniel Voorhees, treasurer of the New Jersey Red Cross Society witn a note containing the names of the contributors.

Treasurer Voorhees today sent The Daily Press this acknowledgement:

"The American National Red Cross.
"New Jersey State Branch.
"Trenton, N. J., Jan. 22, 1909.
"Editor, The Daily Press:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of $16.86, which you sent, in addition to the $1,000, for the relief of the earthquake sufferers in Italy, and ask you kindly to thank the contributors, for me, for this generous contribution. Please also accept my thanks for your good offices in the matter.

"Respectfully yours,
"DANIEL S. VOORHEES,
"Treasurer American National Red Cross, New Jersey State Branch."

An additional contribution of $2 made by Mrs. D. M. Runyon has also been sent to the same relief society. The total fund contributed by local residents through this paper now amounts to $1,021.86.

"TRY-OUT" NIGHT AGAIN ATTRACTS A BIG CROWD

The attendance at last week's "try-out" at the New Plainfield theatre was a record breaker but last night's was one of the smashing kind. The seating capacity of the house was sold out before 7:30 and fifteen minutes later the firemen ordered all further sales stopped. As it was, so many admissions had been disposed of it became necessary to place some of the people in the orchestra chairs and others in the stage wings. It was by far the larges house in the history of the theatre.

The "try-out" bill comprised some ten acts in all and only two were "knifed," a young miss who tried to look kiddish while she sang "Smarty," and an older woman who began to warble something that was drowned out by groans from the gallery gods. A colored aspirant, announced as "Steamboat Bill," made a big hit by shuffling off a really clever buck-and-wing dance after he had essayed to sing a song, but gave up because he forgot the words. The dance saved him from assassination. First honors for the night were carried off by the "Original Harrigan," a young man with a good pair of pipes and a ready flow of low comedy talk.

Because of booked attractions, the "try-out" next week will be held on Tuesday night.

To Talk on Character.

Irving E. Vining, of Columbia University, will again address the men's meeting in Y. M. C. A. hall tomorrow afternoon, taking for his subject, "The Positive and the Negative Development of Character." Mr. Vining is one of the best-equipped speakers to men who have ever appeared on the association platform. The addresses that he has already given in Plainfield have earned for him the gratitude of scores of young men who have been helped in the fight for character by his helpful and intensely practical suggestions. All men are welcome. Bertram F. Tallamy, bass soloist of the First M. E. church choir, will sing.

Mrs. John M. Lewis, of Richmond street, is detained at home with an attack of tonsilitis.

CRESCENT AVE. PROGRAM

Elaborate Services to Mark Formal Re-opening of Beautified Church Edifice.

MUSIC TO BE A FEATURE.

Grand Memorial Pipe Organ to be Used for First Time—Many Ministers to Participate.

An important event tomorrow in local religious circles will be the formal re-opening of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church upon the completion of the extensive repairs made at a great expense. In the morning there will be the regular communion service and reception of new members. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor, will be in charge and he will be assisted by Rev. L. R. Howard, Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Rev. F. D. Tildon.

There will be a special musical service in the evening under the direction of William P. Dunn, organist, by the quartet choir, comprising Mrs.

Rev. J. S. Zelie.

Virginia Wilson, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Herbert Taylor, tenor; James Stanley, bass. At this time an opportunity will be given to hear the fine new organ, given by Mrs. Charles Hyde in memory of her husband. The music for the morning service will be as follows:

Organ prelude, "The Evening Star" (Tannhauser) Wagner; anthem, "Bread of the World," Guilmant-Breckenridge; anthem, "O Love, That Will Not Let Me Go," Hotchkiss; organ postlude, "Grand Choeur," Hollins. This will be the program of music for the evening service:

Organ prelude, "March Religieuse," Guilmant; anthem, "Appear Thou Light Divine," offertory, "Traumerei," Schuman; anthem, "Ho Every One That Thirsteth," Martin; organ postlude, "March Pontificale," Lemmens.

There will be special interest in the evening service in addition to the music because Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, a former pastor, now of the Brick church, New York, will speak, following a brief address by the pastor, Dr. Zelie, in relation to the reopening of the edifice.

The offering at the evening service will be for the Board of Relief of the Presbyterian church for the aid of ministers who are in want because of illness or advanced age and to care for the destitute widows and orphans of ministers.

On Tuesday night an organ recital will be given at the church on the new organ by Archer Gibson, of the Brick church, New York, when he will show the possibilities of the new instrument in the rendition of a fine program. William P. Dunn, who has been the organist at this church for sometime will continue in that position.

Enjoyable Sleighing Party.

An enjoyable sleigh-ride party was given Thursday night, the affair being arranged by the Misses Madeline Blimm, Mary Wierenga, Adelaide Cole and Mildred Priemer. There were about twenty young people in the party and after a trip to Westfield and back all were entertained at the home of Miss Adelaide Cole.

Tested High Tension Cable.

The Public Service Corporation made another test of its high tension cable running between this city and Cranford, yesterday, when everything was found to be in a satisfactory condition.

OBJECTED TO HUSBAND BUYING NEW GLASS EYE

Mrs. Rosie Cline, of Plainfield avenue, appeared in the city court this morning, with a grievance against her husband, Edward Cline who she charged with failing to properly support his family. She related numerous instances of what she termed his neglect but to the court and spectators it appeared as though Cline was more sinned against than sinning. From the sample of rapid-fire talk that the plaintiff handed out it was a wonder to them how he managed to survive through his married life of twenty years.

Mrs. Cline admitted that her husband had not worked since last November but declared that he received the rent from two houses he owned and spent it foolishly.

"At Christmas time," she said, "he had some money and what did he do with it? He went to New York and bought himself an overcoat and bum glass eye."

The court opined that the purchase of either wasn't such a serious offense from a family point of view and that if he squandered his rents in drink it would be different. He ended the argument by directing Cline to bring the rent money to him each month and that after the tax and repair expenses were deducted he would try to make a division satisfactory to both

W. H. WEBSTER DINES HOPE CHAPEL BOYS

William H. Webster, who is shortly to leave with Dr. Grenfell for Labrador, gave a dinner to the Boys' Club, of Hope chapel, of which he is leader, last night. The members and guests of honor numbered forty in all.

During the evening addresses were made by Mr. Webster, Rev. Dr J. S. Zelie, Rev. L. R. Howard, G. Herbert ondict, Brockholst K. Miller and Hugh B. Sweeney. A response was made for the club by Clinton Firstbrook, the president, who also presented Mr. Condict with a handsome silk umbreila in behalf of the members. Mr. Condict was the leader of the club previous to Mr. Webster and is largely respon sible for the rapid growth it has enjoyed.

Following the dinner, the young men enjoyed an informal social hour during which musical selections were given by club members. Mr. Webster will leave for Labrador in March and will assist Dr. Grenfell in his missionary work.

MEN'S BARACA CLASS HOLDS AN ENTERTAINMENT.

Music was furnished by the Crab Band, composed of the men of the class, leader pipes, zobos, bass and snare-drums, mandolins, piano, washboards, fifes, milk-pans and many other instruments being used to make up the orchestra. A good sum was realized from the affair for the benefit of the work. The program follows:

First Attempt, Crab orchestra; second spasm, "Spanish Cavilier," orchestra; topical song, Bones; duet, piano and mandolin, Masters Martin; Pain Killer No. 3, "Tramp, Tramp," orchestra; sketch, Lanky Sammey; convulsions, "Mocking Bird," orchestra; recitation, Unkle Ned; instrumental quartet; stage coach, "Yankee Doodle," orchestra; solo, harmonica, Peewee; last breath, "Auld Lang Syne," orchestra; duet, mandolin and piano, Masters Martin; sketch, Old Jokey; impersonator, A Real Turk; lightning sketch artist, farce comedy, "Chums." SWEENY'S NAME FORGED?

Bank Teller Claims His Signiture Was Not That of Plainfielder.

SCHLICHER IS DEFENDANT.

"No Funds" Across Face of Check Not Written by Bank Men, So Clerks Tell the Court.

A sensational turn was given to the suit of William Ralston Sweeny, formerly of this city, against Peter Schlieher, of Trenton, before Judge Macpherson, in the Trenton District Court yesterday, when Ira D. Forst, paying teller of the Trenton Banking Company, testified that a check for $50 presented in evidence by Mr. Schlicher and signed "William R. Sweeny," was not in Mr. Sweeny's handwriting. Across the face of the check was marked "no funds," but Mr. Forst testified that the words were not written by any employe of the bank, and said that if the check had been presented it would have been honored, because Mr. Sweeny had ample funds on deposit.

Under cross-examination by Adrian Applegate, counsel for Mr. Sweeny, Mr. Schlicher admitted that he signed Mr. Sweeny's name to a number of receipts. The signatures to these receipts are said to correspond to the signature on the $50 check. Mr. Schlicher insisted that the signature on the $50 check was Mr. Sweeny's. It is expected that before the suit is completed experts in handwriting will be subpoenaed by each side.

Since the beginning of the suit Mr. Sweeny has introduced in evidence checks amounting to $5,869.92, which amount, he claims, Mr. Schlicher still owes him. Mr. Schlicher has also produced a number of receipts for money he claims he loaned Mr. Sweeny, among which receipts are those to which he signed Mr. Sweeny's name.

In order to ascertain what he owed Mr. Schlicher, Mr. Sweeny asked the former to produce his chck stubs, but Mr. Schlicher stated that he was unable to find them.

The suit was continued before Judge Macpherson today, and it is expected that some sensational developments will ensue.

Mr. Sweeny was long employed by Mr. Schlicher as his chief adviser. The latter was formerly engaged in business here.

No Decision in Police Matter.

The Councilmanic police board, of which Frank DeWitt Randolph is the chairman, has as yet done nothing with the request of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association for a change to the eight-hour schedule with a shift of the day and night men. In speaking of the matter Mr. Randolph said today, that the committee intends to consider it fully and then the proposition will be submitted to all the members of the Council with a view to ascertaining whether they will favor the change. The committee hopes to take action on the matter at the February meeting.

The owner of a fine St. Bernard can recover his lost dog by applying at The Daily Press office. The animal is an intelligent one because he showed that he appreciated the value of a "Press want adv." by appearing at this office today in search of his owner. He has been well fed and if his master cannot conveniently call for him today he will be given lodging and refreshments until Monday.

KILLED AT ERIE STATION.

A. F. Culleton Tossed Back and Forth Between Two Trains.

Paterson, Jan. 23.—A. F. Culleton, a Wells Fargo Express messenger, was killed by an Erie train yesterday afternoon at the Market street station, Paterson, in full view of hundreds of people. So intense was the excitement that a number of women in walking for a train were overcome. Culleton stepped off one train while it was still in motion, only to swing himself in front of another which he did not see approaching. He was tossed from one train to the other as they moved along, and when they passed his form was hardly recognizable.

He was still alive when the ambulance from the General Hospital rushed to the scene, but he succumbed soon afterward.

Not for Him.

BRE'R JOHNSING---ARE YO' FEELIN'S HURT?

One of our esteemed fellow merchants has seen fit to throw out the gauntlet, and with the proverbial chip on the shoulder, loudly acclaim to the citizens of Plainfield, that they know their expenses are high—but all legitimate, they say they realize their expenses are higher than some of their competitors, who conduct a business on different principles from their own—yet through a sudden magic like wand—through a flash like hurricane—lo! it all disappears in a moment of legitimate explanations—and everything that looked like competition is "Beaten to a frazzle." Now it is too bad, our good neighbor's temper had to be ruffled—it's too bad; this house has the misfortune (?) to conduct its business on its own ideas and experiences, and act on its own convictions, otherwise we shouldn't be compelled to impose on the public with this writing, and what's more, should not have aroused the ire of our good neighbor.

We believe, however, that the public takes our talks sincerely; we believe that the people show their approval or disapproval on anything they are vitally interested in by their sbpport or lack of it. Our increasing business proves clearly enough to our satisfaction that we have cause to be pleased and highly satisfied. We hear expressions of satisfaction and approval every day, expressions so enthusiastic at times, that were we of the egotistical type, the public would hear of it in print in every issue, but we take it only as a matter of fact, that more people are being convinced, that our values are the best, because we save in one item of trading stamps alone from $4,000 to $5,000 annually—We have a second misfortune (?) in differing with our esteemed competitor, in that we claim---by figuring our prices lower, based on lower expense, we gain an increased patronage, thus doubly differing in opinion and principle. We shall continue our very best efforts toward convincing more people every day that it is to their best advantage to shop here---and so long as we have cause to feel as well satisfied with their support, our good neighbor's ruffled temper will have to remain a condition to be survived.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The Western Golf Association has thrown down the gauntlet to the "near amateur" in no uncertain manner, and it is possible that the United States Golf Association may see the wisdom of legislating along similar lines. According to a letter received in New York this week, Section 7 of the by-laws was amended at the annual meeting of the Western body last Saturday in such a way as to leave no doubt regarding certain points which heretofore have been productive of no end of discussion. The new section as framed reads as follows:

Section 7—No person shall be considered an amateur golfer or shall be eligible to compete in the amateur championship of this association, or in any event authorized or held by it, who accepts or has accepted, directly or indirectly, any fee, gratuity, money or other consideration for playing or teaching the game of golf, or who personally makes or repairs golf clubs, golf balls or other golf articles for pay, or who, after the age of sixteen years, has received pay for services as a caddie, caddie master or green keeper, or who is or has been a professional in any other branch of athletics.

Silas W. Strawn, for years prominently identified with Western Golf Association affairs, who is also a vice-president of the United States Golf Association, intends to recommend to the executive committee of the latter body that it amend the by-laws to agree with the new section adopted by the Western body. It was also resolved at the meeting to instruct the directors to amend Section 8 of the by-laws as follows:

Section 8—All competitions held under the jurisdiction of this association shall be played strictly in accordance with the rules of the game of golf as approved by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, September, 1908, with such special and other rules as this association may adopt, in accordance with the recommendations made by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club in its revised rules of the game of golf, adopted September, 1908.

Upon being authorized and instructed to appoint a special committee to prepare the special and other rules, which shall after their promulgation govern all competitions held under the jurisdiction of the Western Golf Association, the president of the latter named the following: H. F. Smith, chairman; Judge W. O. Henderson, Alan L. Reid, Frank A. Helmer and Crafts W. Higgins. The last named was appointed secretary of the committee.

Reid is an ultra-conservative, dyed in the wool Royal and Ancient rules man, while Higgins is an extreme radical. The others vary, being in the main conservative, so it is unlikely that anything rash will be done as regards breaking away from the St. Andrews code, which is at present accepted the world over wherever golf is played.

A UNIQUE EXHIBITION.

There is shortly to be held in London an ideal home exhibition, to which the Queen will contribute various articles from the technical schools at Sandringham. The prospect opens up the question of what really constitutes an ideal home, says a writer in the Sketch. Will the exhibition be confined to such gross materials as chairs, bedsteads, pots, pans, and dishclouts? Or shall we have an exhibition of the higher domestic virtues, with young persons, subtly and beautifully arrayed, personifying that annoying entity, the angel in the house? It is obvious that technical schools cannot (and ought not to be able to) supply an ideal home. A humorous friend of mine, who is also a famous writer, has recently bought a piece of land, erected thereon a stately house, and furnished it from garret to cellar, because she says she "must have a home to get away from." This frivolous view of the domestic hearth is, no doubt, in favor at the present time, and hence the popularity of small flats, with bedrooms like ship's cabins, and kitchens in which the proverbial cat could never, by any chance, be swung by the goddess who presides over the diminutive stove. The modern home, indeed, is too often only a place where you pack your boxes, remove motor travel stains and "look-up" Bradshaw; where you dress for the theatre, answer the telephone, and make your arrangements in illness for prompt removal to a sanitarium or nursing establishment. There are plenty of old-fashioned people who hope that the coming exhibition will make home popular again among "the classes." Among the masses it has never lost its hold.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Almost as Good.

Little Ikey came up to his father with a very solemn face.

"Is it true, father," he asked, "that marriage is a failure?"

His father surveyed him thoughtfully for a moment.

"Well, Ikey," he finally replied "if you get a rich wife it's almost as good as a failure."—Lippincott's.

WOULD LEASE SPUR TO TRACTION COMPANY.

The employes of the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains want the asylum managers to give the Morris County Traction Company the right to use the railway spur running from Morris Plains Station to the institution. The asylum staff wants better communication with Morristown. A petition signed by 429 employes of the asylum has been presented to the board of managers asking them to arrange, by lease or otherwise, for the use of the railway by the traction company. The railway spur is owned by the State.

The petition says the petitioners would like increased facilities for reaching Morristown and besides urging the use of the roadbed already laid, which is a branch of the Lackawanna connecting at Morris Plains, they ask the management to further in every way possible the building of the trolley road. There are over 2,000 persons at the hospital, and while all cannot go beyond the wall of the institution, there are many patients, particularly private ones, who are allowed to go as far as Morristown in charge of attendants.

It now costs about $1 to make the round trip of six miles, and if it is made entirely by carriage and the conveyance is kept waiting it may be more than that. It is possible that a State law will have to be passed to meet the request in the petition.

Parties Should Begin Earlier.

Wise, indeed, is the promoter of a new idea who proposes to have dances, parties and the like begin early in the evening for the purpose of effecting earlier adjournment. Late hours are convenient for the business world only in that people can attend social pleasantries without interfering with business, but it makes a great difference "in the cold dawn of the morning after." A part of the young social contingent could conform very nicely to earlier hours, and the vastly rich who need not contend with business cares could also be included. Children's parties should be hours earlier in the afternoon, or very early morning.—Woman's National Daily.

No Cases Until February 1.

This change the sheriff said was made because there will be no cases called in any of the courts until the later date.

NEWARK WOMAN'S LONG WALK TO FIND HUSBAND.

Mrs. John Freberter, of Newark, arrived at New Brunswick yesterday morning in search of her husband, whom she has not seen for a week. She visited police headquarters and said she had walked from Newark, where she lived, near Commerce street. She could not name the street she resided on. She and her husband had been married about a year. He left home last Wednesday seeking work and had not returned.

Mrs. Freberter formerly resided at New Brunswick and is a step-sister of Special Officer John Max. She thought perhaps her husband had gone to New Brunswick. Having no means, an order on the Pennsylvania Railroad for a trip to Newark, was tendered to her, but she would not accept it. At noon she learned her husband had secured work at Bound Brook, and she left by trolley for that place. Her husband has two brothers in Passaic.

Twining was convicted in connection with the wrecking of the Monmouth Trust Company of Asbury Park.

JUDGE CAREY ON EVILS OF DANCING

Her promise that she would give up running around to balls and other dances saved Rose Mullen, 16 years old, of Monroe street, Hoboken, from being sent to the State Home for Girls. She was before Judge Carey on the complaint of her parents, who said she was incorrigible. When questioned by the court she confessed that she would rather dance than sleep. Judge Carey, after the girl had promised to give up attending balls, gave her some good advice. He said.

"Keep away from balls. The fellows you will meet there are as a rule loafers and idlers or plain bums and are not the kind of friends a young girl of your appearance should have. They can never do you any good, and constant association with them will only lead you to the road that has a sad ending, and if you take my advice you'll stop right where you are.

"Men who spend their time waltzing have too much time on their hands, and as a rule they are a bad set. They go skipping about with you, wasting the hours that should be given to some occupation that would mean real benefit to them. Take my advice and cut them out, and I think you will thank me in the end. You have taken your oath to be good, and now I want you to remember it."

Rose went home with her parents.

THE PADEREWSKI RECITAL.

Krueger Auditorium, Saturday Afternoon, January 30.

That the recital to be given by the eminent pianist Ignace Jan Paderewski, in the Krueger Auditorium, Saturday afternoon, January 30, will test the seating capacity of that hall is assured by the fact that so many requests have already been made for seats through the mails. It is expected that two of the boxes are to be occupied by noted celebreties of the opera stage, friends of Mr. and Mme. Paderewski. As for playing the instrument, Mr. Paderewski stands as a lofty pillar among the large herd of pianists throughout the world. Writers of music have long ago declared him immune from the critics. Only of his wonderful achievements can they write and music lovers all over the world join in accord in declaring Paderewski the greatest of all living piano virtuosos today. Come as often as he may—he is always greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience who go frantic with joy at the end of his performances. Still, Mr. Paderewski is always generous with encores. Time and again he responds to outbursts of ceaseless handclapping 'till his audiences go to their homes "wrapped up in sweet music."

The sale of seats opens at Lauter Co.'s piano warerooms, 657 Broad street, Tuesday morning. Mail orders are being received by F. N. Sommer, 794 Broad street, the local representative.

EXCISE LAWBREAKERS LOSE THEIR LICENSES.

The Elizabeth Board of Excise yesterday revoked the licenses of Valentine Balling, a saloon-keeper at 563 Livingston street, for violation of the screen clause in the "bishops' law," and also the license of Joseph Szuba, of 501 Bayway, for selling on Sunday.

It is said there were more saloon lawbreakers that the board had knowledge of but the above were the only cases acted on.

Mayor Mravlag appeared before the board and made a virorous speech, calling upon its members to do their duty. He demanded a strict enforcement of the law and the punishment of violators. Balling, whose license was taken away from him, lies dangerously ill and may not recover. He has sold out his business to another man. All the excise commissioners were at the meeting.

1,188 Delinquent Corporations.

Governor Fort yesterday afternoon promulgated the annual list of delinquent corporations chartered by the State of New Jersey. It consists of 1,188 corporations which have not paid taxes to the State in the last two years. In promulgating the list of twenty-six newspapers in which the delinquent list is to be published the Governor exercised his authority to economize in advertising fees. Heretofore the list has been published six times in each of the newspapers. This year the Governor's order to the publishers authorizes the advertisement to be printed one time only.

"THE UNWRITTEN LAW."

The application for a reprieve for the murderer of a Metuchen preacher yesterday furnished Governor Fort with a good opportunity to express righteous indignation over the many recent flagrant miscarriages of justice where the "unwritten law" and "insanity" dodges have successfully influenced juries. In taking advantage of this opportunity, he concisely and clearly stated the opinion of all right thinking men whether they be Jerseymen or not. He had in mind, however, to "lay down the law" for this State alone, which has a National reputation for swift and certain justice, but in doing so he reflected the sane sentiment of the entire sound American people.

The Governor's statement is well worth perusal. Here is what he has to say:

"So far as I am able to speak for this State I want to say that New Jersey has no sympathy with 'unwritten law' ideas and insanity dodges resorted to these days to free men who deliberately commit murder.

"There is altogether too much of this sort of thing practised in the courts today, and I want the people of this State and other States to know that New Jersey does not approve of such defenses in murder cases.

"In this particular application made in behalf of Herron my decision is based on my experience for eight years as Supreme Court Justice. I know that it is one of the hardest things in the world to convince a jury that they ought to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree, and the public can always rest assured that when such a verdict is returned there is no doubt, absolutely no doubt, of the guilt of the man and his responsibility for the crime."

When there is a return to reason on the part of juries, probably there will be no more blots on American justice such as shown in the recent Thaw, Hains and other verdicts. The fault of course is with the jurors. The quality of men generally chosen for duty of that kind is not always of the best and consequently they are swayed by sentiment rather than by reason. Speed the day when intelligent men fill the jury boxes!

It is safe to predict that the local Lincoln centenary celebration committee at its meeting tonight will arrange for a program that will be fully in keepink with the significance of the special holiday ordained by the chief magistrate of our State.

Additions today make the grand total contributed by the people of Plainfield through this paper for Red Cross work in Italy exactly $1,021.86

Certainly the jury system is in sad need of reformation, more particularly in other States than in New Jersey.

A series of Sermons by Rev. Dr. Chas E. Herring

GOD.

What can we know about God? What does the Bible tells us about Him? We need a revelation more satisfying than the revelation we have in nature, for while nature tells us of His greatness, it certainly does not speak of His loving interest in humanity. We do not hope to understand Him in the infinity of His being, but we may know Him as He is related to us, and only, in Scriptural revelation, do we find the perfectly satisfying truth that each soul is of great value in His sight. Let us study, then, the great thought of Scripture as to the character of God. The Bible opens with this declaration, "In the beginning God." We understand, then, that back of all the forces of nature is God. Professor Tyndall said, some thirty years ago, "in mater, is the promise and potency of all terrestrial life." He was then chairman of the British Association of Scientists. Mr. Tyndall had no need of the assumption of God as the creator of all things. In matter, he saw the explanation of the universe. Thirty years later, Professor Crook, who was chairman of the same association, said, "In life, I see the promise and potency of all forms of matter." He felt compelled to state that in the universe there was something more than the material things we see. He called it Life. Later, Lord Kelvin said it cannot be that "we live, and move, and have our being in dead matter, we are absolutely forced by science to believe in creative power." Then the first statement of the Bible is scientifically correct, "In the beginning God." What science calls the "First Great Cause" or the "Unknown Original," we call God. The universe is the result of His plan, though and His love. The mighty laws of nature are His laws.

The second thing we may know about God is that "In Him we live and move and have our being." Thomas Aquinas said, "Every creature is a note and the sound lasts only as long as God's finger presses the organ. Let the finger be moved and the harmony dies." The universe has been compared to a great wheel, "one wheel fitted into another wheel— a vast, complicated mechanism, never a lever getting out of place, never a wheel slipping a cog— and behind it all is God watching over the machanism." In this great universe, "God never does, nor suffers to be done, aught but thou thyself wouldst do, if thou couldst see the end as well as He."

Scripture tells us that the God who has created and who sustains all things is very near to us. He enters into personal relations with men. That is the meaning of the word Jehovah. Jehovah is the personal God, and personality implies two things; one who knows himself as himself and one who consciously and intelligently directs his own actions. Back of your life, therefore, is the will and purpose of God. God is not a principle or a law. He is a person who has given us promises and a person to whom we can direct our prayers.

Scripture further tells us that this Jehovah is "Jehovah of Hosts," that He is Lord of all things. There is no other, He is not simply the Ruler of one people, He is the Ruler of the universe. He is the Lord of all the unseen intelligences above us. Therefore, the Psalmist could say, "Whither shall I go free from Thy Presence? If I flee to the ends of the heaven, Thou art there, and there Thy hand leads me and Thy right hand holds me." Scientists tell us that the universe is a unit so far as they are able to know it, and Scripture declares to us the same thought. It is, therefore, impossible for some other universe to come crashing in upon this, because another deity would make war upon Jehovah. Jehovah is Jehovah of Hosts.

What is the will of this universe then? If Jehovah is the Creator of it and sustains it; if there is but one universe and our God is its absolute Master, what is the character of the universe? Jesus Christ revealed its character. He declared that this great, infinite Being is our Father, the Father of all souls and of the individual soul. The essence of His nature is love, such a love as is revealed in Jesus Christ. We become lost in a wilderness, as we endeavor to think of the infinite God, but He has veiled His infinity in Jesus Christ and in Him we see the very essence of the divine nature. The poet said

"I am apt to think the man
That could surround the sum of things, and spy
The heart of God and secrets of His Empire,
Would speak but love. With him the bright result
Would change the hue of intermediate scales,
And make one thing of all theology."

We cannot know God in all the depths of His being. We do know the facts as they are revealed to us. God is the creator and sustainer of all things. He is the Personal God who promises His help to His people and who keeps His promise. He is the one God, and there is no other power equal to or greater than His, for He is Jehovah of Hosts, and if your life has been committed to His care, nothing can pluck you out of His hand. The essence of His nature is love, holy love, the love as it stands revealed in Jesus Christ, who loved us and gave Himself for us.

No, we cannot know the infinite depths of God, but such knowledge would only intensify what we already know of Him. This is the God who is round about you, then why should you be dismayed?

THE FORUM.

An Art Exhibition.

Editor, The Daily Press:

It is a fundamental principle of the education of children that their surroundings should be as pleasant and artistic as possible, since the child absorbs so much from his surroundings. In a resolution which the Art League forwarded to the Board of Education of New York, some time since, they said, "The interest in art should be inculcated in the minds of children in our schools at an early age, and it is necessary for this purpose to have works of art in the school buildings. The children would then become familiar with the master works of art of all ages and absorb unconsciously what is good and true and beautiful."

Everyone responsible for the education of children agrees with this view, and in accordance with it, everywhere, fine reproductions of classical pictures are being hung on the walls of the schoolrooms. We have already done much in the Plainfield schools, but there is still room for much more. In furtherance of this idea, arrangements have been made to display the Horace K. Turner art exhibit in the High School auditorium next week, with the idea of educating children and their parents who go to see the exhibit and also by the admission fee to obtain money which shall be expended in buying pictures to hang in the various school rooms.

The exhibit is made up of carbon photographs of some 200 of the world's best pictures, attractively arranged for inspection. It will be on view afternoon and evening, five days, beginning with January 25. It offers an unusual opportunity for any one interested in the use of pictures for decoration, and will be of great benefit to the public schools of the city, by reason of the new pictures it will place on their walls. In the case of those persons who are particularly interested in any school, it affords a fine opportunity to show such interest by selecting a picture and purchasing it for presentation to the school. There are few ways in which money can be spent more advantageously than by putting it into a picture which shall aid in the education of scores of children, year after year.

It is to be hoped that the parents generally will aid the school which their child attends by visiting the exhibit or by presenting a picture.

Fire in Princeton.

Led by President Woodrow Wilson and members of the faculty, the students of Princeton University and the townspeople of Princeton, this morning successfully fought a fire that had threatened to destroy the entire business section. At no time were the college buildings in danger. The flames originated in the kitchen of the Terminal Restaurant. The loss will not exceed $100,000.

Oil Stove Starts a Blaze.

An oil stove in the apartment of Spencer Kelley, colored, at 115 Madison avenue, caught fire last night and passed the flames on to the woodwork near it. The occupants found it impossible to put them out and an alarm was turned in from box 12 at 10:38. The firemen used four extinguishers in killing the blaze. The damage is placed at $50.

REPUBLIC REPORTED SINKING.

Wireless messages received in New York today bring news of a serious accident to the steamship Republic, the largest and fastest ship in the White Star line's Boston trade. Bound from New York on a Mediterranean cruise, with 442 passengers aboard, the vessel had been rammed in the fog off Nantucket at 4 o'clock this morning by an unknown vessel. The first message said that the big liner was sinking. Wireless messages were sent in all directions over the sea calling for assistance. Inquiry of Mulford Estil, the local agent, brought the information that he sold no tickets to Plainfielders for this trip.

Fine Lecture Tonight.

"Sixty-fours Years a Queen," is the subject under which George N. Cross will tell the story of Queen Victoria's life tonight at the Plainfield High School. The lecture will be illustrated by a profusion of beautifully colored views, many of which are from photographs of apartments of the royal palaces and of art treasurers taken by special permission of King Edward. Mr. Cross has already spoken twice to the high school students, and has won the highest possible favor because of his attractive personality and the fine literary flavor and diffused humor of his addresses. The proceeds of the lecture are for the benefit of the high school oracle.

Ambrose T. Secor.

Ambrose T. Secor, aged seventy years, a well-known writer for periodicals, and father of Mrs. F. H. Krom, of Summit avenue, the borough, died at his home near Whitehouse, yesterday. He was for a number of years engaged in special newspaper work and contributed many articles to various periodicals. He was also prominent as a merchant at Whitehouse and was high up in Masonic circles in New York; a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and other lodges. A widow and six children survive him.

Fame.

A well-known operatic conductor once formed one of a select coaching party arranged by an English friend for a trip to Stratford-on-Avon.

It had been observed from the first that the musician evinced no warm interest in the objects of the town associated with the memory of the great dramatist.

"Shakespeare. Oh, yes, Shayespeare," murmured the Italian, wearily. Whereupon one of the party volunteered a hint.

"You recollect, maestro, 'Amleto' and 'Romeo e Giulletta?'"

"Yes, yes, I understand," replied the musician. "Ze librettist!"—Harper's Weekly.

The Latest Veils.

A fad in Paris is to edge face veils on the bottom with a band of fur, and one can imagine what an attractive accessory this makes for a fur toque or hat. The finest makes are bordered in an inch-wide line of seal skin, ermine or sable, while the common skunk, known by the aristocratic title of Alaska sable, is a favorite veil edging.

Girl Athletes in Exhibition.

The girls of the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium classes will give an athletic exhibition at the Y. M. C. A. gym Monday night to which the public is invited. One of the best features is to be the Swedish folk dances in costume. A basketball game is on the program also.

Funeral of George Newmiller.

The funeral of George Newmiller, who committed suicide at his home on Summit avenue, Wednesday night, was held at the residence this afternoon. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

Games Tonight.

A State League championship game between Montclair and the local Y. M. C. A. team is to be played at the association gym tonight. There will also be a game between the First Baptist and Seventh-Day Baptist teams.

Nature a Willing Servant

But There's No Reason for Overworking Her.

The kidneys are marvelous aids to nature, but their work of filtering the blood to rid it of poisonous matter, saving all that is good, cannot possibly go on when they are played out because of an overworked system.

The best way is to act promptly if you have any one of the scores of symptoms of kidney ills; Menk's Reno Pills make sick kidneys well, removing the cause of aching backs, headaches, puffy swellings below the eyes, nervousness, irritability, rheumatic pain. If examination shows the urine to be pale and light the kidneys are not ridding it of all the uric poison, or if it is thick and dark colored, showing a sediment deposit when it stands, the kidneys certainly need looking after. Had Two Faults.

Uncle Remus, besides being an inveterate horse trader, was something of a wag. One day, after swapping a rather disreputable looking nag, he said:

"Now, stranger. I'll tell yer fair. Dat hoss hab got two faults."

"And more, too, I guess," assented the other. "But what are they?"

"Wa-al, ef he gits out in de field he's de hahdes' hoss ter ketch ye ever seed, an' when yer ketch 'im he ain't wuth a cuss."—Judge's Library.

How to Find it Out.

"Will you guarantee," said the youth who was beginning to stay out late occasionally, "that these shoes won't squeak?"

"I can't guarantee it," replied the salesman, reassuringly, "but I'm sure they won't."

"Well, I want to put 'em to the supreme test. Have you got a stairway handy?"

"Why, I hardly understand."

"Well, if they don't squeak when I try to creep noiselessly upstairs they never will."—Exchange.

GOVERNOR FORT SAYS HE WILL NOT INTERFERE

Governor Fort, at Trenton, yesterday afternoon declined to grant a replieve in favor of Archibald Herron, murderer of the Rev. Samuel B. Prickett, of Metuchen, who is under sentence to be electrocuted in the State prison some time next week. The Governor's refusal followed an earnest plea by former Judge Charles Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick, counsel for Herron, who urged that a terrible wrong would be committed by the State if the latter is executed in face of the fact that Dr. Thomas H. MacKenzie, prison physician, and Dr. H. B. Costell, of Trenton, have pronounced the murderer insane. In explaining his reasons for refusing the reprieve, Governor Fort said:

"So far as I am able to speak for this State, I want to say that New Jersey has no sympathy with 'unwritten law' ideas and insanity dodges resorted to these days to free men who deliberatly commit murder. There is altogether too much of this sort of thing practiced in the courts today, and I want the people of this State and other States to know that New Jersey does not approve of such defenses in murder cases.

"In this particular application made in behalf of Herron my decision is based on my experience for eight years as Supreme Court justice. I know that it is one of the hardest things in the world to convince a jury that they ought to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree, and the public can always rest assured that when such a verdict is returned there is no doubt—absolutely no doubt—of the guilt of the man and his responsibility for the crime.

"Within six weeks after he committed the crime of murder Herron went into court, and after having every opportunity to introduce evidence favorable to his case the jury found him sane and guilty of murder in the first degree. Herron's case has been carried up to the highest courts and the jury's verdict upheld; and for me to interfere now with the sentence of death imposed on him would be to make a farce of our judicial procedure.

"I regret very much that he must be electrocuted, but so far as I am concerned I can see no reason in law or justice why I should interfere with the sentence of the court."

Now that Governor Fort has refused the application for a reprieve, there is no further effective appeal that can be made by Herron's counsel to prevent the electrocution ordered for next week.

DR. JOHN W. GRAY DIES IN SUMMIT

Dr. John Walter Gray, of Summit, died yesterday from valvular disease of the heart, brought on six weeks ago when he worked for many hours to save the life of a woman patient. Dr. Gray was a martyr to his profession, as his zeal so outweighed his prudence that he over-estimated his strength and his health gave way. Much of his time and skill were given gratuitously.

Dr. Gray was born in Jersey City the day before Christmas of the centennial year, 1876; was educated in the public schools and the New York University. After he was graduated from the medical college he became house surgeon in the Elizabeth General Hospital. A few months later the Spanish-American War broke out, and he was appointed assistant surgeon, with the rank of lieutenant, in the Third New Jersey Regiment. He served until the regiment was mustered out. He was then transferred to the Fourth New Jersey, and remained with it until his duties were done there, when he settled down in Summit. As the city physician of that place for years and a coroner of Union county, he was widely esteemed and respected.

Dr. Gray was the son of Edward Gray, of Newark, and was unmarried. A brother, Edward W. Gray, was at one time business manager of the Newark Advertiser, now The Star, private secretary to former Governor Stokes, and is at present secretary of the State Republican Committee.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the home, 10 De Forest avenue, and will be conducted by the Rev. Warren Giles. The interment will be in the Chatham cemetery.

Under the direction of Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, the men's club of the parish is progressing and increasing in membership. This week a dance was held and other entertainments are being planned for the winter to be held at the parish house.

Mrs. F. E. Woodruff will lead the devotional exercises at the meeting of the Plainfield Primary Union in the Y. M. C. A. building, Monday afternoon, at 3:45 o'clock. Mrs. J. M. Tier will teach the lesson for January 31. All persons interested in Sunday-school work are invited.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Louis Mann, acting in "The Man Who Stood Still," comes to the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight. This character comedy is the work of young Jules Eckert Goodman, author of both "The Test" in which Miss Blanche Walsh has scored a hit, and "The Right to Live," which is slated for a New York city production in the near future. So far, "The Man Who Stood Still," is the only one of Mr. Goodman's plays to get a hearing there; and it is reported to have been an immense popular success in the course of its long run in the Circle Theatre. The title role calls upon Mr. Mann for an exhibition of acting quite unlike anything he has previously given, and is said to afford him, at length, the opportunity he has long desired to prove that the comic note is but one of many in his range. Mathilde Cottrelly, Emily, Ann Wellman, Lillian Sinnot, Corinne Malvern, Gladys Malvern, Leslie Bassett, Robert A. Fischer, H. A. La Motte, John Charles, P. S. Barrett, and Frank Julian are in Mr. Mann's support.

Marked ability as both singer and actor, is rarely found blended in one person. Joseph O'Mara, the famous Irish singer and actor, who will be seen in "Peggy Machree" at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night is an exception to the general rule. As a singer, upon the strength of his trans-Atlantic reputation, he may be ranked at the head of the Irish stars. Also he reveals extraordinary ability as an actor. The Philadelphia critics one and all enthused over him. The way he sings the good old songs of Ireland as interpolated into "Peggy Machree," stirs the Irish blood. The erstwhile Sligo man, Kerry man, Connaugh man and the Fardowns, too, take O'Mara to their hearts.

On next Wednesday evening at the New Plainfield theatre, Fed Niblo, the distinguished humorist-tourist, returns for the fifth of his delightfully entertaining Talks of Travel in Distant Lands. The attraction on this occasion will be "London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel," including walks, talks and snapshots in the largest city in the world, here, there and everywhere, around and about the world's metropolis and its environs. Judging from the mail orders already received at the boxoffice, this offering will likely prove the most popular of the series as presented in this city. Like Africa, Egypt, picturesque Italy and Russia, each of which were so ably presented by Mr. Niblo at this theatre during the past few weeks, London will be graphically illustrated with hundreds of exquisitely colored views, panoramic photographs and marvelously life-like motion pictures, including everything worth seeing in a pictorial pilgrimage of London old and new, portraying London of today, as well as all the historic landmarks of days long gone, showing new views of old places and many unusual pictures of scenes seldom viewed by the ordinary tourist. In fact the title of this travel talk tells the whole story—it is London from Windsor Castle to White Chapel, and every inch of the way is literally interest, as well as picturesque pic-interest, as well asp icturesque pictorial features.

What promises to be one of the most interesting dramatic offerings of the present season at the New Plainfield theatre will be the appearance next Friday night of Clay T. Vance's company of players in Lem B. Parker's new drama of American life, entitled "Married for Money." The play is said to be one of absorbing heart interest and the presenting cast, one of unusual excellence. The story deals with the life of a millionaire iron magnate, who, upon reaching a position of power and affluence, casts off the wife of his youth and early struggles, and takes on a younger and more beautiful one, who marries him for his great wealth and position. His sudden fall from power and wealth and his subsequent salvation from ignominy and prison by his forsaken wife, form the basis of a story that is said to be one of the most powerful sermons in favor of the preservation of the sanctity of the home, and the sacredness of the marriage vow, ever written.

There have been many delineators of eccentric comedy on the stage during the time minstrelsy has been before the people. But few, if any of them, have approached the position in this line held by Billy Clark of the Al. G. Filed Greater Minstrels. Entirely original in his conception and characterization of his part of "The Man From Onionville, Indian Teriter, Teriter," Billy Clark jumped at a bound from a comparatively unknown comedian to one of the greatest on the stage. Clark is what might be called a quiet comedian. His work is as smooth as oil. He gets laughs without effort and they are hearty laughs. They come from the heart because his wit is such as to touch the deeper feelings in our nature. Billy Clark is seen in the first part in which he sings his great hits "There's Always Something Wrong" which is a quaint negro plaint, and "I'd Rather be a Little Too Soon Than Just a Little Bit Too Late." Minstrel Billy Clark "The Man Behnd the Fun" will be seen here with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night.

TIME IS THE TEST.

The Testimony of Plainfield People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells the tale. The public soon finds out when misrepresentations are made, and merit alone will stand the test of time.

Plainfield people appreciate merit, and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills; they do so still. Would a citizen make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? A cure that lasts is the kind that every sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

Mrs. J. C. Manchester, 120 Lafayette place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for a long time. I doctored with physicians but failed to be cured and in 1905 when I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I made up my mind to give them a trial. Good results followed their use and my kidneys and bladder were soon restored to a healthy condition. I believe my cure is a permanent one and I will always give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement when an opportunity occurs."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

DWELLERS IN ARCTIC REGION.

Peculiar Views of Life Entertained by Eskimo Men and Women.

These people of the white world, these children of the snow and ice, give themselves little concern regarding what is going on in worlds beyond their own. The climate in which they live and the limitations of their whole environment make it impossible, writes J. L. Harbour in Leslie's Weekly, that there should be much change in their own manner of life, and they do not care for the changes that soap and water might make in their domestic life, while the women of the family are not anxious to adopt changes in methods of cooking that might make some of the dishes they prepare much cleaner and far less deadly than they apear to be. But the best-filled larder in the homes of the most affluent of the Eskimos offers little in the way of variety in food and the question so vexing to the American housewife: "What shall we have for breakfast?" or for dinner or supper, never troubles the Eskimo housewife, since these meals may not vary for months at a time and are prepared in the primitive way in which they were prepared by the Eskimos of generations and generations ago.

The dress of the women and the men is so much alike that if an Eskimo lady's husband's clothes happened to be better than her own she might borrow them to wear to some Eskimo society function without exciting any comment as to her dress.

As in some other lands, the man is regarded as a being vastly superior to the woman, and the birth of a girl is never regarded as a blessing. Indeed, it often happens that both the father and mother resort to that unavailing folly of tears and lamentations when it is announced that a new comer is a girl. A boy can become a great fisherman or a great hunter, while a girl—of what use is she? A mere cumberer of the earth, regardless of the fact that she works as many hours a day as, and even more than, a man when she reaches the goal of her ambition and marries. Not to marry is as sad a misfortune as may befall her, and if she is married and widowed she makes all possible haste in securing a second partner.

He Took a Shampoo.

"Poor Jim has lost his reason," said the barber in a Hertford shop.

"Who's Jim?" asked the victim in the chair.

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been broodin' over the hard times, and I suppose they turned his head."

"H'm! Not unlikely."

"Yes. Him and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so alike you couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded a good deal, too. No money in this business now."

"What's the matter with it?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo, it doesn't pay to shave or cut hair. Poor Jim! I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, and so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me very melancholy. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let him slash all he wanted to. It might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Y-e-s, please."

They Simply Wouldn't Fight.

He was a poet; also he was very, very intoxicated.

Entering the restaurant, he looked about him with a malevolent eye. But nobody seemed desirous to quarrel with him, so he sat down, deeply disappointed. The waiter approached. The poet regarded him with a hostile scowl. But all the waiter desired was to know what the poet wanted. So the muse worshiper gave his order and shook his head sadly.

But the spirit of belligerency was strong within him. Again he glanced about. At last he fastened his eye on a young man sitting at a near-by table. Here, indeed, thought that poet, is a chance for a quarrel. So, still fixing the young man with a baleful glare, he growled:

"You don't love Rossetti when you are drunk!"

The young man absolutely ignored the remark. Completely crushed, the poet gave up the struggle, consumed his drink, and departed.

Present Day Literary Rewards.

The writer of a colorless short story in 1908 will receive for it more than Milton received for his "Paradise Lost," and those successful authors of the Indiana school are paid more for an ephemeral novel than Goldsmith received for his "Vicar of Wakefield." The search for ability is unremitting, and the duty of all magazine editors and literary "commissioners" of every degree is to seek out writers who can furnish interesting "copy." Indeed, one of the faults of this age is the hasty and premature recognition afforded the immature writers. The fruits are to be perceived in their work. They give no intimation of that swarm of ideas which distinguished the full mind of Burke; their minds are not freighted with the precious lore of the world; they follow no high tradition and have no background.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Will for Deed.

"Let us declare war," exclaimed the people of an outraged nation.

"But we have no powder," explained the military secretary.

The people thought this over a moment and modified the demand.

"Well, anyhow," they suggested, "it's up to us to declare that we would declare war if we had powder."

CHAPTER XIX.

Extract from a Letter.

From Mrs. Rebecca Winter to Mrs. John S. G. Winslow.

Fairport, Ia.

* * * * * * * * *

And it was delightful to discover that you were so distressed about me. I must be getting a trifle maudlin in my old age, for I have a lump in my throat every time I have thought of Johnny and you actually starting out to find me; I am thankful my telegram (Please, Peggy, do not call it a wire again—to me! I loathe these verbal indolences) reached you at Omaha in time to stop you.

Really, we have not had hardships. Thanks to Israel Putnam Arnold! I have a very admiring gratitude for that man! In these days of degeneracy he builded a stanch enduring house. With union labor, too! I don't see how he contrived to do it. Generally, when they build houses here, they scamp the underpinning and weaken the joists and paint over the dirt instead of washing it off; and otherwise deserve to be killed. The unfortunate man opposite had just that kind of house, which tumbled down and burned up, at once; but, alas! it killed some of the people in it, not the guilty masons and carpenters!

Our chimneys have been inspected and we are now legally as well as actually sound; but we did not suffer. We cooked out on the sidewalk, and supplemented our cooking with young Tracy's stove.

I told you of Janet's engagement. Confidentially, my dear Peggy, I am a bit responsible. They met by chance on the train; and I assure you, although chance might have parted us, I did not let it. I clung to Nephew Bertie. I'm sure he wondered why. I knew better than to let him suspect. But success you can't share is like a rose without a smell. So I confess to you, I have made this match. But when you see Millicent she will tell you that she helped things along. She has abused Janet like a pickpocket; but now, since she has discovered Janet didn't draw the Daughters' caricature of her, she regards her as one of the gems of the century.

We are recovering from the terrible events of which we wrote. It is certainly a relief that Atkins is killed. He was one of the two scoundrels who sneaked into the patio and put the bombs into the automobile. Bertie shot him. You have no doubt heard all about Mr. Keatcham's death. He was killed by the man whose wickedness he had unconsciously fostered. He did not know it, but I make no doubt his swollen fortune and the unscrupulous daring of its acquiring had a great influence in corrupting his secretary.

And his corruption was his master's undoing. I must say I sympathize with young Tracy, who said last night: "I feel as if I had been put to soak in crime! That bomb was the limit. In future, me for the common or garden virtue; it may be tame, but I prefer tameness to delirium tremens!"

I used to think that I should like to match my wits against a first-class criminal intellect; God forgive me for the wish! I have been matching wits for the last month; and never putting on my shoes without looking in them for a baby bomblet or feeling a twinge of indigestion without darkly suspecting the cook—who is really the best creature in the world, sent Mr. Arnold by a good Chinese friend of mine. (I had a chance to do a good turn to my friend, by the way, during the earthquake and thus repay some of his to me.)

Archie is well and cheerful. Isn't it like the Winter temperament to lose its melancholy in such horrors as we have seen? Archie is distinctly happier since he came to California. As for Janet and Rupert—oh, well, my dear, you and Johnny know! The house has been full of people, and we have had several friends of our own for a day or two. I got a recipe for a delicious tea cake from Mrs. Wigglesworth of Boston. She didn't save anything but her furs and her kimono and a bridge set, besides what she had on; she packed her trunk with great care and nobody would take it downstairs. Of course she saved her bag of jewels, which reminds me that poor Mr. Keatcham left Janet some pearls—that is, the money for them. He was very much attached to her.

We buried him on the crest of the hill; later, when more settled times shall come, he may take another and last journey to that huge mausoleum where his wife and mother are buried. Poor things! it is to be hoped they had no taste living or else that they can't see now how hideous and flamboyant is their last costly resting place. But if Keatcham hadn't a taste for the fine arts he had compensating qualities. I shall never forget the night of his burial. It was a "wonderful great night of stars," as Stevenson says. A poor little tired-out clergyman, in a bedraggled surplice, who had been reading prayers over people for the let ten hours and was fit to drop, hurried through the service; and the town the dead man loved was flaming miles beyond miles. About the grave was none of his blood, none of his ancient friends, but the men I believe he would have chosen—men who had fought him and then had fought for him faithfully. They were haggard and spent with fighting the fire; and they went from his burial back to days and nights of desperate effort. He had fought and lost and yet did not lose at the last, but won, snatching victory out of defeat as he was wont to do all his life. The heavy burdens which have dropped from his shoulders these others whom he chose will carry, maybe more humbly, perhaps not so capably, but quite as courageously. And it is singular how his influence persists, how it touches Kito and Haley, as well as the others.

"Shure," said honest Haley (whose wit you are likely to sample in the near future, for he has elected to be the Rupert Winters' chauffeur; they don't know it yet, but they will when it is time); "shure," says he, "whin thot man so mashed up there ye cudn't move him for fear ye'd lose the main parrt of him, whin he was thinkin' of the town and nothin' else, I hadn't the heart to be complainin' for the loss of a few teeth and a few limps about me! An' I fair wu'ked like the divil. So did Kito, who's a dacint Jap gintleman and no haythin at all."

Poor Keatcham, he had no childhood and his wife died too soon to revive the fragrance of his youth; but I can't help but think he had a reticent, awkward, shy sort of heart somewhere about him. Well, he was what Millicent would call "a compelling personality." I use plain language and I call him a great man. He won the lion's share because he was the lion. And yet, poor Lion, his share was a lonely life and a tragic death.

THE END.

A FRIEND'S INFLUENCE.

Shopman—Mr. Sellem, here is a gentleman who came in to buy a watch. What shall I charge him for the one which he has chosen?

Mr. Sellem—Let me see. Well, let him have it for five pounds.

Shopman—But he was recommended here by our friend, Mr. Amicus, who told him we would give him a liberal discount.

Mr. Sellem—Ah, that alters the case! Tell him our regular price is ten pounds, but, seeing he is a friend of Mr. Amicus, we shall let him have it for seven pounds ten. But tell him to be careful and let nobody know what he paid for it. We positively cannot afford to sell them at that figure. Only do it as an accommodation to Mr. Amicus, you know.

Gentleman pays the seven pounds ten, and goes off happy in the belief that he has made a big bargain. He esteems Mr. Amicus more dearly than ever. So does the shopkeeper.

Cruelty.

"Are you the officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals?" asked the fussy little man.

"I am," replied the man addressed.

"Well, look at that horse, how he's switching his tail. The flies are something awful."

"What would you suggest, that I arrest the flies for worrying the horse, or the horse for worrying the flies?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Idyllic Situation.

"They are such ideal chums, seemingly."

"Yes, and thereby hangs a tale,—a romance in real life. They fell in love at first sight, and were married right away, and for awhile it looked as if there would be no more to the story. But in time their love ripened into friendship—think of it!—and now they are what you see."—Puck.

A Classic Cereal.

"Are you familiar with the 'Autocrat of the Breakfast Table'?" queried the visiting western school teacher of the Boston landlady.

"No, ma'am," replied the landlady as she passed the oatmeal. "There's such a slather of them newfangled breakfast foods now that a body can't keep the run of them."—Judge.

Breaking It Gently.

"Pardon me, sir," began the portly person in the railroad train to the man who sat next to him, "but what would you say if I sat on your hat?"

"Suppose you sit on it and then ask me," suggested the other.

"I did!" admitted the portly person, calmly.—Half Holiday.

"Well, I don't," replied the woman; but my husband takes 'em frequent. I do wish you'd try to get him to sign the pledge.—Judge.

AROUND THE RAIL

CARELESS HELPER HAD TIED ROPE TO SCAFFOLDING.

Escape from Fatality Illustrates How Dependent One Workman May Be on His Fellow—Danger in "Green" Man.

"If a man stays green long," he concluded, "we can't afford to keep him. It ain't fair to the others. You see, in these jobs men depend on each other. A rope badly tied, a signal given too soon, a slip in a tight place, may send some other poor devil off into the open—head over heels."

Here's a story in point: A man named Dave McRay was working out on a 900-foot railroad bridge over a river. The bridge was built and the trains were already running across. McRay was down on a scaffold some 30 feet under the middle. His helper, a green country recruit, had tied the ropes that held it. There were two ropes, one from each end. The first rope the helper had tied round a wooden beam between the tracks, and next in a dreamy kind of a way he had tied the second round one of the rails. Then he slid down, and the pair began peaceably working.

Some moments later a train came thundering out. All of a sudden McRay heard a snort. He looked round, and saw the youth staring straight up at the track, with his mouth wide open, a calculating look in his eyes. His freckled face grew slowly white. McRay seized his arm.

"Say," he demanded, "wot's eatin' you?"

His helper looked round, gave one frantic shout, and dived for the river 70 feet below. Just then the train roared overhead, cut the rope in two, and down went McRay, grabbing the scaffolding tight. He hung by the other rope, and said a good deal. When the train had gone, he went up hand over hand to a steel truss, and from there, looking down, he saw the head of the youngster, who was swimming hard for the shore. He made quick calculations. Then he climbed up to the track and ran like a deer. But by the time he got to the river bank his helper was already ashore and had lit out over the fields. The bridge never saw him again.—Ernest Poole, in Everybody's.

Wise Beyond Her Age.

Rene La Montague, the crack polo player, tells this story of a very small miss, the five-year-old daughter of a prominent merchant of the Cedarhurst set.

Mr. La Montague was driving a small trap from the Rockaway Hunt club to his home in Cedarhurst, when he encountered the little miss, who was out for a walk with her nurse and a small baby brother, who occupied the perambulator. Being an intimate friend of the child's parents, he offered to give her a lift as far as her house. The offer was accepted and on the way Mr. La Montague was regaled with interesting items of family news which were lisped out in rapid succession until he pulled up in front of the house.

The child alighted, and as there was nobody in sight on the grounds, he asked her if she could get indoors safely.

"Oh, yes," said the little tot, "and thank you very much."

"Don't mention it," nodded back the polo player; when to his surprise the child opened her eyes very much and murmured:

"I won't."—Philadelphia Record.

Meet Upon the Level.

Once upon a time a certain community planned to give a dinner to a judge there. When the judge came to scan the list of those invited he raised vigorous protest against one name, that of a man who had been the most brilliant lawyer in town, but who was now the town drunkard. They finally overcame his opposition, but the town drunkard had heard of it. He was the last speaker called upon. He arose and said: "Mr. Toastmaster—Fifteen years ago I had a practice in this town that amounted to $12,000 a year. I had a wife and family whom I supported in comfort. I had my own horse and carriage. At that time the guest of the evening was on his way west in an emigrant wagon. He landed in this town and started in to make his living. Since then, Mr. Toastmaster,' he cried with a pathetic break in his voice, "since that time I have been going steadily down, down, down, and our guest has been going up, up, up, until now we are just about on a level."—National Home Journal.

The Mental Jog.

"There is a certain type of person," said the business man, "especially in New York, who seems unable to understand what is said to him—or her—unless the statement or remark is prefixed by some catch word—usually the word 'listen.'

"For instance, I have a stenographer who simply stares at me in dumb amazement if I say anything to her without first saying: 'Now listen.' If I begin to dictate a letter to her she will not write a word if I forget to give that mental jog. When I snap that at her she will scratch like mad. She is not the only one. The telephone girl cannot take a message unless it has that prefix. When I am out of the office and try to talk over the wire with her I must always begin: 'Now, listen,' or else she is hopelessly at sea and seems not to understand a word I say.'"

HOSPITAL ORDERED TO CLOSE.

Montclair Board of Health Finds Diphtheria Among Mountainside Nurses.

The big Mountainside Hospital in Montclair was ordered closed last night by the Montclair Board of Health because diphtheria has developed among the nurses. All the affected nurses have been isolated in the nurses' home adjacent to the hospital.

In view of the existence of the disease, the Montclair Board of Health has decided it wise to disinfect the entire building, and as this will necessitate the closing of the hospital for several days, the patients, about twenty-five, have been removed to their homes except three, whose condition is such that it was impossible to transfer them. There were about twenty-five nurses at the hospital.

The hospital is maintained by private contributions, and is intended as a convenience for the people of Montclair, Bloomfield, Glen Ridge, Caldwell, Verona, Cedar Grove, and other towns in this section of New Jersey.

REFUSES PAROLE.

Dr. Thompson Prefers Prison if He is Not Pardoned.

Dr. Reuben E. Thompson, who was granted a parole nearly a month ago by the Court of Pardons at Trenton, has refused to accept it, and is still an inmate of the State prison. He says that if he should leave the prison under the parole he could not be reinstated as a physician, and consequently claims that he would be unable to gain a living. He says that only a full pardon will benefit him.

Dr. Thompson was convicted of murder, which involved the death of an infant whom he attended as a physician. He was sentenced in January, 1901, for a term of eighteen years, and his term will expire in January, 1914, providing the usual commutation comes to him for good behavior.

OBJECTS OF EDUCATION

Wealth Not the Goal for Children's Aim Says Chas. W. Mc Cutchen.

SHOULD LOVE GOOD BOOKS.

Education Must Reach the Head, the Heart and the Hand, He Says.

The second of the series of parents' meetings in the borough schools was held in the Somerset building last night. The attendance was large and the interest very manifest. Charles W. McCutchen gave an excellent address, setting forth some of the objects that should be sought in the education of children. He said in part:

"One of the least desirable things to seek for our children is wealth. It is far better for the boy to gain the discipline of striving for his own advancement than to have everything provided for him. If the oak were put into the green house where it would be constantly sheltered, it would not thrive; but place it out in the open, and every storm will cause it to plant its roots down deeper into the earth, and make its limbs stronger to resist the winter blasts.

"Of all vocations in life, that of the teacher is the most noble. The minister is a teacher. Christ was a teacher. Teach your children to love books. Let them be worn out with much reading. Give the children great thoughts for their constant companionship. Teach refinement in your home. It takes no more effort to say 'Thank you,' to your child for a favor than to say it to a king.

"Watch the atmosphere of your home. The janitor, on coming into the green house, looks immediately at the thermometer. If it does not show the proper temperature he starts at once for the furnaces or opens the windows. So children in the home thrive best in an aumosphere of love and affection. Parents can create such atmosphere, and should most carefully maintain it.

"Education should reach the head, the heart and the hand. Our homes would be more comfortable today if every girl were required to take a thorough course in domestic science, and our boys in manual training.

"Make a comrade of your boy Spend much time with him in the spirit of companionship. Give the boy and girl a chance. Open all possible opportunities for them. If possible provide for the education of the children of the poor. Such investment will bring in great results in happiness and accomplishment."

Cleaning the Mesh Purses.

Care must be taken to keep these purses and bags in good condition, else they will soil the clothes, to say nothing of their bad appearance.

These bags will grow dull in time, but they can be cleaned without removing the silk lining. Put the bag or purse into a saucer and cover it with ammonia, brush it with a small hair brush and wash in a suds containing bluing. Rinse many times to free the silk from strong ammonia, draw the silk up at the top and let the bag dry in the sun. Do not use hot water. A gold meshed bag can be cleaned in the same manner.

There is no one today in the United States who fits the eyes the same as we do. If you have ever been fitted to glasses by others you understand what the test is—how you have to read letters and tell the optician what you want. We do not fit that way, but take exact measurements of the eye from the pupil without using any drops, nor do we ask any questions or use test card hung on the wall.

CIVILIZATION'S ADVANCE

Rev. Dr. Zwemer Talks on the "Forward Movement" and Its Significance.

THE WORLD IS PROGRESSING.

Minister Claims That Japan is Intellectual Centre— China's Awakening.

Considering the disagreeable weather there was a large congregation at Trinity Reformed church, last night, to hear Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, representative of the "Foward Movement," tell of the urgent need of greater effort for the cause of foreign missions. He is a magnetic speaker and has almost an inexhaustible fund of knowledge concerning missions. He presented his subject in a business-like way and held the close attention of everyone.

At the outset he presented a vivid picture of the Crucifixion, adding that the cross of shame had now become a cross of glory, that today Christ is King throughout the world and is so recognized. He is King of Kings in the world and rulers and governments are measured by the standard of the yard stick of the sermon on the Mount. Christmas is now celebrated in Japan and the Bible is studied in every part of the globe.

"When my parents came from Holland to this country sixty years ago," continued Dr. Zwemer, "it required eighty days for the trip. Now one can make it in almost eighty hours. The world is constantly getting smaller when one realizes that the globe can be circled in sixty days, and the news of whole world is brought to your breakfast table each morning for one cent. We must not forget the great achievements of the wireless telegraph, the sweep of the steam shovels at work in Panama and the commerce of the world is making all one vast neighborhood.

"We often hear people refer to the heathen world. You wouldn't call the Japanese a heathen people, would you? Why, we send men there to learn ship building and military tactics. I say that Japan is the greatest intellectual centre in the world. There are more students there studying for the A. B. and A M. than in any other country.

"China is also awakening with her 400,000,000 population and the morning light is breaking. A missionary recalled an interesting sign displayed in China, which read, English taught here as far as the letter G. Compare our lives of selfishness with those of great sacrifice to be found in China and other foreign countries.

"India, which was tied up in water-tight compartments by castes, each one hating the other, is now open and today we find a national feeling there. Persia has also been stirred as never before, while in Arabia we find the Turks driving American spikes in steel rails. This is a wonderful day and the revolution in Turkey has resulted in bringing thousands of people to Christ. When I was in Turkey one could not travel the distance between Newark and East Orange without a passport. Now the whole country is open through God's Providence. This is the day of God's power, the 'Forward Movement,' and the prospects for world evangelization is as bright as the Providences of God. Mission work is a man's work, because it is a warfare. The 'Forword Movement' is on and its success depends upon the willingness of God's people to take it up. His Spirit is also moving in America. Last year there were 1,600 students ready to go to mission fields, but all could not be sent.

"There are 100,000 members of the Reformed Church in America and from this number the Board of Foreign Missions is trying to raise $225,000 a year. This should not be a difficult task. There are thirty or forty millionaires in the church living in New York and Newark, to say nothing of the wealthy farmers in the west, Long Island and New Jersey. Our church is not a poor one. This is a business proposition I bring before you. In Newark one man has for three years supported a missionary abroad at an expense of $700, equal to the pay of a trolley conductor in this country. Why cannot you do the same?

"It is expected that Paul Wilberforce Harrison, a graduate of John Hopkins University, will be appointed a foreign missionary and I would like to secure support for him in his work."

DR. BRUCE PREACHES FOR DR. CHAMBLISS

Rev. Dr. James M. Bruce, superintendent of foreign work for the Baptist denomination, occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, giving an account of his experiences with the foreigners when they arrive in this country. He reported steady progress in bringing the Gospel of Christ to these people and said that they are quick to respond to the appeals made.

Dr. Bruce took exception to the generally accepted theory that the foreigners coming to this country represent the dregs and scum of other countries. He contended that the majority of them make good citizens and are loyal. Without these foreigners, the speaker maintained that it would be impossible to build subways, tunnels and suspension bridges. In conclusion he told of the part being taken in this work by Baptists and made an urgent appeal for more united support.

JUNIOR MECHANICS ANSWER GOVERNOR

Councilor Grafton E. Day, of the Junior Mechanics today issued a circular letter condemning Governor Fort's proposition to divert the State's public school money for the other expenses of the State. The letter calls on members of the order to do all in their power to urge the Legislature to defeat the proposed scheme. The letter says in part:

"The excuse for this movement is the threatened imposition of the State tax. The State school tax will, however, necessarily be increased to every taxpayer in this State because of the cut in the annual appropriation to the schools above mentioned.

"It seems remarkable that the only suggestion for the avoidance of a State tax is to cut down school moneys. No retrenchment is suggested or recommended for any other department in the State. Why should the schools be asked to bear the whole burden? The friends of education should not be misled. The State tax can be avoided without modifying the principle of the act of 1906, or doing injustice to any one.

"The governor makes a severe attack upon the present law which this order had passed, dedicating to the schools the moneys from the tax from the main stem of the railroads over and above the amount theretofore received from the State from this source. This act received the unanmious approval of the State when passed. One illustration of its many benefits is to be seen in the governor's message.

"In 1905, he says, the district school tax raised locally for current purposes was $4,785,000; in 1909 the district school tax raised locally for current purposes is $2,730,000. Thus according to the governor's own showing, notwithstanding the increase in the number of children to be educated in four years the amount which the taxpayers of the school districts was required to raise for current school expenses decreased $2,055,000. This sum, is of course, made up by moneys from the railroad tax, which the governor now proposes to take away from the local districts. In other words, this act, which the governor proposes to modify and ultimately repeal, has in one year 'according to his own showing saved the taxpayers of this State $2,055,000.' In addition to this it must be remembered that about half of the money due to the schools under this law has not yet been distributed. A bill has already been introduced for its distribution to the taxpayers of the school districts in accordance with the law. Thus the full benefits of the act have not yet been felt."

BURGLARS INVADE HOME OF ANDREW MATTIS.

Burglars entered the home of Andrew Mattis, at Fourth street and Arlington avenue, last night, and made away with $50 belonging to John O'Brien, a boarder, and a gold watch and chain, the property of Mrs. Mattis. The loss was discovered when O'Brien returned home, this morning, being employed in the Public Service Corporation's night shift. Nothing else about the house was disturbed.

Detective-Sergeant Flynn was assigned to the case and is conducting an investigation. The manner in which the burglars secured entrance to the house has not been discovered.

Master Builders' Banquet.

The Master Builders' Association will hold the annual banquet in Saengerbund hall next Thursday night. Covers will be laid for about 150.

RE-OPEN THEIR EDIFICE

Crescent Ave. Congregation Gathers for Worship in Beautified Church.

REV. DR. RICHARDS SPEAKS.

Elaborate Music—New Memorial Organ Used—Rev. Dr. Zelie in Charge.

Two great congregations attended the re-opening of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday, morning and evening, filling the edifice to the doors. During the period the building has been closed, the interior has undergone a complete change and in addition there has been added a magnificent pipe organ, the gift of Mrs. Charles Hyde, in memory of her husband. A description of the improvements has already been published in this paper.

A notable feature of the night service was an address by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, a former minister, now pastor of the Brick church, New York. Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, the pastor, spoke briefly in relation to the re-opening, commending the generosity of the members, which had made possible the improvements, and praising the skill of the architect in producing such wonderful results. He said that there were but three things which had been left unchanged, the pulpit, communion table and collection plates. These magic plates had brought fourth an abundance of gold in the past, he said, and hoped they would continue to exercise a similar influence.

The minister referred to Dr. Richard's pastorate here as being similar to that of David, who created the necessity for a great tabernacle to God. To this Dr. Richards replied, in his address, that he was unlike David, in that he had returned to view the completion of the edifice.

Continuing, Dr. Richards related an incident when Dwight L. Moody visited this city a quarter of a century ago. It was on a Sunday morning. Walking up the avenue as the church bell was ringing and a great stream of people was pouring in at the door, he had stopped to admire the sight, exclaiming: "Beautiful, beautiful." Dr. Richards declared that no prettier location could have been selected for a church. During his pastorate he had longed for the opportunity to make the inside as beautiful as the outside, but the other work being carried on at the time already taxed the resources of the church to the utmost. Sometimes the desire had been almost irresistible, and he regretted that he had been called away before its accomplishment. It was, therefore, with a feeling of envy that he learned that another had accomplished the work, but enviousness had now given place to gratitude and praise.

"But it is not in spirit of complacency that we come here; it is not to admire the beautiful building," he said. "We come in a spirit of worship. The true temple of God is the human heart."

A special musical program was rendered by a choir comprising Mrs Virginia Wilson, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Herbert Taylor, tenor; and James Stanley, bass, under the direction of William P. Dunn, organist. The selections were: "Guilmant," anthem, "Appear Thou Light Divine;" offertory, Traumerei," Schumann; anthem, "Ho! Everyone that Thirsteth," Martin; postlude, "Marche Pontilcale," Lemmens.

In the morning there was a musical program and communion service. Twenty-seven new members were received by letter and nine on profession of faith. Rev. Dr. Zelie was in charge of the service and assiting him were Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, Rev. John O. McKelvey and Rev. F. D. Tildon.

The new organ of the Crescent Avenue church was built by the Ernest M. Skinner Company, of Boston, with Archer Gibson, of New York, as consulting expert. It embodies the latest methods of organ construction and no pains have been spared to make it one of the largest and most complete instrument in this section of the country. The action and motor power is electric. There are four manuals, the swell, the great, the choir and solo organs, and an echo organ in the roof of the church. There are forty-five speaking stops, which are readily controlled by the adjustable combination buttons (11 in number). The organ is equipped with three balance pedals, crescendo pedal, sporzando pedal and a radiating pedal board. A full set of chimes is being installed in the echo organ. The diapason stops are unusually rich and brilliant in quality. There are many stops of great beauty, such as the "unda maris," the

BIG TOURING CARS COLLIDE IN A FOG

A large touring car owned by Howard Colby, in which he was accompanied by Mrs. Colby and Mr. and Mrs. F. V. L. Jones, also of Evergreen avenue, collided with another big auto on the Springfield road, near Cranford, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Colby's car was damaged to such an extent that it had to be taken to Martin's garage on Park avenue. The other auto was able to proceed. None of the occupants of the two cars was injured, it is said.

The accident occured in a dense fog, it being impossible for the driver of either machine to see more than a few feet ahead. It is understood that the occupants of the other car were from Newark and were on their way home. The Plainfielders were returning from Orange.

CHAIRMANSHIP FOR CHARLES N. FOWLER

If Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, retains the chairmanship of the Committee on Banking and Currency in the next Congress, it will be due to the magnanimity of Speaker Cannon, according to a dispatch from Washington. Mr. Fowler has not been in accord with the Speaker on financial matters for two or three years, and yet he was reappointed to the chairmanship of the committee in the present Congress. When the question of passing a bill to meet the situation resulting from the financial stringency a year ago came up, Mr. Fowler had certain ideas which he was anxious to have adopted. Members of the committee disagreed with him, and his plan was at variance with that of the Speaker.

Shortly after the election in November Mr. Fowler announced that he was a candidate for Speaker. There are members of Congress who felt that this was equivalent to butting against a stonewall, yet Mr. Fowler made an active canvass among some of his colleagues, but it does not look as though he would have very many votes if he should permit his name to go before the Republican caucus.

In some circles the course of Mr Fowler is not considered wise, but it would appear that he has his own ideas relative to what he wants, and if he fails to get the chairmanship again it will be his own fault entirely.

Mr. Fowler spoke the other evening at the regular quarterly dinner of the Board of Commerce to a large audience. Mr. Fowler thrust many a keen shaft at bankers in general, which went home and were appreciated by those members of the fraternity. But just to show that they bore him no ill will for exposing a vim a motion of Major Ford H. Rogers, at the close of the evening, that the assemblage recommend to President Taft that he make Mr. Fowler his secretary of the treasury.

Sunday-School Officers Report.

Following the session of the Sunday school at Trinity Reformed church, yesterday afternoon, the officers and teachers held a short meeting to receive the annual reports of the treasurer, Charles M. Dolliver, and the secretary, Chauncey F. Colthar. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance on hand, and that of Mr. Colthar showed that there are 571 on the school roll of membership. The average attendance for the past year was 334. Yesterday's attendance was 402, excellent, considering the day.

Brotherhood Active Again.

Following the morning service at the First M. E. church yesterday, Nelson A. Miller, president of the Brotherhood, called a meeting of the men to consider plans for greater activity. For some time the Brotherhood has been doing nothing of special interest, allowing the other societies of the church to provide entertainment. Several plans were suggested and another meeting will be held soon to decide on an entertainment.

Schempp-Frick Wedding.

Mrs. Anna Schempp and Frederick Frick were married at the bride's home on Manning avenue at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rev. John Duerschner, of the Lutheran church, performed the ceremony. Miss Anna Peterson was bridesmaid and George Forstle, of Rutherford, best man. About forty guests were present and enjoyed a wedding supper and reception.

In the City Court.

In the city court, this morning, sentence was suspended on Theodore Linderberg and James Garfield Gidden, charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Both were arrested by Patrolman Sweeny.

THE WEEK'S ATTRACTIONS

Bookings at the New Plainfield Theatre Again Widely Divergent.

RETURN OF JOSEPH O'MARA.

Irish Tenor Comes Back Tonight in "Peggy Machree"—Field's Minstrels on the Boards for Saturday.

Patrons of the New Plainfield theatre will again have amusement in a diversified form offered them during the coming week. Manager Counihan's list of bookings includes Irish comedy drama, a minstrel organization, a melodrama, a lecture, a "try-out," and the Cameraphone. Musical comedy will be missing for the first time in a month.

Joseph O'Mara, the Irish singing comedian and his company of seventy returns to Plainfield tonight in the new romantic light comedy, "Peggy Machree," which concluded a run at the Broadway theatre, New York, Saturday. It was seen in this city on Thanksgiving Day afternoon and night and those who saw it at the time were immensely pleased. The entire cast and chorus remains intact, from O'Mara and winsome Adienne Augarde, the canny Scotchman and the superstitious old Celt, down to the colleens and laddybucks of the chorus. The production is to make a tour of two weeks of one-night stands previous to going back to Philadelphia for a month's engagement.

Tomorrow night has been set aside for the weekly "try-out," which has been smashing attendance records at the playhouse, and which continues to grow in popularity. The management has secured a dozen aspirants for footlight honors and prize money. Fred Niblo returns on Wednesday night for the fifth and last of his splendid travel talks. The offering on this occasion will be "London, from Windsor Castle to Whitechapel," graphically illustrated with hundreds of superbly-colored views, augmented by numerous motion pictures and panoramic photographs. The emphatic approbation accorded Mr. Niblo by the press and public alike on his able presentation of "Africa," "Egypt," "Italy," and "Russia," has resulted in an increased demand for seats for this most interesting zig zag journey through the highways and byways of the world's greatest metropolis.

The wonderful Cameraphone, which drew a large house last week, will again be the attraction Thursday night. A feature of the program will be a complete reproduction of the opera, "The Mikado." A melodrama of the "heavy" variety but with much more merit than the ordinary production of the kind will be offered Friday night in "Married for Money." It is from the pen of the well known dramatic author Lem B. Parker and has been staged with a specially selected company by Clay T. Vance. The play is an arraignment of the utter disregard for the sacredness of the marriage vow prevalent among a certain portion of our well-to-do class, who, upon their sudden rise to wealth and power, seek through the medium of the divorce courts to rid themselves of the wife or husband of their earlier life in order to take on a younger or more attractive help-mate. The story is said to be of absorbing heart interest and the climaxes and situations startling in realism and intensity.

The week will be closed by the return of the perennial favorite, Al. G. Field and his big minstrel troupe, in matinee and night performances Saturday. When it comes to entertainment of the black face variety, Al. G. and his bunch of merrymakers have gotten everything else "beaten to a frazzle." The production this year is one of unequalled charm and beauty and has been declared to be the most perfect of all minstrel shows ever sent on tour. The company of seventy includes "Doc" Quigley, "the man with the comedy legs;" "Billy" Clark, "the man from Indian territa-territor-territay" and all the favorites who have been seen here before.

Resumes Law Practice.

After practising hard for several years outside of Elizabeth former Senator and Prosecutor Frederick C. Marsh resumed legal practise in the county seat today. He opened law offices in the Hersh building on Broad street. Mr. Marsh, for several years, was an attorney in New York and afterward for a time was associated with former Senator Michael T. Barrett in Newark.

Drying Kindling.

Some kindling wood placed on the stove to dry, in a rear room of Heberman's dairy Saturday night, created so much smoke as to alarm passersby. A still alarm brought the fire department whose prompt action averted a possible fire.

UNION COUNTY MAY OPPOSE BOULEVARD

Unless it be allowed to pay its share out of the fund now appropriated by the State for State aid roads, Union county is against the Ocean Boulevard proposition suggested by Governor Fort September 3 last. This statement was made today by one of the officers of the Board of Freeholders. He said that Union county will oppose the Ocean Boulevard scheme if the State pays for the building of the highway, but is in favor of the proposition if it is to be paid for by the various counties. This stand is taken because if the State paid for the building of the road it would deplete the fund out of which the State appropriates sums to help the various counties build State aid roads.

The Ocean Boulevard scheme is the plan to build a road from Atlantic Highlands to Cape May, linking together all the New Jersey coast resorts, and also by a single road system link all the inland towns of the State from county seat to county seat.

JOSEPH V. FARLEE STRICKEN BY DEATH

Stricken with heart failure while he was engaged in loading crates on his wagon at the Sunswick Poultry Farm, near South Plainfield, Saturday night, Joseph Vincent Farlee, one of the city's best known expressmen, sank to the ground unconscious and died within a few minutes. Rufus Delafield, proprietor of the place, and several assistants, carried the lifeless form to the house and summoned Dr. Frederick Hughes but he was beyond all aid before the message was sent. The physician declared the primary cause of death to be a rupture of the cardiac muscle.

Mr. Farlee had been engaged by Mr. Delafield to move some prize poultry exhibits from the farm to the Lehigh Valley depot at South Plainfield and was engaged in the task about 8 o'clock when stricken. It is believed that exertion in lifting heavy crates is what brought on the attack. Only a few minutes before he fell to the ground, Mr. Farlee remarked that he would never drive to South Plainfield again on such a foggy, disagreeable night.

Following the arrival of Dr. Hughes and his declaration that life was extinct, Coroner Harrison was called from Perth Amboy and granted a burial permit. The body was later removed to the man's late home at 56 Grandview avenue.

Joseph Vincent Farlee was a native of Middlesex county but had lived in the city or borough practically all his life. He was fifty years old and for a long time had been engaged in the baggage and express business. He was considered the leader in this line, having built up an extensive trade to which he gave his entire personal attention. By nature, he was of a very cherful disposition and he had hosts of friends in all parts of the city. He is survived by a wife, one daughter, Miss Mabel Farlee, and a son, Joseph Farlee, Jr. He also leaves two brothers, Henry Farlee, of Pearl street, and Milton Farlee, living in North Carolina.

The funeral will be held at the late home, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 and will be conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel.

Spoke at P. H. S.

An illustrated lecture, detailing the events and episodes of the life of the late Queen Victoria was delivered by George N. Cross at the Plainfield High School Saturday night. The attendance was large. The lecturer displayed a great many views and ssnapshots taken during the sixty-four year reign of the English queen. The pictures were clear and distinct and accompanied by explanations and interesting anecdotes. Next Saturday night the lecturer will speak on "The Great American, Abraham Lincoln."

Golden Eagles Plan a Trip.

A delegation from Freedom Castle, K. G. E., will go to Perth Amboy tomorrow night to witness the installation of officers of Halcyon Castle of that place. The trip will be made by special trolley, leaving Watchung avenue and Fourth street at 7 o'clock. Members who care to go are invited to join in.

Y. W. C. A. Exhibition.

The mid-winter exhibit of gymnasium work by the classes of the Young Women's Christian Association is to be held tonight at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. There will be a basketball game between two of the classes, besides an extended program of drills and dances.

mayor's offices on Saturday night. Only a few of the committee of thirty-five were absent and these in sending regrets at their inability to attend warmly endorsed the proposed celebration.

Mayor Fisk presided and after William S. Tyler consented to serve as secretary pro tem in the absence of Ralph L. The observance will take place at the First Baptist church on Friday afternoon, February 12. The edifice will be appropriately decorated. As for the program, it will not be announced until the next meeting of the general committee. The speakers' committee has in mind several notable men but it is a question whether any one of them can be obtained at this late date.

A committee will wait on Jud Stewart, who has one of the finest collections of Lincoln relics in the world, to request its loan for exhibition either at the high school or at the church.

The merchants will be asked to close their stores all day on February 12 as a mark of respect. There will be no sessions at the public schools nor at the private schools.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

Plans are progressing favorably toward the consolidation of the Scottish Golf Club of America and the Haworth Golf Club. The clubhouse, equipment and links at Haworth at present represent an investment exceeding $25,000. The following agreement has been drawn up.

The Haworth Club, upon the completion of the organization of the Scottish Golf Club of America, and upon receiving assurances of adequate capital and membership behind the promoters of the new club, will obtain for it from the owners of the land an agreement to extend the lease of the present ground for ten years beyond its expiration in 1918, and will also procure a lease for twenty years upon the adjoining acreage necessary to extend the links to eighteen holes; the rental under both leases to be for the first ten years at the rate of $1 a year and taxes and an annual sum to be fixed by arbitration at the end of the first period, but limited to a sum not exceeding 5 per cent upon a value of $1,000 and acre for the acreage employed.

The Scottish Golf Club of America will be incorporated with an authorized capital of $25,000. Its shares shall be issued for cash only and at par, except that shares amounting to $4,400 shall be issued to proprietary members of the Haworth Club to retire shares of members of the Haworth Club to that amount, and said proprietary members of the Haworth Club are to be allowed opportunity to participate with other shareholders of the new club in the adoption of bylaws and the election of officers for the Scottish Golf Club of America. The new club shall assume outstanding obligations of the Haworth Club, approximately $2,500

BASEBALL.

Pitcher Covaleski of the Philadelphias has two brothers who have just been signed by the Lancaster Tri-State League club. One is a third baseman, the other a pitcher. So long as they aren't to play against the Giants for a while local cranks won't worry.

Charles Comiskey is to buy permanent training grounds for the White Sox in Texas. They probably will be near El Paso and be used first in the spring of 1910.

Fred Merkle Saturday signed a contract for another year with the New York Nationals. Merkle's contract contains an increase in salary. He also received a letter from Manager McGraw stating that he expected the Toledo player to do great things this season and that his fine work in 1908 entitled him to a raise.

When Manager Stallings of the New York Americans arrives in New York the latter part of this week he will make known what disposition will be made of Shortstop Elberfeld. It was thought for some time that Elberfeld would be traded, but there is now a rumor that Stallings may keep him to see how he shapes up on the Southern trip. The fact that Elberfeld did not play for a greater part of last season because of an injured leg has created the belief that he will never be himself again. If he demonstrates, however, that he can play as well as formerly while with the team at Macon a deal may be concluded by which he will be sent to some other team, or it may be the case that Stallings will decide to place him at the old position for a time at least. Stallings has so many good infielders that he is not worrying about Elberfeld, However.

"Red" Waller, the hero of many beseball victories in this vicinity, is a member of McGraw's pitching staff, will go south with the team on its training trip in March.

BOWLING.

The Fraternal League comes to an end on Friday night but undoubtedly several ties will have to be rolled off next week.

If the Elks and Minatonomo teams meet in a series to settle the championship an interesting battle may be looked for.

The two-man tourney to be held at Campbell's alleys is filling up rapidly. The tourney is limited to fifteen teams and thus far ten teams have entered.

The endurance contest to be held on Lincoln's Birthday promises to surpass even that of last year. Twenty teams are expected to compete. Five teams from Newark and two from Plainfield have already entered and teams from Elizabeth, New Brunswick and Trenton will also take part.

Thomas Hutchinson, of 187½ Seventeenth avenue, Paterson, a driver employed by the New Jersey Tobacco Company, fell Saturday and sustained a sprained wrist, which was attended by the physicians at the General Hospital.

Naturalization papers were granted to thirty-five candidates by Judge Scott, in Paterson, Saturday. Three applicants were told to prepare themselves better and appear again on February 26, and four had their applications denied.

James V. Cain, Jr., of Beverly, was awakened at midnight Thursday night by two bullets which crashed through a window and passed directly over the bed upon which he was sleeping. Cain investigated, but could not see any sign of the shooter. He is wondering whether the affair was accidental or intentional.

Miss Gertrude Walker, of Woodbury, and Frank Newkirk, formerly of Salem, were married in Camden on Wednesday night. It was the intention of the pair to keep the marriage quiet, but the bride told a "confiding" friend. The bridegroom is one of the fastest basketball players in the Gloucester County League and is playing with Westville.

Mayor Smith, of Millville, has dismissed the slander suit brought by David Magonigal, proprietor of the Weatherby House, and Mrs. Magonigal against Mrs. Carrie von Staden, proprietor of a dry goods store, who lives at the hotel. The Magonigals accused Mrs. von Staden of having upbraided them wrongfully in the presence of other patrons of the hotel.

A society known as the Carmel Farmers' Association has been organized at that little village, five miles northwest of Millville, and has started a movement to have the old Bridgeton and Millville turnpike put into proper repair. A proposition also will be placed before the Bridgeton and Millville Traction Company, with a view of having a spur run into the village to give it trolley service.

Hearing a noise in his chickenhouse Thursday night John Buglio, a Wheat road farmer, near Vineland, ran out and fired off his shot gun. Three men ran across the field. Buglio hastening their steps by firing a load of buckshot at one of them, who seemed to stagger as though hit. The trio finally reached a wagon and hurriedly disappeared. Friday a bag of thirty dead chickens was discovered.

Plainfield, N. J., January 25, 1909.

The encounters between the impresario and the editor in New York recall ante-bellum days when the editor always had his gun ready and his arm in muscular condition.

Thanks to the Newark Star, we are constantly reminded that the editor-proprietor has not grown a mustache and that he looks as handsome as ever in that immaculate white vest.

It is fortunate for her that the Philadelphia girl who got a check for a million as a wedding present from her father chose an American and not a titled foreigner for her husband.

That the true spirit of reverence may prevail, it would be a most fitting tribute on the part of the local merchants to close their stores all day on the occasion of the centenary celebration of Abraham Lincoln's birth. Those who may not be identified with the merchants' association should be as willing as its members in appropriately observing the day.

The license committee of the Common Council visited the local saloons last night, to inform the owners that under a ruling by Judge Garretson, of Trenton, they would all have to get signers to their petitions for license this year. The saloon men surprised the members of the committee by saying that they had been so informed previously, and the committee wondered whence their information had come.—Courier-News of Saturday.

Meeker—I'm going to apply for a divorce.

Bleeker—What's the trouble?

Meeker—Oh, my wife's a regular shrew; she beats the children and makes life a burden.

IN HER DEFENSE.

She's laced too tight?
Ah, say not so—
You speak not right—
You do not know.

She looks it? Yes,
Indeed she do.
I will confess
That much is true.

Yet you are wrong
To say that she
Goes in too strong
For corsetry.

The fact is this:
The dame's so sweet,
So fraught with bliss
From head to feet,

That e'en her stays
Cannot stand pat,
And coldly face
A chance like that.

Were mine the cup,
They drain at will,
I'd hug her up
Much tighter still!
Horace Dodd Gastit, in Judge.

A Bright Boy.

"Say," queried the father, "can't you give my boy a position in your store?"

"I don't know," rejoined the grocer. "What can he do?"

"Well," replied the parent, "I don't suppose he could do much at first except buy and sell goods and manage your business for you, but later on when he gets a little experience and sense he might be able to sweep out, do up packages and run errands."—Chicago Daily News.

This Happened Near Boston.

"It is time," said the speaker, "that we had a moral awakening in this town. Let us arise in our might. Let us gird up our loins. Let us take off our coats. Let us bare our arms. Let us—"

"Hold on now," screamed an angular lady, who was seated near the platform, "if this is to be a moral awakening don't you dare to propose to take off another thing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mean of Them.

Eva—She never had a beau in all her life.

Katherine—And yet she has the nerve to declare that her face is her fortune.

Eva—Gracious! It must be one of those "unclaimed fortunes" we hear so much about.—Chicago Daily News.

TIME TO INTERFERE.

Boy—Come quick! There's a man been fighting my father more'n half an hour.

Policeman—Why didn't you tell me before?

Boy—'Cause father was getting the best of it till a few minutes ago.—Ideas.

His Peculiarity.

Jailer—He's a queer case, that prisoner in cell 27. Nothing suits him but silk underwear.

Visitor—Well, that isn't a crime, is it?

Jailer—No; but when he got his last suit of it the store detective happened to see him sneak it under his coat.—Chicago Tribune.

No Excuses Needed.

"There's no excuse for anybody's having any kind of illness," said the resolute person.

"Perhaps not," answered the man who always tries to agree. "And a person who is really ill doesn't feel like being formal and begging somebody's pardon, anyhow."—Washington Star.

No Repose.

"You have so much money you need never work any more," said the old-time friend, enviously.

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "but every time I spend $100,000 or so, people stand round and criticise me. I've quit work, but I've begun to worry."—Washington Star.

Condiments.

"And the heathens cooked the missionary in his clothes?"

"They did."

"They were hungry, I suppose, and couldn't take time to undress him."

"No. I expect it was for the seasoning. You see, he had on a pepper-and-salt suit."

A Sure Sign.

"Pa, when does autumn leave off and winter begin?"

"Winter, my boy, is a season that never really sets in until the stoves in the street cars are lighted."—Detroit Free Press.

The Cause.

Wife—What was the matter? I thought you would break down the house.

Husband—I dreamed I was trying to put on my clothes in the upper birth of a Pullman.—Life.

MEET, COURT, MARRY ALL IN THE SAME DAY

A romance in real life which was worked out with the speed of a moving picture machine had its culmination here Saturday.

Scene I.

Railway station, Jersey City—A stylishly dressed man sees a comely young woman burdened with two suit cases when one would have been as much as she could handle. What a real man would do in such as case is obvious.

Scene II.

Parlor car on Jersey Central Railway—The car may have been crowded with passengers but those in seats number 23 and 25 were oblivious to everything except themselves. The conductor collects two tickets, both reading: "Philadelphia," but what happens?

Scene III.

Justice Hand's office, Plainfield—"Do you take this woman to be your lawfully wedded wife, etc?" "I do."

De Lancey Fremont Nichols, who said he was a theatrical man, of Philadelphia, age forty-two, was married to Miss Annabel Croal, age twenty-six, of Jersey City, by Justice Hand Saturday. They were unattended. The groom explained that it was a chance acquaintance and that he had been on his way to Philadelphia to spend Sunday at home. The bride was a Jersey City girl and was en route to Philadelphia to visit friends. Cupid stepped in and took charge of the situation, with the result that the couple decided to stop at Plainfield and be married.

That there might not be any mistake about the legality of the marriage the groom consulted Counsellor W. G. De Meza. The fact that the bride was a resident of the State made possible the marriage at such short notice.

FOR FALSE ARREST ASK $5,000 DAMAGES.

Robert S. White and Mary White, his wife, have begun suit in the Supreme Court through their attorney, Frank Pfaff, against William H. Van Buskirk, an engineer in the Acolian factory, of Garwood. The suit is for $5,000, the damage which White claims he suffered through malicious imprisonment.

Van Buskirk was the man who caused the sensation in the Aeolian factory several months ago by losing $1,085, which he carried in his pocketbook, $800 of which was afterward found in the coal bin of the plant. White was an employe in the plant at the time the money was missed and was arrested on a charge of stealing it preferred against him by Van Buskirk.

White was lodged in jail for several hours and when he obtained a hearing before Judge Toucey, of Westfield, the case against him was quashed. White now claims $5,000 for the damages that he suffered while in jail.

MAYBE COLE DREAMED.

John Cole, a milkman living near Hazlewood Cemetery on the out skirts of Rahway, reports that at an early hour this morning he encountered the wozzlebug which has been terrorizing residents of Mercer and Burlington counties. Cole, who is six feet in stature and of fearless nature, runs a dairy farm and a milk route. At 3 a. m. he started for the barn, when, directly in his path, the weird creature alighted.

Cole describes it as devlish, being part bird and part beast. It paralyzed him with fear, so that he was unable to move or cry out. With glaring eyes and making a hissing noise like a snake, Cole says the bird-brute flapped its broad wings and was lost in the fog. Cole returned to the house shaking as with the ague. It was daylight before he could command courage to venture out again.

200 MASONS VISIT NEWARK.

All the Masonic lodges of Staten Island visited the Halsey Street Methodist Episcopal church, in Newark, last evening. The lodges were Tompkins, Richmond, Huguenot and Beacon Light and Empire Commandery, Knights Templar. Borough President George Cromwell, master of Tompkins lodge, headed the delegation, which numbered about two hundred.

Members of several Newark lodges, including St. John's, Newark, Roselle, Cosmos and Schiller, also attended the service. After the service the Staten Island Masons were entertained at th rooms of Demascus Commandery.

BALTIC ARRIVES WITH 1,650 SURVIVORS ABOARD.

After waiting for a rift in the fog that would make her trip up the bay a safe one, the White Star liner Baltic, having on board 1,650 survivors from the steamships Republic and Florida, which were in collision early Saturday morning off Nantucket, left her anchorage at the bar at 9:45 o'clock this morning.

The tragic story she brought in from the sea had been told in good detail before she raised her anchors preparatory to entering the Ambrose Channel.

TO END HORSE STEALING.

Chester, Morris County, Leads in Organizing Farmers and Owners Into Vigilance Committees.

Horse thieves have been operating in every section of New Jersey so freely of late, and particularly in the northern end of the State, that a movement has been begun for the formation of vigilance committees in every county of the State to co-operate with the police. The first one was formed last week in Chester, Morris county, and one arrest has already been made there. The man is locked up in the Morris county jail, at Morristown, on the technical charge of stealing an overcoat. The man says he has been in this country about four years and that until recently he lived in Scranton, Pa.

Circulars have been sent out by the Chester organization to police throughout the State asking that special effort be devoted to the detection and arrest of horse thieves. In addition to this the necessary steps are being taken to form similar organizations of farmers and other horse owners throughout the State.

SOME DON'TS FOR THE YOUNG MOTHER.

Don't kiss the baby.

Don't handle the baby unless your hands are very, very clean.

Don't talk, breathe, whistle, blow, cough or sneeze into the baby's face. We want him to live.

Don't use your handkerchief to baby's hands, face or mouth.

Don't allow a child to be continually eating between meals. If you do, the chances are that very soon his digestion will be ruined.

Don't forget that a child is sometimes persistently naughty simply because he is so tired that his poor little nerves are all on edge.

Don't punish a child one moment and kiss and pet him the next, unless he comes to you penitently and begs forgiveness. This quite does away with the good of the punishment.

Don't be impatient with the children when they ask questions, provided they are sensible ones, but try and answer them comprehensively and to the best of your ability. If you don't know the answer yourself, tell them so. This is far better than trying to put them off.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

LANGUAGE OF THE EYEBROWS.

German Way of Determining Dispositions and Temperaments.

The eyebrows, declares a German character reader, tell us far more about the true inwardness of our dispositions and temperaments than all the rest of the body. Study the eyebrow formation of your friends and you will find that where the indications are similar like personal characteristics will declare themselves, says the New York World. Thus you will discover that the highly arched eyebrow denotes a sensitive temperament, although, contrary to the general opinion, they do not always adorn persons of superior intelligence. Thin eyebrows invariably show a lack of vitality and those of the thick and bushy variety indicate the existence in their possessors of a highly vitalized temperament together with great powers of bodily endurance. In women they denote unusual powers of bodily and mental stamina.

When the eyebrows meet, says our German friend, you may be certain that a sincere character is expressed, though here it is interesting to recall, incidentally, that every character reader since the days of Aristotle has declared that such eyebrows indicate, unquestionably, a peevish disposition. Long, drooping eyebrows, wide apart on the forehead, indicate a joyous disposition and general amiability. If the eyebrows are more light-colored than the hair of the head, a distinctly weak vitality is denoted. Lightly marked eyebrows, which lie high above the nose, show a disposition toward indolence and a general weakness of character. Dark eyebrows, which lend so strong and energetic an expression to the whole face, are indicative of patience.

Rarely will you find in persons of sharp intellect eyebrows of a light color, although the color does not count so much as the shape. Red eyebrows invariably indicate considerable ambition. The average eyebrow is a combination of black and red.

The Fatal Chaminade.

A high-browed young lady was playing on the piano to the great edification of all the other high-brows present. After a while she announced graciously that she would play "a Chaminade," and proceeded to do so. At the close of it there was applause. Then an unsuspecting low-brow piped up:

"By the way, what is a Chaminade?" He spoke as if not sure whether the thing was more like a chamois or a serenade.

The young lady looked at him witheringly.

"Chaminade is a composer," she said with much severity. That embarrassed the low-brow.

"Why, I was sure that Grieg had written a Chaminade—a suite of Chaminades, in fact."

"Not at all," repeated the severe young lady. "Chimande is a composer."

"Oh, indeed," stammered the low-brow. "Well, what did he write?"

"He is a she," the young lady informed him.

"What! Is that so? Well—er—"

At this point friends of the low-brow stepped in and restrained him from another possible fatal plunge.

A Preference for the Rod.

Two-thirds of the small boys in the public schools would rather take a thrashing than submit to any nice, ladylike punishment, such as standing in the corner on one foot or being shut up in a dark closet. So says a teacher. That is a fact, no matter how eloquently those who don't know—and half the people who talk don't know—may spout about the shame and ignomy, not to mention the physical discomfort, of a whipping. No doubt there is a certain amount of all three inconveniences attached to a good trimming, but in the opinion of the average boy those disadvantages are offset by a certain accompanying dignity. To merit a thrashing indicates that the boy has done something worth while. It makes of him a kind of hero. Banishment to the corner or the dark closet and kindred minor punishments may be all very well for girls, but boys yearn for something more heroic. I am not claiming, mind you, that this preference indicates a highly moral or commendable spirit; it is simply the natural boy's attitude.—New York Press.

Sacrifice.

The bankrupt rolled up in an automobile to a meeting of his creditors.

"Gentlemen," he began, giving them a condescending nod all around, "these debts of mine shall be paid though I suffer for it."

They murmured their thanks.

"I have arranged," he went on, "to give you my entire income pro rata (cheers), with the exception (cheers, fainter) of $50,000 a year (no cheers), which is the least a gentleman could live on."

Not Even Imaginable.

"There is no such thing as an impossibility," declaimed the epigrammatic poser.

"Yes there is," replied the Ennuied Man. "A woman who does not believe she has wonderfully expressive eyes is an impossibility."—Kansas City Times.

Not Afraid.

"I suppose you have read of the danger in kissing," he remarked, tentatively.

"I have," she replied, "but I come of a family noted for courage."

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Joseph O'Mara, when he introduces himself at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, will present a new romantic comedy with music called

Joseph O'Mara in "Peggy Machree," at New Plainfield Theatre tonight.

"Peggy Machree." Stated in a nutshell, the play is written around a mock marriage. A certain Lady Margaret O'Driscoll masquerades as a country colleen at Downkilty Fair. Barry Trevor flirts with her and finally they go through a mock marriage, but afterwards learn that they really have been married. Trevor takes the "Queen's Shilling" and goes off to the wars, while Peggy resumes her position as a country lady. Years after Trevor returns. He is at once recognized by his wife, though at first he is far from suspecting the identity of "Lady Margaret" and "Peggy Machree." In a thrilling climax they remarry and "live happily ever after." Mr. O'Mara will sing, among other songs, "Believe Me," "The Birds Fly South," "The Wearin' of the Green" and "The Exile's Return."

Fred Niblo, the celebrated American humorist-tourist, who has entertained large audiences on four occasions recently at the New Plainfield theatre, will return to this theatre next Wednesday night for the fifth of his delightful travel-talks. On this occasion Mr. Niblo will present "London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel," which is said to be far and away the most popular zig-zag journey of the entire series. Like, Africa, Egypt, Italy and Russia, which Mr. Niblo presented during the past few weeks so successfully here, London will be graphically illustrated with hundreds of colored views, panoramic photographs and a superb collection of strikingly life-like motion pictures, portraying the London of golden time, teeming with historical interest, in contrast with the modern world's metropolis, the London of today.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night, will be Lem B. Parker's new powerful drama of contemporaneous American social life, entitled "Married for Money," and will be presented for the first time in this city. The play deals with a certain phase of life in some of our most select social circles, and is a startling exposition of the evils consequent upon a too liberal belief in the sacredness of the marriage vow and the disregard of the sanctity of the home. The story is one of absorbing heart interest and to all lovers of the drama, it will undoubtedly prove one of the dramatic treats of the season. The tour is under the direction of Clay T. Vance, who has provided a competent cast and adequate costume and scenic accessories.

"Strikingly beautiful," is the general verdict of all who have seen the magnificent first part, and thrillingly beautiful spectacles that A. G. Field has made the features of his greater minstrel show this season Mr. Field has overcome the impossible in stage craft, by presenting his company in a series of the most exquisite stage pictures ever conceived for a theatrical production. The first part alone is a marvel of exquisite taste and ingenuity; the lighting effects being worthy of an Aladdin for they rival the effulgence that wizard cast by his wonderful lamp. The hot house, or conservatory scene in the first part, is rich in embellishment, and with its wealth of foliage and flowering shrubs, all electrically articulated, it reveals in Mr. Field, its designer, a master craftsman. With the opening of the entertainment, to the last word which ends the series of splendid spectacles in the olio, there is not a single bizarre note in the entire scheme of light and color, everything has been prepared by Mr. Field with an eye single to harmony, and his artists and builders of scenery and accessories have certainly translated his intuitive thought into concrete form. Every flower and plant is illuminated by a light of its own especial color, and the myriad colored lights which play on the cascades of water in the electric fountain in the background throws the entire ensemble of light, color and perspective into one harmonious whole. It is bringing Minstrelsy into proximity with the fabled, yet wonderous Arabian Nights entertainments. The A. G. Field greater minstrels will appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night.

Billy Clark, the Minstrel with the A. G. Field Greater Minstrels, at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, January 30, matinee and night.

Percy and Harold

They Visited the County Fair But Didn't Enjoy It

The hoboes were sitting beneath a tree on the edge of a grove daintily eating their evening meal. On a stump between them was a can of coffee, from which they alternately drank, and close by was a bundle of cold-hearted sandwiches they had begged along the route.

"How extremely fortunate we were, Harold," remarked one of the tramps, picking up a piece of the dry bread and raking a roasted potato from the fire, "in securing the services of our French chef. Since he has had charge of our kitchen our table has been the envy of all our society friends, and I hear the Wally de Geezers said they never more thoroughly enjoyed a dinner than at our last week-end—"

"Well, I should just guess they did, Perc," was the flippant interjection of Harold, who was wading deep into the layout. "They must have thought it was politicians' day at the almshouse from the way they tanked up on the grub. I'll bet a hundred that Wally gained 15 pounds before he left the table, and as for Mrs. Wally—"

"Don't, Harold! Don't!" interposed Percy, with a horrified expression. "You distress me dreadfully. You should be more guarded in your speech with reference to our guests. I will admit that both Wally and dear Mrs. De Geezer did eat very heartily, but I rather regarded it as a compliment to our incomparable Henri. Isn't this pomme de terre julienne exquisite? It is positively the best I ever tasted, and as for these haricot vert—"

"Henri is all right," responded Harold, clawing another piece of bread from the bundle, "but I wish the dod-blasted chump would smear more butter on these sandwiches. They are almost as bad as the sandwiches you get at the quick lunch foundries where they think that butter comes from the Klondike. Chuck us over that coffee can!"

"You are positively insufferable, Harold," protested Percy in a voice that was almost tearful. "How you would shame me by your vulgar remarks if we had heard you use the term coffee instead of demitasse? Coffee will do very well for the ordinary people, but you should consider your station in life and speak accordingly. I trust you will remember this in the future and also be more circumspect in your manner."

"No, thank you, dear boy," said Harold, arising and picking up his hat when he noticed that Percy had annexed the last crust of bread and the last potato. "I don't care for it. In fact, I have been too well served. Since we have no engagement for tonight, I think I will smoke this cigar stump which my friend Algernon so kindly tossed from his automobile, and then retire."

As soon as it was dark the tramps started for an adjacent barn, but when they arrived at their destination they found that the cautious owner had locked all the doors. Outside, however, was a large wagon, filled with loose straw, and into this they quickly crawled. Ten minutes later they were fast asleep.

On the following morning they were awakened by the sound of ragtime music and merry voices, and crawling out of the straw, were astonished to find themselves at a county fair. Percy glanced at Harold and Harold glanced at Percy, and then a rude farmer broke into their society.

"What in ther thunderation are you dod-blasted hoboes doin' in thet straw?" demanded the farmer person. "Can't I bring a load o' beddin' ter ther fair fer the race horses without cartin' around a lot of gosh-hanged tramps? I s'pose ye thought ye would hide in thet straw an' git in without payin', but—"

"Pardon me, fellow," naughtily interjected Percy. "You are unnecessarily agitated. We had no intention of coming to the fair, nor do we now have any desire to remain and mingle with a people who have no place in our exclusive set. It is only by the accident of chance that we are here, and if my friend Harold will give me his arm we will retire at once. As for the term 'hoboes' that you applied to us, I will have you understand that—"

"Go wash your face!" brutally broke in the farmer. "Ye look a derned sight worse than a hog what has rooted all the way across a ten-acre lot. I guess I know what ye sneaked in here fer, an' now that ye are here ye've got ter stay, be gosh! an' work yer way out. Sam, take these skeercrows in hand and make 'em clear out ther stables an' carry water fer ther hosses all day. If they git gay, souse 'em with a garden hose."

The person addressed as Sam was only too willing to have additional help, and all day long the hoboes were compelled to clean out stables, carry water and rub down race horses. When evening drew apace they were liberated, and lost no time hiking for the nearest woods.

"O, Harold!" groaned Percy, in a heartbroken tone, "I think I shall die! I was never so disgraced in all my life! Just think of being compelled to clean stables like a lot of menials! What will the Wally de Geezers say when they hear of it?"

"That's all right, sweetheart," soothingly replied the sunny Harold. "We will tell the Wall de Geezers that we had our racing stable at the county fair, and instead of scorning us for doing lowly work they will pat us on the back for playing at a fad."

THE SACRED TREE.

Woodman, spare that tree,
Touch not a single bough;
It has befriended me,
And I'll protect it now;
'Neath it a hammock hung,
And there, when it was hot
I often gladly swung;
Thy ax shall harm it not.

Beneath that spreading tree
One in a gauzy gown
Oft snuggled close to me
And let her feet hang down;
Woodman, forbear to hack!
'Twas here a lovely maid
First dared to call me Jack,
As carelessly we swayed.

When I was free from care
And she was trim and slim,
We often dangled there
Beneath yon spreading limb;
'Twas there that first she laid
Her hand within my hand
And ceased to be afraid;
Pray, woodman, let it stand.

Harm not that sturdy oak;
One night—I mind it well—
The rope, grown fragile, broke,
And in a heap we fell.
She put the blame on me,
And said she'd have me not.
So, woodman, spare the tree;
This is a sacred spot.

The Bald Truth.

"Barber, do you know of anything that would be good for that bald spot on the crown of my head?"

"Yes, sir, but it would be pretty expensive."

"How much?"

"Probably not less than $25."

"Is it a sure thing?"

"Yes, sir."

"What do you call it?"

"A wig, sir."

No Cause for Complaint.

"Landlord," said the boarder at the summer resort hotel, "you advertised that you had 'good fishing' here. I've fished every day, and all I've caught is half a dozen carp and three or four bullheads."

"Didn't some of the fish you hooked get away?" asked the proprietor.

"Yes, of course."

"Well, those are the good fish we advertise. What are you kicking about?"—Chicago Tribune.

NONE ABOVE $10,000

THAT IS BILL OF LARGEST DENOMINATION ISSUED.

Not to Exceed Two or Three of These Notes in Circulation in the United States—National Bank Currency.

Ask yourself what is the bill of largest denomination issued in the United States? Careful now that you don't overdo it.

The largest bill is for only $10,000, and there are only two kinds of notes that are as large—the United States note and the gold certificate. Not only this, but probably there are not to exceed two or three of these $10,000 United States notes in circulation. At a guess there may be 12,000 to 15,000 of the gold certificates of the denomination.

There is a $5,000 United States note of which there may be only a handful, as against 50,000 of the $5,000 gold certificates. It should be remembered that any national bank note of the $5,000 and $10,000 denominations that may be put up to you are rank counterfeits, for the reason that the national bank isn't allowed notes of such size.

The national currency and the notes of the national banks, however, number the $1,000 notes by tens of thousands. This $1,000 note, largest of the national bank bills, also is largest of the silver certificates and of the "coin" certificates of 1890. A treasury report of 1904 shows the comparative number and kind of the $1,000 bills. In that year these $1,000 were distributed 24,683 in United States notes, 432 in treasury (or coin) certificate notes, 24 of national bank issue, 57,449 in gold certificates, and 108 in silver certificates.

The $500 bill runs through all these classifications save that of the "coin" issue of 1890. Thereafter, in notes, there are the $100 note, the $50, and the $20 notes, through the five classifications of the currency. Under $20 however, there are no gold certificates. The smaller bills in the other lists are the tens, fives, twos, and ones with which most of us are reasonably familiar, on occasions at least.

The $10 United States note, with the bison ramping across its face, is the commonest of the $10 bills, next to which among the tens is the national bank note, with the $10 silver certificate third in number. The national banks are strong on the twenties, too, while having only a comparative handful of ones and twos.

As to the gold coinage the current list includes only the $20 piece, the $10, the $5, the $2.50 piece, and the Louisiana purchase exposition gold dollar minted in 1902. Beware of imitations!

High Praise for Lauder.

She was high-browed and soulful, given to the Ibsen cult and grand opera in its grandest manifestations, hence it was with considerable misgiving that the young man took her to see Harry Lauder.

"He is the greatest singer of his kind in the world," the youth had explained volubly. "Competent critics have said that only once in a decade does such a singer appear," etc., etc. And she had graciously consented to look Harry over.

After the Scotchman's first song the young man glanced apprehensively at the young lady.

Her eyes were half-closed; she was apparently in the seventh heaven of enjoyment.

"This," she said solemnly, "is art!"

Thenceforth that young man ceased worrying and devoted himself to thorough enjoyment of the show.

Japanese Story Tellers.

"Though the Japanese are a nation of readers," says a traveler, "they love, also, to listen to the tales of the professional story-teller, who is quite an artist in his way. The lower sort of story-teller may be seen seated at the street corner with a circle of gaping coolies around him. The higher class form guilds, who own special houses of entertainment, called 'yose,' and may also be engaged by the hour to amuse private parties. Some story-telling is rather in the nature of a five-cent magazine. The man sits with an open book before him and expounds it, and dilates upon it—the story of the 'Forty-seven Ronin,' perhaps, or the Chinese novel of the 'Three Kingdoms,' or an account of the Satsuma rebellion, or one of the old wars of the Taira and Minamoto families in the middle ages. When he comes to some particularly good point he emphasizes it by a rap with his fan or with a little slab of wood kept by him for that purpose."

Ceylon's Venomous Caterpillar.

Word comes of the bad effect on the population of Ceylon of the trees planted in the streets to shelter the people from the pitiless rays of the Indian sun.

The trees it was thought would bring comfort. When they grew up they certainly did afford grateful shelter, but a certain green caterpillar also made them its home. The insect not only destroys the foliage, but it frequently drops down upon those passing by, stinging the unlucky person. The sting is as venomous as that of the wasp. The worst sufferers from the pest are the children.

In spite of the burning and smoking of the trees by means of a torch raised on a pole, it has been impossible to exterminate the caterpillars.

TO SERVE WINE AT LINCOLN DINNER.

Woman's Christian Temperance Union Declares It "an Insult to His Memory."

Considerable feeling has been engendered over the fact that wine will be served at the Lincoln centenary dinner at Springfield, Ill., on February 12, at which addresses are to be delivered by Ambassadors Jusserand and Bryce, Robert T. Lincoln, William J. Bryan, Senator J. P. Dolliver, Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, Senator Shelby M. Cullom, General John W. Noble and others.

Despite protests by the Local Option Law Enforcement League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in which they declare that Abraham Lincoln refused to permit wine to be served when he was informed of his Presidential nomination, and that to serve wine at his centennial would be an "insult to his memory," the committee empowered to decide this question met last night and ignored the protests.

WOMAN FALLS UPON UMBRELLA; PALATE TORN.

Mrs. Arthur Hopkins, of Buttzville slipped on a piece of ice while carrying a child in one arm and a closed umbrella under the other arm. In trying to save herself she twisted the umbrella so that the handle struck the pavement and the ferrule entered her mouth. She screamed as she felt herself falling. The furrule made a deep wound in the roof of her mouth and tore the soft palate so that several stitches were required to close the wound.

The accident happened several days ago, but Mrs. Hopkins still suffers great pain and experiences considerable difficulty in eating. It is hoped no permanent harm has been inflicted, but her physician is watching the case closely.

LINEMAN ELECTROCUTED WHILE WORKING ON POLE.

Killed in a twinkling by an electric current while he was at work on a twenty-five-foot pole, the body of Loyal W. Knower fell headforemost to the ground. The accident happened Friday night near the Linden Township plant of the Standard Oil Company. Knower, who was in the employ of the company as an electrician, was thirty years old. He lived at 100 Prince street, Elizabeth, with his wife and a child, who were summoned from Waverly, N. Y., where they had been visiting.

For several years Mr. Knower was a wire inspector for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company.

Birthday Sociable.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church will hold its annual birthday social in Vincent chapel, tonight. Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will recite several selections from Eugene Field. There will be a social hour and the proceeds will go toward the carpet fund for the chapel.

NEWARK MERCHANTS "GREAT WHITE WAY"

Owing to the success which has attended the brilliant street illuminating by merchants in the South Broad street section of the Newark retail shopping district two more organizations of business men have been formed and meetings will be held this week to arrange for similar permanent illumination of the northern section of Broad street and of the eastern and western sections of Market street.

When this has been accomplished Newark will have the best lighted business section of public streets in the country, extending north and south on Broad street and east and west on Market street, a distance of about two miles on the former and about a mile on the latter, in the form of a cross and embracing the section of the city in which are located the theatres, newspapers, cigar stores, leading cafes and ice cream and confectionery establishments and restaurants. The movement is regarded as a commercial awakening of the city and the municipal authorities will do all they can to encourage it. The lighting is done at the expense of the merchants.

CHILD HEROINE AT A FIRE.

Four-Year-Old Saves Baby From Death and House from Burning.

Thelma Bowie, four years old, proved herself a little heroine at Trenton yesterday when she saved the life of one-year-old Walter Witters, Jr., put out a fire in his mother's house, and saved herself from being badly burned by jumping in the sink and turning on the water. Thelma happened in the house of the neighbor when the baby pulled over a bottle containing gasoline. A seven-year-old sister dropped a burning match in the gasoline, and the rug on which the baby was sitting began to blaze. Thelma grabbed the baby, took him out of doors, ran back and extinguished the rug by getting water from the sink. Her feet caught fire while doing this, and she climbed on a chair and jumped in the sink and turned the water on.

By this time the eleven-year-old sister of the baby had found the mother and brought her to the scene of action. She scolded Thelma for taking the baby out of doors. Then she petted her for turning on the water and saving the house from fire.

FORT OPEN TO CONVICTION.

Governor Ready to Consider Other Plans Than His Own for State Finances.

It developed yesterday that Gov. Fort is not irrevocably committed to his suggestions in regard to the finances of the State, in so far as they relate to bolstering up the revenue at the expense of the public school system. He has not, however, withdrawn from his position, and it is expected that an argument in his behalf, in the form of a circular letter from the State Board of Education, will be in the hands of all the local boards within the week.

"There is nothing for me to say at present," said the Governor. "I made suggestions in my message to the Legislature along the lines which appeared to me, after the most careful consideration, to be the best for the State. I am not irrevocably committed to these suggestions. In fact I am, up to the present time, absolutely open minded in regard to the matter, and I would be glad to take up any meritorious suggestions different from those that I made."

Elizabeth Was Quiet.

While the "Leeds Devil" and other phenomena are exciting South Jersey towns, Elizabeth was forced to content itself yesterday with mere home amusements. Not a saloon was open, as far as the police know, and as no dance or concert halls are allowed open on Sunday there was no diversion. The saloon-keepers were not visited by Mayor Mraviag, nor was there any need of his visit, so far as the police records show.

At Proctor's.

The attendance at the Proctor house last week proved to be a record breaker. The bills were the strongest vaudeville attractions seen in this city. Little Tilly, La Franc Sisters and the Welsh Brothers being the attractions. This week the bill will even be stronger than last week, while the pictures are always the best.

—Discriminating coffee drinkers are reminded that Neuman Brothers' Mocha and Java or Old Government Java are superior to all other grades. They have just received a new supply, fresh roasted.

We manufacture a pair of glasses as low as $1.00 with a 10-year gold-filled frame, which with the examination that we give, cannot be duplicated today by any one in the optical business.

There is no one today in the United States who fits the eyes the same as we do. If you have ever been fitted to glasses by others you understand what the test is—how you have to read letters and tell the optician what you want. We do not fit that way, but take exact measurements of the eye from the pupil without using any drops, nor do we ask any questions or use test card hung on the wall.

ITALIAN MISSION PLANS

Officers Elected and Minister Re-engaged at Its Annual Meeting.

REV. MR. MELINO IN CHARGE.

Young People's Societies of Evangelical Church Support the Mission, Which Is in a Prosperous Condition.

The annual meeting of the Italian Mission of Plainfield was held Monday when officers for the year were elected and a resume of the work presented. Rev. Lewis Bond was chosen chairman; Herbert E. Parker, vice-chairman; Miles Roberts, treasurer and Clarence LaRue, secretary. These officers comprise the executive committee.

As treasurer, Miles Roberts gave a summary of the first year's work. This stated that Antonio Melino, formerly a Roman Catholic priest, but now a Protestant clergyman, was engaged at a salary of $30 a month to spend one-half of his time in work here among Italians. Fourteen young people's societies in the various churches pledged $15 each toward paying his salary up to January 1, 1909.

After Mr. Melino had worked several months in house to house visitation, the need for a meeting place became apparent. A store on East Third street, next to the Temple Baptist church, was leased at a rental of $12. Chairs, tables and other necessary supplies were purchased. The money contributed by the young people's societies just covers Mr. Melino's salary and the executive committee has raised the balance, about $100 to settle accounts. The new year was started free of debt.

For the coming year $600 is needed. This will cover Mr. Melino's salary of $360; rent of meeting place, $144; fuel, $10; janitor service, $12 and $74 for sundry supplies and incidental expenses.

Aside from the house to house visitation by Mr. Melino he has established a class which meets Sunday morning for religious instruction. The attendance has varied from one or two to eight or ten on Sunday. Educational classes were conducted through the autumn five evenings a week and were attended by from six to fifteen men. Now Mr. Melino has given up his classes in Italian, as the men prefer English and practically all his time is spent in work in the homes of the Italians, where he gives religious instruction where he can.

It is said by Mr. Roberts that the Italians appreciate this work. Educational classes are conduced by Mr. Cubberly, a graduate of Brown University. The Y. M. C. A. has lent a square piano for the meeting-room. Several of the Italians are good musicians and play various instruments, and they are reached through their love of music. An impromptu entertainment was recently given, after which Mr. Bond and Mrs. Roberts gave a religious talk suggested by the music. There were thirteen Italians present and when some one suggested that they all join in some native folk song it developed that they spoke different dialects so that only some four or five could join in the same song. It was then decided to each English songs, and to Americanize and Christianize them as far as possible at the same time.

"Try-out" Tonight.

Tonight has been set aside for the weekly "try-out" at the New Plainfield theatre. Arthur Nelson, the vaudeville manager, has booked ten more acts of the amateur variety and the artists will spread themselves to get the prize money. The regular bill comprises four vaudeville acts and four reels of pictures.

Elizabeth Knights Entertain.

Bayley Council, Knights of Columbus, of Elizabeth, entertained several of the Newark Knights last night at its annual reception in Sacred Heart Hall, Elizabeth. There were several hundred in attendance. The affair was conducted on an elaborate scale. P. Leo Donlan heads the local knights.

Will Repeat Entertainment.

The recent entertainment given by the Baraca class of the West End Tabernacle will be repeated at the meeting of Martha Washington council, D. of A., on February 27. The Crab orchestra, which made such a hit on the previous occasion, will furnish a new program of selections.

Death of Infant Daughter.

Katherine Keyser Robbins, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Sherman Robbins, of Clinton avenue, died yesterday, aged three months and eight days. The funeral will be held at the parents' residence tomorrow morning at 11:45. Burial will be in the Linden cemetery.

CITY CAN APPROPRIATE FOR LINCOLN CENTENARY

The bill allowing municipalities to appropriate money to co-operate with the Grand Army of the Republic for the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Lincoln was passed last night by the State Senate under suspended rules, on the motion of Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset.

Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Essex, from which county the bill came said that he was strongly in favor of the bill, as any financial burden would be shouldered by the cities voting to make the appropriation and, therefore, would be no expense to the State. He added that he wished the measure to pass at once, as the time was short in which to make preparations for the event. Senator Frelinghuysen, the majority leader, also asked for its immediate passage.

On a unanimous vote the bill was sent at once to the Governor for signature.

EQUAL SUFFERAGE LEAGUE HEARS OF DEMONSTRATION

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Isaac L. Miller on Watchung avenue. Mrs. Stephen Haff, the president, was in the chair. A letter was read from the executive committee of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association urging the nomination of a representative, experienced woman, for election to the next school board.

A letter was also received from Dr. H. M. Maxson in answer to a request sent to him that the league be permitted to offer a prize for the best essay on the topic of "Equal Suffrage," to be written by a pupil of the High School. Dr. Maxson stated that he found himself unable to comply with the request, but that the subject suggested would be placed on the list of those offered for choice to pupils intending to compete for the Babcock prize.

An interesting account was then given by Mrs. Haff of the monster equal suffrage parade which took place in London on June 13 last. She said that she stood for two hours watching the procession pass, the most remarkable order being preserved throughout. Mrs. William Riley then read of the succeeding parades in London, one on June 17 and the other on June 21, in which fully five hundred thousand persons marched. Tea was served at the close of the meeting.

BIRTHDAY PARTY OF FIRST M. E. WOMEN

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church of which Mrs. L. M. French is president, the annual birthday social was held in Vincent chapel, last night. The affair was largely attended and there was a generous response through the envelopes. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea took charge of the program and the receipt of the birthday money. This was conducted in a novel way. The twelve months were called and those whose birthdays occurred in the several months named stepped forward and deposited their envelopes. It was found that the largest number had birthdays in September.

During the evening an informal program was enjoyed. This was opened with a piano solo by Mrs. J. K. Roundy, after which Miss Helen Woolley gave a recitation. A vocal solo by Charles Prior preceded the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," by the High School Boys' Club, comprising Clyde Doane, Guion Fountain, Roy Titsworth and Charles Prior.

A feature of the entertainment was the recitation of a number of poems by Eugene Field, which were given by Rev. Charles S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, who has won fame for his excellent work in this line. All of the numbers were encored. After the collection of birthday envelopes by months, refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

The committee in charge of the affair comprised Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. A. C. McCrea, Mrs. G. H. Rittenhouse, and Mrs. G. H. Whitney. They were assisted by a number of young women.

The Y. M. C. A. will give another one of its popular concerts tonight in Association auditorium. Miss Laura Gesswein, soprano soloist of the First M. E. church choir, will sing. She will be accompanied by Prof. J. Edmund Skiff. Admission will be free.

EMIL HOFMAN RECITAL AT AUDITORIUM, FEB. 16.

As an introductory to a series of fine musicales to be given here, J. Edmund Skiff has arranged to present the distinguished German baritone, Emil Hofman, at the Hartridge School auditorium, on Tuesday night, February 16. He first appeared in this country in New York in 1900 under the Grau-Savage management, at the close of which he appeared in several concerts with Mme. Schumann-Heink, who was so impressed with the magnetism of his singing that she arranged for a joint song recital with him.

From that time Mr. Hofman became a singer of intellect and ability in the interpretation of famous German Lieder and songs. He is said to be a real genius, whether he sings a simple nursery rhyme by Nevin, an Irish ditty, a Strauss love song or a famous German Lied, his songs breathe the atmosphere of life and reality.

HE BIT OFF HIS TONGUE WHEN THROWN FROM WAGON

George Smith, one of the oldest employes at the freight house, was thrown off a wagon this morning, the horse being frightened by a passing train. Besides being bruised and scratched about the head and face, he bit of the end of his tongue. Mr. Smith was standing on the rear of the wagon assisting a man to unload his merchandise in a freight car.

The horse gave a sudden jump, pulling the wagon away from the car and pitched Mr. Smith headlong to the ground. He was picked up by other employes about the yard and taken home, where he will be detained for a few days.

ROSENTHAL BROTHERS ARE IN BANKRUPTCY

Meyer and Rosenthal, trading as Rosenthal Brothers, at 306 West Front street, today filed a petition in bankruptcy before Judge Cross at Trenton. David Cohen, of Newark, was appointed receiver upon the application of three creditors, K. Koffman, of New York, whose claim is $363.51; J. M. Crousen, of Newark, claim $16.65, and Goldstein Company, of Newark, claim $27.09.

By the appointment of a receiver the bankrupt firm is prohibited from doing business. It is claimed by the creditors that the firm gave a chattel mortgage on its goods in November thus trying to prevent them from recovering that which they claim is due them.

AT ELEVENTH HOUR REPRIEVE IS GRANTED

Governor J. Franklin Fort after refusing a reprieve in the case of Archibald Herron, of Metuchen, who murdered Rev. Dr. Prickett, of that place, and declared himself opposed to any efforts that would lessen the penalty for the crime, this morning granted a temporary reprieve to allow the accused man's counsel, Judge Cowenhoven, an opportunity to make application for the appointment of a jury to determine the man's sanity.

Herron was condemned to die at Trenton tomorrow night and it is the first instance in many years that an accused man had such a narrow escape. Judge Cowenhoven claimed that the Mercer county courts had jurisdiction in the case and made application to Judge Relistab for the appointment of a commission. The latter said that he would take the matter under advisement. This morning after a conference with Judge Reed, he denied the application for a stay of the execution and also the appointment of a commission. It was his opinion that the matter should be taken to the Middlesex county court, where Judge Booream presides.

In connection with the case Dr. Evans, of the State Hospital, Morris Plains; Dr. Cotton, of State Hospital, Trenton, together with Drs. MacKenzie and Costell, insanity experts, yesterday made an examination of Herron, following an exhaustive investigation into the man's family, and they all declared that Herron was insane when he committed murder and that he is now insane. Dr. Cotton in speaking to the representative of The Daily Press today, said that in his opinion Herron is undoubtedly insane and was when he killed Dr. Prickett, that his wife has taken no interest whatever in her husband, that he has not a soul on earth who is interested in his behalf and that there is no question but that Herron was not and is not now responsible for his acts.

In view of this testimony by the physicians, Governor Fort decided to allow time for the appointment of a jury to inquire more fully into the case. Judge Cowenhoven will either ask for the appointment of a jury or take the matter to the Supreme Court.

MISS APOLONIA KAPOLA BECOMES MRS. BOZEK

Miss Apolonia Kapola, of this city, and Michael Bozek, of South Plainfield, were married Sunday noon at the Polish Catholic church, Perth Amboy, in the presence of a large gathering of friends. The couple was attended by twelve young women and a like number of young men, who escorted them to the altar and knelt during the impressive ceremony.

After the wedding a reception and dinner was held at South Plainfield, the future home of the bride and groom, the affair being attended by more than one hundred friends. The festivities continued until late in the evening. The couple received the congratulations of the guests and was also remembered with many gifts. The bride has been a resident of Plainfield for several years, while the groom has been employed at South Plainfield.

Jones, president of The Day Nursery, to be used for that charity. The children became interested in the nursery during the summer and in November held a porch sale at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Lounsbery on East Seventh street.

WRITES SCHOOL PUPILS

State Superintendent Baxter Tells Them in Letter of A. Lincoln's Character.

THE NOBLEST TYPE OF MAN.

Exercises to Commemorate Centenary of Martyr-President on Thursday February 11.

State Superintendent of Schools C. J. Baxter has issued a letter to the pupil school pupils. The message will be read at the Lincoln centenary celebrations in the city and borough schools on Thursday, February 11. This is the letter:

"February 12, 1909.

"My Dear Boys and Girls:

"Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in the wilds of Kentucky. His parents were among the poorest of the settlers of a sterile section of the State. Notwithstanding his humble birth all the school children and all the older people as well, from Maine to California and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, are today commemorating the one-hundredth anniversary of his birth, and all are inspired by the same pride, affection and patriotism.

"Why this grateful tribute of remembrance from eighty millions of his countrymen, and why is it his fame has become the common heritage of the world? Because of his broad sympathies, his unswerving integrity and his pure patriotism, and because "to him more than to any other man, the cause of the Union and liberty is indebted for its final triumph." Because a sense of justice that is universal places the highest estimate upon the talent that is humblest in origin, and upon success that has been won in circumstances the most adverse.

"When I wrote to your superintendent a few weeks ago that I would send a letter to be read to you on the 12th day of February, I am sure he wondered what I would attempt to do with so large a subject within the limits of a letter. So much has been written and said about our first martyred President that I doubt my ability to tell you anything new, so will briefly call your attention to some of the traits which made him great and which I wish you to emulate.

"Abraham Lincoln, when a boy, was not handicapped by a kind of pride which stands today very much in the way of success of some American youth. He realized that two strong hands and an active brain had been given to him for a purpose, and he was not ashamed to engage in any form of useful employment. Hard work, early and late, was his childhood portion, and as he always performed his tasks cheerfully and well, it proved a good preparation for the sterner duties that awaited him in after years. When he was not needed at home, he was "hired out" to the neighbors. He thought that driving an ox team, digging ditches, chopping wood, splitting rails, steering a flat boat or any other "odd job" was good enough for him. The duty that lay nearest was the one that he always performed next. He had no desire to eat the bread of idleness, and refused to spend money that he had not earned. I wish this were true of all the youth of today. I have slight hopes of the future usefulness and success of the boys and girls who are afraid of soiling their hands and are rarely useful in the home.

"He was always obedient, not in a servile sense, but as a matter of personal duty. After his death by an assassin's bullet his stepmother said: 'Abe never gave me a cross word or look and never refused, in fact or in appearance, to do anything I asked of him. He was dutiful to me always.' Lincoln said of his stepmother: 'She was affectionate, good and kind above the average woman.' To his own mother, who died when he was but nine years of age, he paid the following tribute: 'To my mother I owe all I am, and that I have achieved. She was my inspiration.' True obedience is not abject compliance with the imperative 'shall' or 'must.' During the Civil War a friend of one of the soldiers, who was visiting him in camp, said: 'How can you so cheerfully obey your captain's stern command?' He replied: 'That is easy. I have sworn to obey.' A proper recognition of all forms of constituted authority is essential to our own well-being, to good citizenship and to the perpetuity of the home, the school and the State.

"Though there was nothing inspiring in Lincoln's early environment, and his time and energies were nearly exhausted in the daily toil required to earn a poor living, he never wavered in his purpose to gain an education. At night by the fire-light of the log cabin and during the moments that were needed for rest he

MR. FOX PRESIDENT OF CHARITY ORGANIZATION

Officers for the coming year were chosen at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Charity Organization Society, held last night at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany on Crescent avenue. The only matter of importance was a report from the committee on playgrounds, showing what had been accomplished. No recommendations were formulated and the question will be discussed at more length at another meeting. The officers considered several difficult cases for relief and they were referred to the proper committee for disposition.

GRACE M.E. CHOIR PLANS FOR AN ENTERTAINMENT

The choir of Grace M. E. church is planning a bazaar and entertainment to be held in the church February 11 and 12. It is proposed to make it the most elaborate affair of the kind ever held there. The proceeds are to go to the choir.

Miss Alice Carroll, chairman of the entertainment committee, began her rehearsals yesterday. Forty-three children are to take part. The men had a meeting last night at the home of Dr. H. K. Carroll and made arrangements for an important feature of the program which is to be kept secret.

The chairmen of the various committees are: Entertainment, Miss Alice Carroll; fancy booth, Mrs. Stephen Beeching; candy, Miss Della Voehl; ice cream, E. A. Vermeule; cake, Mrs. J. W. A. Bauersachs; groceries, Mrs. George Nelson; clippings, Mrs. C. H. Harden; "Bright Idea," Miss Mary Steiner; weighing, Russell Harden; decorations, Ray Miller; choir, Florence Nichols; men's committee, W. J. Conroy; tickets, Mrs. Anna Most; publicity, Rev. O. J. Shoop. The women are to make a "scripture" cake, everything used in the making of it, to be something mentioned in the scripture. The cake will be sold by the piece.

Steal from Barn.

The barn of John P. Stelle, near Dunellen, was broken into last night and a runabout and a blanket stolen. Tracks in the mud indicated that the robber had gone towards Lincoln, but no other clue could be found. The door had been fastened with a padlock, and this had been pried off and was left lying on the ground. Mr. Stelle proposes to offer a reward of $50 for the return of the goods and information leading to the arrest of the thief.

LEGS CRUSHED BY TRAIN

Bayonne Young Man Fell Asleep on Freight Car and Was Jolted Off.

CRIES ATTRACTED PATROLMAN.

Removed to Muhlenberg Hospital Where Physicians Amputate Both Limbs—Will Recover.

Patrolman Arthur McGinley walked over from South Second street to Grant avenue station to meet the 3:35 train this morning, when his attention was attracted by calls for help coming from up the track. He hastened in their direction and a few hundred feet west of the depot discovered George Ferguson, 22 years old, of No. 27 Fourth street, Bayonne, lying between the rails. Both legs had been crushed just above the ankles and he was in a serious condition from loss of blood and exposure.

McGinley hurried to the home of Frederick Thompson at 913 West Front street, where he telephoned for the police patrol and physicians. As he was returning to the railroad he encountered Drs. Pittis, Clawson and Lufburrow, who had been answering sick calls and who accompanied him to the injured man. Ferguson was given temporary treatment pending his removal to Muhlenberg Hospital where the legs were amputated by Drs. Clawson and Ellis Hedges. His condition at noon today was considered good although he is in a very weak state.

Ferguson retained consciousness up to the time of the operation and told the police and physicians that his plight was due to falling from a freight train. He had been to Allentown, Pa., he said, and was on his way home when the accident occurred.

Ferguson continued that he had dropped off to sleep somewhere near Somerville and that a sudden jolt just before Grant avenue was reached caused him to roll down the sloping roof of the car. He attempted to catch hold of the edge but his hands were numbed by the cold and their brief grasp only served to swing him down between the couplings. The wheels of one car passed over his legs after which he managed to pull himself to one side. He was unable to state how long he had remained on the ground before McGinley found him.

Word was sent to his relatives and several of them visited the hospital shortly before noon.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS FOR WEST END PUPILS.

In response to the demand for school accommodations for the small children in the west end section, the Board of Education has rented the large room on the east side of the McVey Hotel building, West Front street, near Clinton avenue, in which one or more classes will be started for the small children for whom the walk to the Irving school is too long.

At present, one class will be started and the children in the west end, north of the railroad, who are now in the first grade in the Irving, will be transferred to that class, and others who have not yet begun school will be invited to attend. Some of those south of the track and west of Clinton avenue will probably also be transferred to this class, in order to shorten their walk to the school.

The Board is now fitting up the room and hopes to open the class on February 3. Plans for the proposed new school are being made and the present arrangement is only a temporary one.

DEATH ENDS LONG ILLNESS OF MRS. EMMA K. CONOVER.

Following a long and painful illness, Mrs. Emma K. Conover, widow of George Conover, died at her home on Jackson avenue at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. She was fifty-eight years old and was a native of Brooklyn, her maiden name being Philpott. Her father was James Philpott, who was known to many Plainfielders. Mrs. Conover's husband died suddenly on May 12 last, following an attack of heart failure on the street. She was in a New York hospital at the time. The departed was a kind, loving mother and sister and through her long illness was patient to the last.

Mrs. Conover is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Albert King, and four sons, Horace, Walter, George and Herbert, all living here. She also leaves one brother, Theodore Philpott and three sisters, Adelaide, Julia and Cornelia, all of Plainfield. The funeral will be held at the late residence, Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Joe Kelley is to go to Toronto again to manage, this being one result of the patching up of the Kelley-Dovey breach.

McGraw is rather sweet on the outlook for a good season from his Indian catcher, J. Meyers, purchased from the St. Paul club. The Indian is said to be a good thrower and he batted .292 for eighty-eight games in the American Association last season. He was something of a run getter with forty-five tallies, and he had 132 assists.

GOLF.

After this week nearly all the golf bodies of prominence will have held their annual meetings and then the plans for another season will proceed in an uninterrupted manner. Followers of the game in this vicinity are interested in the approaching session of the New Jersey State Golf Association.

Leighton Calkins, who has served as president for the last two years, has declared his intention to step down in favor of some one else Last season the championship tournament of the association was held over the links of the Englewood Golf Club, which this year will be the scene of the national open tournament.

Another early move looked forward to is a meeting of the United States Golf Association executive committee. The latter will have to select dates for the women's and the open championship.

Some word will also probably be received shortly from J. E. Ericksen, chairman of the Metropolitan Golf Association handicap committee. About the first of the year the club secretaries received notices to fill out blank handicap reports, the latter to be returned by January 25.

At the recent annual meeting of the Flushing Country Club suggestions were made for a more active competitive campaign throughout the coming season. Nine competitions for women will be held. Officers and members of the board of governors were elected for the year as follows: President, Robert Colgate; vice-president, Edward M. Franklin; secretary, Edward C. Hood; treasurer, Eugene Wright; members of the board of governors, to serve three years, Alexander S. Andrews and W. C. Johnson; member of the board of governors for two years, George R. Leslie; member of the board of governors for one year, M. J. K. Reilly.

The Wykagyl Country Club is planning to launch out and take a position of prominence among the golf organizations in the metropolitan district. At the recent meeting of the organization it was voted to build an addition to the clubhouse, at a cost of upward of $20,000. Improvements to the course have also been decided upon. In fact, Alec Smith, since taking up his duties there on December 1, has already suggested a number of changes.

THE DAILY PRESS.

Plainfield, N. J., January 26, 1909.

No particular section of the city is any more in need of street repair than another, the fact being that in all four quarters there is an urgent necessity for such work at the earliest possible day. West Fifth street, between Arlington and Madison, is in as wretched a condition as is Woodland avenue, between Watchung and Prospect avenues. And so it goes, all through the city. The truth is that the entire appropriation for street department work, to be included in the budget, should be expended for repairs, and we believe that the Councilmanic committee realizes fully the condition that makes this imperative.

Governor Fort's suggestion that as an emergency measure part of the school funds be diverted for other purposes meets with the emphatic and unanimous disapproval of the populace irrespective of party or other affiliations. Thousands of dollars are wasted in useless and most unusually elaborate printed reports, which in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred are at once cast into waste paper baskets, and altogether too much of the people's money is spent in unnecessary commissions, whose investigations tell the people just what they always knew. These and countless other methods of using public funds are largely responsible for the impoverished condition of the State treasury. Do away with this waste, but keep hands off the school funds, or the party in power will justly suffer the consequences.

ACCUSES A LAWYER OF ACTING AS A SPY

Interest was added yesterday in the Union County Court at Elizabeth to the long drawn out trial of Ralph Maronne, the Hoboken youth accused of conspiring to defraud the Barret Manufacturing Company, when the dozen lawyers in the case engaged in a verbal jiu jitsu contest as to whether one of their number was a "spy" or a Blackstonian. The contest was declared a draw, Allan Strong, Marrone's chief counsel, assuring Craig Marsh, of this city who is in charge of the case for the State, that all the lawyers in the case "have been admitted to the bar and are not spies."

This was only one of the many battles which counsel in the case have indulged in. John Walsh, one of Strong's assistants, had been granted the privilege of going over some of the books of the Central Railroad Company used in tracing the goods shipped. These books were in possession of the plaintiff, but Mr. Marsh had consented to have the defense look at them. The counsel for the defense had been doing so for a considerable time when Mr. Walsh arose and said, addressing Judge Atwater:

"Your honor, I wish you would stop the plaintiff's spy from following us around and watching just what we are doing with those books.

Mr. Strong replied that there were no spies in the case, and was backed up by Mr. Johnson, a New York lawyer, against whom Walsh's remark was directed. As Walsh was speaking a dark-browed young man who sat on the opposite side of the lawyers' table near the books which caused the argument, moved away.

Since the case opened a week ago objections on technicalities have consumed most of the time. This is due in a measure to the great array of legal talent engaged. But one witness, John M. Morris, of this city, chief clerk of the Jersey City freight depot of the Central Railroad, testified yesterday. He told of the various shipments and endeavored to verify waybills.

Severely Gashed His Foot.

George Dunham, son of W. C. Dpnham, of Craig place, gashed himself severely in the foot while cutting wood yesterday. The axe slipped from his grasp and striking the shoe penetrated through the flesh to the bone, cutting the tendons and an artery. He was attended by Dr. Dundon and afterward removed to Muhlenberg hospital for further treatment. He will return home today or tomorrow.

Mr. Fox's Address.

Hugh F. Fox, president of the New Jersey State Board of Children's Guardians, delivered an address today at the conference at Washington, D. C., on the care of Dependent Children. His subject was "Sshould the State inspect the work of all child-caring agencies including both institutions and home-finding socieites." The text of his address will be published tomorrow.

Plainfield Forty-One Years Ago...

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

January, 1868.

We would call the attention of our readers to the new meat stand of Tingley & Coriell, in the basement of the bank building. They are obliging and sell cheap for cash.

The desirable residence on Seventh street, formerly owned by Mr. Crowell, and of late by Mr. Warren, was sold by Sheriff Pierson, at Thorn's hotel, on Thursday last, for $11,500. We understand that Mr. Yates was the fortunate purchaser.

Read the card of R. Conaway in another column, and if you wish your watch or jewelry repaired, give him a call, and he will guarantee satisfaction.

We notice that the "Steamer Boys" have housed their engine in their new and commodious house on Front street, next to Laing's hotel.

We guess our neighbors of the Union County Herald, forgot to send us a paper last week, as we have not received any. Don't forget neighbors.

Don't forget the promenade Concert of the Gazelle Engine Company on the 20th of February. Tickets may be obtained of the committee—William B.Dunn, Albert Runyon and Thaddeus Doane.

On Thursday of this week "Collyer's Combination Minstrel Troupe" will be at Laing's hall. This is said to be one of the best troupes now travelling. Go see them.

By reference to an advertisement in another column, it will be seen that Mr. A. Warnock has removed his bakery to Front street, in the place formerly occupied by Jacob Laing.

PROTEST TO GOVERNOR REGARDING SCHOOL TAX

The North Plainfield Board of Education registered a vigorous protest last night at its regular meeting, against Governor Fort's proposition to hold back the school money received from the special railroad tax and turn it into the State treasury for the purpose of making up the deficit there.

The educators are indignant and denounce as absurd the idea of what they term "robbing the schools" to make up this deficit. A communication was ordered prepared and forwarded to the Governor, objecting to such a move, and no doubt the other boards of education of the State will also be aroused to action.

No other important business was transacted at the meeting, except that warrants amounting to $5,000 were approved.

Plainfield Against East Orange.

One of the best basketball games of the season will be played tomorrow afternoon between the basketball teams of the Plainfield and East Orange High Schools. The game will be played at the high school gymnasium at 3:30 o'clock. The Plainfield lineup will be as follows: Forwards, Snyder and Clarke; centre, Lidgate; guards, Doane and Prior.

Want $2,000 For Summit Hospital.

To permit the Union County Freeholders to give $2,000 a year to Summit's new hospital, Assemblyman Pierce introduced a bill last night at Trenton to allow the appropriations for hospitals to be $22,000 instead of $20,000.

D. A. R. to Entertain.

The members of the Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, are planning for an informal social and musical to be held at the home of the Misses Manning on West Front street, Thursday afternoon, February 4.

Public Bust of Lincoln.

State Senator J. S. Frelinghuysen has introduced a bill in the Senate for the purchase of a $400 bronze memorial bust of Abraham Lincoln to be placed in the State House at Trenton on Lincoln's Borthday.

Present Your Bills.

All bills against the city must be in the hands of the city clerk by tomorrow night to insure payment at the February meeting of the Common Council.

Games Tonight.

There will be two basketball games tonight at Debele hall. The first team is to play the Holy Cross five, and the seconds are to meet Hope chapel.

Cranford Boy Drowned.

While playing on the thin ice near his home in Cranford this morning, Douglas Meyers, aged twelve years, fell into the Rahway river and was drowned.

An all-day sewing meeting will be held at Warren chapel tomorrow under teh auspices of the Misisonary and Aid Society. The boxes of clothing for the Freedmen will be packed at that time.

UNION ASSEMBLYMEN OPPOSE FORT'S PLAN.

Assemblymen Pierce and Kirstein have made known their positions with reference to the oGvernor's plan to draw upon the main stem railroad taxes for State purposes. While neither lawgiver is ready to go into details as to the stand he will take when the matter is brought into the Legislature, both admit that they are in opposition to the proposed change.

There is no one today in the United States who fits the eyes the same as we do. LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

At the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, the American humorist-tourist, Fred Niblo, will present the fifth of his remarkably interesting and truly delightful pictorial Talk of Travel in Distant Lands. The offering on this occasion will be "London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel," graphically illustrated with hundreds of superbly colored views, augmented by numerous motion pictures and panoramic photographs. The emphatic approbation accorded Mr. Niblo by the press and public alike on his able presentation of Africa, Egypt, Italy and Russia, has resulted in an unprecedented demand for seats for this most interesting zig zag journey through the highways and byways of the world's greatest metropolis. In this offering, Mr. Niblo presents a wonderful tour of a wonderful town, interesting alike to those who have been to London and to those who contemplate going, as well as delightfully refreshing and instructive to those who have recently returned from the outing abroad. London is far and away the most popular of the entire series of travel-talks. Like Africa, Egypt, Italy and Russia, which were presented so successfully at this theatre recently by Mr. Niblo, London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel, will be graphically illustrated with several hundred beautifully colored views, augmented by original panoramic photographs and an elaborate series of superb motion pictures, all of which are absolutely new and novel, being the personal work of Mr. Niblo and now being shown for the first time. The pictorial features include many strikingly realistic pilgrimages around and about the historic landmarks of old London, dear to the heart of every Anglo-Saxon, as well as snapshots, flashlights and intensely interesting panoramic motion views of the modern London of today, which, presented in Mr. Niblo's inimitable style are sure to be even more interesting, instructive and entertaining than any other travel-talk of the series.

"Married for Money," is the title of a new American drama from the pen of the well-known dramatic author, Lem B. Parker, which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night. The play is an arraignment of the utter disregard for the sacredness of the marriage vow prevalent among a certain portion of our well-to-do class, who, upon their sudden rise to wealth and power, seek through the medium of the divorce courts, to rid themselves of the wife or husband of their earlier life, in order to take on a younger or more attractive help-mate in their sphere of life. The story is said to be one of absorbing heart-interest and the climaxes and situations startling in realism and intensity. Manager Clay T. Vance promises a company of unusual merit, and scenic and costume accessories above the ordinary. The play has been received with unmistakable approval wherever produced and should prove one of the dramatic events of the season.

The electrical lighting device and switchboard used by the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels this season is said to be the most intricate and elaborate ever devised for a theatrical production. Ten thousand feet of specially insulated wire are used in the first part alone while thousands of miniature lamps are necessary to get that fairyland effect which is the best description that can be given of the extraordinary beauty of the setting. One immense switchboard controls the entire system, though more than ordinary care has to be taken by the stage hands in moving around, and handling this scenery, as every bit of the trellis work, vines and flowers are electrically articulated with charged wires, which feed tiny colored bulbs within the leaves and blossoms. In the olio, intricate devices are used also, for the spectacles, especially the Illusion of Hades, a realistic snow storm and the cloud effects. A large number of twenty thousand candle power arc lamps are used also. The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will appear at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

Hearts of gold do not take gold to heart.

Serving man is a good way of seeking God.

Envy is the tribute that sloth pays to industry.

Only the large hearted are fit to work with the little ones.

The best prayers are the ones that take longest to learn.

You can never fight a man's foes unless you are his friend.

If you would shine as the stars begin with a little sunshine now.

She has no power over the life when it has no partners in the heart.

Keeping faith with folks is a good way of cultivating faith in them.

It's no use denying sin's service when you're enjoying its salary.

Bearing hatred is a good deal like carrying vitriol in a mighty thin flask.

Nothing indicates the wise man better than the smart things he doesn't say.

Flowers of happiness never bloom long when we plant them in our own gardens.

You cannot tell much about a man's musical ability by the way he blows his own horn.

People who are afraid of being called cranks always let some one wind them up.

It will take more than arguing the devil out of existence to eliminate evil from the world.—Chicago Tribune.

JUST JOTTINGS.

Politicians who wear new clothes should not fling mud.

A barrel of liquor contains a multitude of headaches.

A man seldom appreciates a rose until he encounters the thorns.

A man can flatter any woman by pretending to be jealous about her.

It's hard for a lazy man to be truthful, for he is happiest when lying.

The girl with a scrawny neck naturally thinks decollette gowns bad taste.

But for the mistakes made by great men, history would be awfully uninteresting.

No sooner does a girl get into the woman class than she begins to worry about her complexion.

The young man who considers himself above his work will never occupy a position that is above him.

Some men think they could give the Lord a good many useful pointers relative to running the universe.

Probably nothing in the world arouses more genuine curiosity than the presence of a stranger in a country village.

When a young man proposes to a girl and she asks time to consider it may mean that she wants to consider the advisability of breaking off another engagement.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Friend, what you'd get, first earn.—Browning.

Gratitude is the memory of the heart.—Sydney.

To feign a virtue is to have its opposite vice.—Hawthorne.

Good temper is like a sunny day—it sheds its brightness everywhere.—Pascal.

Truth is violated by falsehood, and it may be equally outraged by silence.—Ammiau.

It is vain to be always looking towards the future and never acting toward it.—Boyes.

Truth should be the first lesson of the child and the last inspiration of manhood.—Whittier.

It is better to desire the things that we have, than to have the things that we desire.—Henry van Dyke.

We are natural believers. Truth or the connection between cause and effect, alone interests us.—Emerson.

EPIGRAMS.

Beware of those who are always chanting paeans to sincerity.

The trouble with us all is that we write our woes in indelible ink and our ideals in water.

The mother who hushes her boys too often will ask them in vain to speak when they are older.

The most popular persons have the wit not to be too wise, and the wisdom not to be too witty.—Minna Thomas Antrim in The Sunday Magazine.

THE LAND OF FEDORA

A Country That Has Long Since Passed Away

"Ha! ha!" cried the first ancient mariner.

"I'll bet ye," said the second, "that ye're thinkin' of Fedora."

"Fedora," said the first, "was a South-American country, but you needn't look for it on the map because it ain't there—"

"And this is why," said the second.

"And this is why," said the first. "The ruler of Fedora was an uneasy kind of a potentate, always wanting laws to be passed. The people mustn't do this under penalty, and they mustn't do that under penalty, and with one thing and another it went from bad to worse until he had a law passed that the people must always stick to the literal truth under penalty of imprisonment without the option of a fine."

"And that's how it began," said the second ancient mariner.

"Well, sir, Bill and me landed in Fedora the next day, filled with innocence about the passage of incriminating regulations, and we made a few remarks, promiscuous, about a sea serpent or two, a day's run we made, a tidal wave we saw and a few odd things like that—"

"Thinking no harm."

"And first thing we knew we were in jail, tight. But we hadn't been in long when another string of prisoners were conducted to the dungeons. Six. 'What are you in for?' said we. First man said: 'I was telling a certain senorita that she was the most beautiful in all Fedora and they seized me.' Second man said: 'I was telling a friend about the wisdom of my infant child and they seized me.' Third man said: 'I was relating my experience on a recent fishing expedition and they seized me.' Fourth man said: 'I was telling an old fogy that I was glad too see him and they seized me.' Fifth man said: 'I was telling the boys that my wife didn't care how late I stayed out at night and they seized me.' Sixth man said: 'I was telling a stranger how fast my horse could trot, and here I am.'

"'Senors,' said I, as they all began to groan, 'rest easy, for I feel an apprehension that we shall soon have company.'"

"A lot of company," corrected the first.

"Muy muchendos," said the second. "And while I was still making the observation about the propinquity of company the doors swung open again and a dozen more prisoners were cast into the cells. Three were merchants, three were lawyers, one was the weather man, one was a huckster who had been crying 'Fresh fish,' one was a real estate agent who had been caught saying that the plumbing was in good order, one was a painless dentist and the other two had been caught signing business letters 'Yours truly.'"

"'This is outragiosos,' said one.

"'Mally! But some one shall suffer for this!' said another, and the rest began to gnaw their nails and hiss between their teeth.

"'Senors,' said I, 'fear not, for unless I greatly mistake the signs and portents, Fedora is in for larks.'"

Whereupon the two ancient mariners made merry and were glad.

"By eight o'clock that night we were six in a cell," said the first.

"By nine o'clock we were ten in a cell," said the second.

"By ten o'clock they were stuffing them into the courtyard," said the first.

"And still they came. In the morning the court had to sign an order enlarging the confines of the jail to include the market place and the grand opera house and before noon the order was amended to include the regimental barracks, the racetrack and all the public parks. Feeding the prisoners became a serious problem and when a cook got tired all he had to do was to tell about a storm he had seen once where the hailstones were as big as hens' eggs and immediately he was placed under arrest, and instead of feeding others somebody had to feed him.

"Well, sir, the prisoners came in by the shoals and droves and the court had to pass another order still further enlarging the limits of the jail to include all that territory lying within the boundaries of Fedora. Next morning there was no breakfast and you ought to have heard the way the prisoners howled, insisting on their constitutional rights to be fed.

"'But, senors, the cooks are all in jail,' said a voice.

"'Then let the judges pardon them,' cried the prisoners.

"'But, senors, the judges are in jail, too,' said the voice.

"'Then let the legislature pardon them!'

"'But the legislature is also in jail,' said the voice.

"'Then we'll elect a new legislature,' said the people.

"'But you can't,' said the voice, 'it is the law that any man who is imprisoned shall lose his right to vote and there isn't a freeman in Fedora today.'

"'What!' said somebody, 'is the ruler a prisoner, too?'

"'Yes,' said the voice, 'somebody called me a fool and I called him a liar—but on reflection I gave myself up.'

"And that," said the first ancient mariner, "was the end of Fedora."

"And that," said the second ancient mariner, "is why you needn't look for't on the map."

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Cooper Hospital doctors yesterday treated severe scalp lacerations sustained in a fight by Joseph McLaughlin, thirty-three years old, of Philadelphia.

The Bayonne Board of Education has arranged to give a series of public lectures at School No. 8. The first will take place on Wednesday evening, when J. C. Slocum will speak on "Australia."

Arthur W. Sykes, a popular young man of Vineland, has been appointed foreman in the United States naval machine shop in the Philippine Islands, and will sail this week for Manila.

Louis Biggs, a war veteran, who was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden, Friday night in a serious condition to undergo an operation, died Saturday. He was about seventy years of age and had been ill for a month.

Susie Moore, Lillie Stewart and Mary Straub, frequenters of the dance halls at Gloucester, were yesterday committed by Mayor Lincoln to await a hearing on suspicion of complicity in the robbery of Charles Soley, a weaver, who lost $35 last Friday night.

The famous McGowan cafe, at Atlantic City, went under a hammer and was bought in on Saturday by Frederick Schwamb, a former hotel man there. He will continue the business. The price paid for it was $14,300, and was run up from a bid of $5,000.

Recorder Hugh Mara, of Bayonne, yesterday fined Samuel Minsk, of 500 Avenue C, $1, for keeping chickens without a license. This is the first conviction under a new code passed by the Board of Health requiring all persons who have chickens to pay $1 for a license.

As former Councilman H. C. Hines, of Vineland, stepped into the dining-room at his home to extinguish the light Saturday night, he found the tablespread on fire and the floor blazing in several places. It is supposed part of a match head fell in the fringe of the cloth a few moments before, when he had lighted the gas.

A stable in the rear of 40 West Twenty-seventh street, Bayonne, within thirty feet of police headquarters and owned by Thomas Hussar, was visited by horse thieves yesterday morning. A horse and wagon, valued at $350, were taken. The thieves scattered three bales of hay along the alley leading from the stable to deaden the noise of the horse's hoofs and the wagon wheels.

An agitation for a belt street car line for Bayonne was started today by merchants and citizens. The cars run along Avenue C, and many of the house owners would be pleased to have the cars removed in the middle of the street. Arrangements will be made for a mass-meeting to boom the proposed belt line. It is planned to have the cars run along Broadway and the western section of the city.

ROAMED ALL NIGHT IN FOG, THEN WAS RESCUED.

Though he is eighty years old and has followed the water all his life, Jonathan Bloodgood, of South Amboy, an oysterman, was lost in the fog on Raritan bay Saturday night. All night he worked at the oars and was found in an exhausted condition by a searching party. Prior to his discovery by the searchers he fell in with an oyster sloop, lost like himself. He was taken on board, warmed, fed and refreshed. His clothes were dried for him. Then he left the sloop and renewed his efforts to reach home.

His failure to arrive home Saturday night indueed friends to seek him. All but one of the searchers started out in a boat. A companion carrying a light, walked along the shore, and with a fog-horn signaled the boat from the shore whenever its course varied from the shoreline. The search was abandoned until morning, but was resumed at an early hour. When near the jetties the party found Mr. Bloodgood trying to follow the shoreline to his home. The aged waterman was wellnigh exhausted. The oars were taken into younger hands and he was soon landed near his home.

BUT ONE HURT WHEN LIFT FELL 35 FEET.

Hyman Kline, of Somerville, was injured and William E. Gilbert, of Trenton, badly shaken up yesterday, when an elevator in the Forst-Richey building, at Warren and State streets, Trenton, dropped thirty-five feet. Kline was removed to Mercer Hospital suffering from a slight concussion of the spine and the physicians fear that he has also sustained internal injuries. Gilbert, the elevator operator, is suffering only from a nervous shock.

The exact cause of the accident is not known. The safety clutch was tardy in working, but when examined after the elevator fell it was found to be in its proper place. It is thought that a bolt in the cable winding wheel may have slipped from its place, allowing the cable to run free. The Forst-Richey building is occupied mainly by lawyers. Gilbert and Kline were the only occupants of the elevator when the accident occurred.

WRITES SCHOOL PUPILS

persistently studied, and thus he laid the foundation of the illustrious career before him. He realized that personal effort is essential to self-development and that there is no excellence without great labor. No matter how good your school advantages may be, they will count for but little if you are averse to effort. The idle pupil, who either dodges or bluffs through his recitations and thinks he is cheating his teacher, is simply swindling himself.

"He was so truthful and so trustworthy that the rough settlers gave him the very complimentary nickname of 'Honest Abe.' When he was clerking in a store a customer paid him a sixpence too much. He thought about it all the rest of the day, and at night, after he had closed the store, walked several miles to restore the bit of silver to its rightful owner. He once took the same amount of trouble to carry an ounce of tea to a poor woman to whom he had accidentally given short weight. Being thoroughly honest in little things during his days of obscurity, he then gave evidence of the deep sincerity and unswerving integrity that served him so well when he beoame a controlling influence in the affairs of the Nation during the most critical period of its history. The superintendent of a large manufacturing interest once said: 'My pri-private secretary is a slow fellow but he is true blue. His trustworthiness makes him worth many times his weight in gold. I do not know what I should do without him.' Honesty is not simply the best policy, but is an absolutely indispensable part of the equipment of the youth who is destined to win success.

"Though it was his most beautiful trait of character, I cannot dwell upon Lincoln's sympathetic spirit, nor his many deeds of kindness, as my letter is already much longer than I intended to make it. Today's exercises should so stimulate your interest in him that you will be certain to read all about him that you can.

"And last but not least, he believed in a Heavenly Father who cares for us and directs our ways—an Almighty Ruler who presides over the destinies of nations. J. G. Holland says of him: 'The unwavering faith in a divine Providence began at his mother's knee, and ran like a thread of gold through all the inner experiences of his life.'

"Emerson says that on his second inauguration, 'President Lincoln delivered an address which will stand forver as a model of lofty eloquence and sublime morality.'

"His words and his life prove his 'firmness in the right' his 'charity for all,' and clearly reveal his sterling character and lofty purposes."

ELKS END SERIES BY WINNING THREE GAMES

The Elk bowling team took three straight games in a Fraternal league series with the Plainfield Bicycle Club at Johnny Campbell's alleys, last night. The Bike boys had an uphill struggle from the start and were easily outplayed throughout. They lost by over 200 pins in the first game, 147 in the second and 116 in the third.

The best score for the night was a 199 made by Tom Muir, of the Elks, while Harry VanEmburgh, of the same team, rapped out 194. The best score for the Bicycle club was a 176 made by Ray Mantz.

Last night's series was the last for the Elks and they finish with a record of fifteen games won and three lost. The Miantonomo team has won twelve and lost three and has three more to roll. They are with the Wetumpka five which will undoubtedly be defeated, as the team has not yet won a game, and in this event the Elks and Miantonomos will have to roll a post series to decide first and second place.

PIERCE INTRODUCES AN UTILITIES BILL

Governor Fort's bill for a public utilities commission was introduced in the House last night at Trenton by Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, of Union county. It developed that the bill was a good one, long way from being a replica of the Robbins-Young bill of last year. The new measure, for one thing, provides that the proposed commission shall have the power to fix rates for gas, electricity or transportation, the value of franchises to be taken into consideration. The Robbins bill had no rate-making clause.

Under the Pierce bill fifty citizens or a municipal corporation may secure adjustment of rates, or at least an investigation, by petitioning the commission.

If three of the four commissioners provided for vote to issue an order the corporations under their jurisdiction must obey or pay a penalty of $100 a day during the period violation may continue. The penalty need not worry any one, because while the commission may impose penalties, they may only be recovered by a successful suit at law. All orders issued are of no effect until thirty days after service on the corporations.

There is no mention in Pierce's bill of the politics of the members of the commission. The Governor, who is authorized to select them "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate," may select four Republicans or Socialists, if he so desires.

The Governor designates which shall be chairman of the commission, and he shall receive $2,500 per year for a four-year term. The other three are named for three, two and one years, respectively, and shall receive $6,000 each per year. The successors of the three named, besides the chairman, will be appointed for a full term of four years. A secretary, to receive $3,000 a year, is provided for. The total expense of the commission, including salaries, may not exceed $50,000 annually.

Pierce submitted his bill to Governor Fort before introducing it.

It is more than a probability that there will be no public utilities bill passed this year. The Regular Republican party leaders don't believe the Pierce bill or William P. Martin's bill will get through. Martin's is very much like the Hughes law of New York State. He introduced it last week and it went to the House judiciary committee, whither Pierce's has followed it.

ACKERMAN WILL TAKE TIME.

Not Prepared as Yet to Oppose Fort's Tax Scheme of Elizabeth.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman has written Superintendent of Schools Richard E. Clement, of Elizabeth, that it will be necessary for him to consider Governor Fort's plan to reduce the school funds by diverting the tax from second class railroad property to other channels before he can act in the matter. Mr. Clement requested the Union Senator to oppose the scheme.

"I have a high regard for the public schools," said Mr. Ackerman, "for they gave me my education, but I am not ready to decide this matter off-hand."

GIRLS IN 'GYM' EXHIBITION

Y. W. C. A. Classes in Dances and Drills at Crowded House.

A CLOSE BASKETBALL GAME.

Sixty-four Young Women in Bright Vari-colored Costumes Give Admirable Demonstration in Athletics.

The gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. was not large enough to accommodate the great number of spectators at the Y. W. C. A. athletic exhibition last night. The overflow from the gallery was crowded around the sides of the room below. The attendance reached nearly 300.

The success of the affair was not confined to the atendance. The dances and drills were executed with precision and in every particular the program was carried out like the working of machinery, credit for which is due to the excellent work of Miss Margaret Mosher, physical director. Sixty-four girls took part in the grand march.

A most beautiful performance was the Swedish Folk Dances by twelve young women in native costume. The Misses Mabel Cook, Edith Runk, Marie Chamberlain, Marian Lambert, Florence Jennings, Josephine Serrell, Iona Becker, Clara Runyon, Frances Newman, Cora Brokaw, Alice Boyd and Louise Layton.

As the program explained folk dances have played an important part in the lives of primitive peoples, as they naturally express in rythmical action, gaiety, sorrow, love or religious feelings. These dances are now recognized as one of the most beneficial forms of gymnastic exercises, combining as they do, the use of all muscles with freedom and grace." (a) Hopp Morr Annika (Hop Mother Annika)—This dance illustrates a gay, happy mood for walking and skipping thro' clapping and stamping to the joyful climax. (b) Bleking (Name of Province—Gay and entergetic, expressing playful resistance; then, joyful success. (c) Lott 'ist Tod (Lottie is Dead—The first movement, slow and mournful, expresses the dancers' sorrow over the death of their friend Lottie; then, as they remember that her property is coming to them, their mourning becomes rejoicing. (d) Kellenburg Turren. (e) Gustaf's Skol (Gustav's Health)—This dance represent the pledge of allegiance to the King, Gustav, then becomes an imitation of willingness in the yoke of subjection.

Scotch dances were performed by the N. P. H. S. advanced class, comprising Misses Helen George, Mabel Townley, Anna Daly, Ernestine Rickler, Ida Englehart and Ruth Weinberger.

The mass drill was a pleasing spectacle executed by the Monday and Friday evening and N. P. H. S. classes. The division using wands occupied the centre of the floor, while the dumb bell swingers were off to the sides. The Tuesday classes took part in a Hamburg Drill, and later in a demonstration of Indian club swinging. Miss Florence Wyckoff was the pianist.

Following the gymnastic exhibitions the basketball teams of the afternoon and evening classes, designated, respectively as "Reds" and "Yellows," engaged in an interesting game, which was won in the last few minutes of play by the "Reds." Score, 16 to 8. Miss Line did most of the scoring for her team. The lineup:

Yellows.		Reds.
	Forwards.
Hazel De Lany		Nettie Steiner
Reba Kline (captain)		Bessie Conroy
	Centre.
Lena Yost		Minnie Line (captain)
	Guards.
Helen Southard		Dorothy Randall
Olive De Lany		Louise Layton

Referee, Miss Stahlberger; umpire, Elizabeth Goddard. Miss Amy Tapping, general secretary, was in charge of the exhibition.

Taken Ill on the Stage.

The performance of "Peggy Machree," at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, was carried out under difficulties. Joseph O'Mara, the star, was suffering from a severe cold and his songs had to be rendered by another member of the cast. Toward the close of the first act, Miss Adrienne Augarde, the leading woman, became suddenly ill and was unable to finish her lines, an understudy taking her part.

Public Service

A few facts about what the PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION has done for the public since it was organized little more than five years ago:

IT HAS GREATLY IMPROVED THE STREET RAILWAY SERVICE.

IT HAS REDUCED THE PRICE OF GAS

IT HAS LOWERED THE COST OF ELECTRICITY.

Since 1903 PUBLIC SERVICE has expended more than $30,000,000 for improvements to its railway, gas and electric properties, many of which had to be practieally rebuilt.

PUBLIC SERVICE has built or rebuilt 156 miles of track for its street railway system.

PUBLIC SERVICE has added 860 cars of the most modern type to its rolling stock equipment.

PUBLIC SERVICE has extended its five-cent carfare zones and enlarged its transfer privileges.

PUBLIC SERICE has increased its electric lighting and railway power generating capacity from 47,700 kilowatts in 1903 to 102,900 kilowatts in 1908.

This means 137,200 horsepower available for generating electricity at the present time as against 63,600 horsepower at the time PUBLIC SERVICE acquired the properties.

PUBLIC SERVICE has put into effect throughout almost its entire system a base rate of ten cents per kilowatt hour for electricity, whereas many consumers formerly paid as high as eighteen or twenty cents.

PUBLIC SERVICE has increased its mileage of gas mains from 1,335 miles in 1903 to 2,037 miles in 1908, of which increase 232 miles were acquired by lease, and has made dollar gas a reality in all but a small portion of its territory. Some sections getting dollar gas now were paying all the way to $1.80 six years ago.

All these changes have vastly bettered the service and the public derives the benefit. And all these improvements were instituted and carried out in accordance with a well defined policy, fixed by tne company at the outset of its operations, to give the people the best possible service at the lowest feasible rates.

This policy is to be continued and the service in all three departments of railway, gas and electricity is to be made as nearly perfect and as low priced as the wise expenditure of money and intelligent effort can make it.

NEW ORGAN DEDICATED

On Behalf of Donor, Rev. Dr. Richards Presented Memorial to Crescent Ave. Church.

ARTHUR GIBSON'S RECITAL.

Inspiring Program Given on Memorial Organ After Its Acceptance by Trustee C. F. Abbott.

The members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church were delightfully entertained last evening at an organ recital in their home church by Archer Gibson, organist of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York. The occasion marked the dedication of the new church organ, previously described in these columns of The Daily Press, which was recently presented by Mrs. Elizabeth Hyde in memory of her husband, Charles Hyde. Mr. Gibson treated the congregation to music such as Plainfield has never before been fortunate enough to hear.

Every seat in the spacious edifice was filled and many who applied for tickets of admission were disappointed. After the invocation by the Rev. Dr. J. C. Bliss, a former pastor of the church, Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, Dr. Zelie's predecessor and now pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, gave a short address during which he spoke very highly of the late Charles Hyde, who was for many years a member of the church and one of the most generous givers towards the fund which made the beautiful church building a possibility and of Mrs. Hyde's motives in giving the superb instrument to the church. "An organ," said Dr. Richards, "is the most appropriate of gifts to a church." Continuing he said that his conception of heaven is a place where exquisite harmonies prevailed, a place where the very language is beautiful music. He then formally presented the organ to the church, C. F. Abbott accepting in behalf of the trustees. Mr. Abbott voiced a few very appropriate words of gratitude for the congregation. The dedication was by the pastor.

The entire program was rendered as only the master musician can and it was unusually well chosen to show the powers and the possibilities of the organ. Soft, sweet selections predominated, although there were several heavy pieces and one or two of the "musical gymnastic" order. The favorites were those which showed rich contrast between the individual organs of which the whole instrument is composed, it being especially pleasing when the echo organ, high in the rear of the church, was used in this manner. Then it was that the air and accompaniment, different in quality but richly blended, both soft and sweet, but varying in volume at the touch of the master, would seem to come from two distant instruments and would mingle in one exquisite harmony. Mr. Gibson was at his best if that can be said in music of his own composition. These selections he played from memory with rare feeling and expression:

The program follows:

Bach, Fantasia in G minor; Mendelssohn, Sonota in F, (a) Allegro moderato e senoso, (b) Adagio, (c) Recitativo, (d) Finale, allegro assai vivace; Puccini, Gibson, Rhapsody on "Madam Butterfly;" Chopin, Funeral March; Offenbach, Gibson, Barrarolle; Nevin, (a) Gondolieri, (b) Canzone amorosa, (c) Buona notte (New transcriptions); MacDowell, (a) Moonlight, (b) To a Wild Rose; Tschaikowsky, Melody; Widor, Toccata; Gibson, (a) Spring Song, (b) Liebestraum (new), (c) A Love Story (new), (d) Improvisation; Wagner, Gibson, (a) Bridal Processional, (b) Prelude 3rd Act, "Lohengrin," (c) Pilgrims' Chorus, "Tannhauser."

All numbers on this prgram were transcriptions for the modern organ by Archer Gibson.

After the recital Mr. Gibson furth er entertained a smaller company of music lovers who gathered about the organ. He did some delightful improvising and imitated the music of oriental shepherds, Scotch bagpipes, the singing of birds and other seeming incredibale things on the instrument.

Will Postpone Cooper Trial?

Although Thursday, February 4, has been fixed as the date for the trial of Floyd Cooper, of Westfield, on a charge of manslaughter for which he was indicted, it is doubtful whether the case will be called on that day for the reason that neither the State nor the defense will be ready to proceed. Counsel for the defense will on February 4 ask for an adjournmet.

Sesame Club to Meet.

The Sesame Club will meet with Mrs. Chase at 916 Putnam avenue, tomorrow morning. The subject will be "George Eliot."

ABANDONS DYING HORSE; S.P.C.A. CAUSES ARREST

Julius Siegel, who conducts a small grocery store on West Third street was arrested last night by Humane Officer William Pangborn, charged with having left a horse to die by the roadside. He was released on $150 bail furnished by his parents and the hearing set for 2 o'clock this afternoon before Justice Schnapp.

Siegel was driving the animal hitched to a grocery wagon, out the Warrenville road Monday afternoon, when it became exhausted and sank to the ground. It had lain several hours shivering in the cold, and almost drowned by the melting snow unable to raise its head out of the water, when it was discovered by a passing farmer.

The women and men of the neighborhood brought blankets and made every effort to revive the horse. William Pangborn, agent for the S. P. C. A., was notified, and took the matter in hand. Finding that the animal was beyond human aid, and suffering intensely, he caused it to be shot yesterday morning.

Siegel, on being arrested, stated that he had called a veterinary to care for his horse, and considered that having done that his duty towards the suffering beast had been fulfilled.

DR. NORMAN PROBASCO TO TALK ON CONSUMPTION

Dr. Norman Probasco will give the third in a series of lectures on the "Care of the Body" tomorrow night at the Young Women's Christian Association. Dr. Probasco's subject is "What is Consumption? How to Avoid it and Prevent its Spread. Care in contagious diseases." These lectures are free to all young women and this one should be especially well attended on account of the wide-spread and growing interest in tuberculosis. The lecture will begin at 8 o'clock and close at 8:30. Dr. Probasco will show his microscopic slides.

The term of gymnasium classes closed with an exhibition Monday evening. Registration for the new term is now open and classes will commence next week. The new class for young girls will meet at 3:30 on Monday.

ENTERTAINMENT AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

A mid-winter social and entertainment was held at the First Baptist church, last night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school officers and teachers. Every member of the school was invited and judging by the attendance they were all there and had a good time. The program of entertainment was planned by Miss Pauline Denton and she was most successful in devising ways and means to keep everyone entertained.

One of the large rooms was devoted to salamagundi games and those who played became so interested that they continued to play during the whole time alloted for the games. In another room was an art gallery, through which observation parties were conducted. They were kept busy guessing the correct names of the various articles displayed.

The rooms were attractively decorated for the occasion, southern smilax being used almost exclusively. A novel feature was the scheme whereby all the members of the main school and junior department wore a red ribbon or flower of that color. The adult Bible classes were distinguished by blue and the Home department wore white ribbons. This patriotic display of colors added much to the sociability of the occasion. During an intermission ice cream and cake were served by a committee from the school and an informal program of music was enjoyed.

Don't Forget Turkey Supper.

Don't forget the turkey supper to be given at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow and Friday night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Society. The various committees in charge have arranged for an abundant supply of turkey with all the fixins' and everyone patronizing the supper are assured of a good time.

MR. GILBERT TO PRESIDE

Former Mayor to be Chairman at the Citizens Lincoln Centenary Celebration.

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA TO PLAY

N. P. H. S. Pupils Will Recite Gettysburg Speech—Big School Chorus to Sing "Captain, My Captain."

Rapid progress is being made in the perfection of plans for the Citizens' Lincoln Centenary celebration to be held at the First Baptist church on Friday afternoon, Feb. 12, at 3 o'clock. The speakers committee waited on former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the New York Clearing House, today and he consented to preside. The orator of the day has not been announced, but Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, chairman of the speakers' committee, hopes to be able to make a selection within the course of a few days.

Dr. Henry C. Krebs is training fifty pupils of the North Plainfield High School to recite in unison the Gettysburg speech, while at the request of Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Charles L. Lewis is rehearsing a large pupils' chorus from the city and borough public schools, St. Mary's school and the private schools to sing Walt Whitman's "Captain, My Captain." Through the leader, Professor Martin A. Korff, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, twenty-five pieces, has consented to play an overture and provide any other part of the program desired.

Handsome medals bearing the Lincoln medallion will be given by the committee to all pupils taking part in the program. Exeeptive Chairman Gilbert has announced another committee. It is on decorations and consists of J. Herbert Case, chairman; William S. Tyler and Harold Serrell.

RECOVERS $450 PIN THROUGH 17 CENT ADV.

Through her advertisement in The Daily Press, a valuable diamond pin set with pearls, was returned yesterday to the owner, Mrs. H. P. Talmadge, of Belvidere avenue. It was found by Aaron Higgins, one of the special delivery messengers at the postoffice, while riding a wheel through Belvidere avenue. Not knowing the value of the pin, the boy stopped at a jewelry store on West Front street and asked the proprietor to tell him what it was worth. A value of $450 was placed on the article. The messenger delievered the pin to Postmaster E. H. Bird who, of course, reads "Plainfield's leading newspaper" and seeing the advertisement, returned the jewel. Young Higgins took the diamond to the Talmadge home and was liberally rewarded.

Halted in Long Journey.

Howard Carey, a middle-aged man who claimed to be making his way from Billings, Mont., to Salisbury, Md., was arrested on suspicion by Patrolman Nolan, last night, who saw him trying to sell a coat on North avenue. The prisoner explained to Judge Runyon that the garment had been given to him by an East End woman and that he was trying to realize a little money on it because it did not fit him. He added that he left Billings because he had met with a severe accident that crippled one hand and relatives in Salisbury would look after him. The magistrate let him go.

Two "Try-Outs" Next Week.

"Try-out" at the New Plainfield theatre again drew a crowded house, last night, and as on the previous occasion, the sale of tickets had to be stopped. The program gave great satisfaction. Because of the popularity of the "try-outs" and in order to give patrons a better chance to see them, two will be given next week, one on Tuesday and the other on Friday night. Vaudeville and pictures will hold the boards every night but Thursday and Saturday. "The Blue Mouse" will be the attraction on the former and "The Wolf" on Saturday.

Druggists Elect Officers.

The Union County Retail Druggists' Association at a meeting in the court house in Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, elected the following officers: President, Joseph G. Smith, of Rahway; vice-president, B. J. Schreiner, of Plainfield; secretary, William R. Richart, Elizabeth; treasurer, Louis P. Lamgheinz, Elizabeth.

Rev. Dr. John C. Bliss, of New York, a former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, is spending the day with friends in the city.

PUPIL STABS A TEACHER

Nomer Gray Slashed in Neck by Boy in East Side School in New York City.

THE CAUSE IS A MYSTERY.

Principal Keeps Facts from Police—The Victim Lives Here on West Front Street.

Nomer Gray, of 1138 West Front street, a teacher of the graduating class in Public School 62, Hester and Essex streets, New York, was stabbed in the right side of the face and neck yesterday afternoon. When Policeman John A. Gilmore, of the Eldridge street police station, saw a Gouverneur Hospital ambulance standing in front of the school and went to the office of Principal Roberts to learn what had happened he was told that it was no affair of the police.

Gilmore explained that he had to make a report of every ambulance case on his post or else go up on charges at headquarters. He didn't get any information, however, nor did Lieut. Goldberg, who was put on the case. Every pupil was put on his honor not to tell anything about the assault. All that Dr. Axtell, the ambulance surgeon, could say was that Mr. Gray had been slashed twice by a boy. Mr. Roberts explained that the school authorities would attend to the boy.

It was said in the neighborhood last night that Mr. Gray's assailant was Michael Becker, who lives at 75 Eldridge street. Julius Becker, his father, said:

"I don't know whether my son did it or not, but I have been told by several boys of the school that today some of the boys received letters which told them that they would not be promoted, and I believe my son received one of these letters. I understand that he then scratched the teacher on the neck."

Several of Michael's schoolmates said they knew the boy was not to be promoted and that that was the reason for the attack.

Efforts to find Mr. Gray last night and today proved unavailing. A reporter for The Daily Press called at his home, but all the members of the family were away. A neighbor said that Mrs. Gray had been stopping in New York for some days and that Mr. Gray in consequence had been coming home at irregular intervals, occasionally sleeping here and dining elsewhere.

TWO PRESENTATIONS AT P. H. S. CELEBRATION

The Plainfield High School pupils today are rejoicing over a thoughtful and most appropriate gift made to the institution by former Mayor Alexander Gilbert. It is a large and handsomely designed bronze tablet containing the famous Gettysburg speech of Abraham Lincoln, the centennial of whose birth will be obervged by the nation on February 12.

This memorial tablet, which is mounted on a walnut base, will be unveiled on the occasion of the Lincoln centenary celebration at the high school auditorium on Thursday afternoon, February 11. At that demonstration the grammar school pupils will join with the high chool pupils at the auditorium. W. E. Pulsifer, of New York, will deliver an oration on the Martyr-President. The school will sing "Captain, My Captain" as well as a number of patriotic airs. The Girls' Athletic Association will present a huge and orante picture of the St. Gauden's statute of Lincoln at Chicago, after the formal presentation of the Gettysburg speech tablet.

Miss Sallie Reavis a Bride.

Miss Sallie Reavis, of Virginia, and Clint Hoffler, of North Carolina, were married last night at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Powell, of South Second street. Rev. F. D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel, performed the ceremony. The bride was handsomely gowned and carried a boquet of bride roses. The bridesmaids were the Misses Gilberthea I. Reaves and Eva Anderson. The groom was attended by John Smith and Arthur Ross. A large number of guests, including several from out of town, witnessed the ceremony. Supper was served after the ceremony. The couple will reside here, where the groom has been employed for several years by a local coal firm.

Will Ride for Benefit Fund.

Miss Adele von Ohl will ride her famous pony "Aristocrat" for the benefit of the earthquake sufferers at the Central Park Riding Academy tomorrow night. The affair is to be a benefit performance.

KILLED AFTER FUNERAL

Mrs. Jacob Hirdman, Returning from This City, Meets Death at Port Morris.

CAUGHT UNDER FREIGHT CAR.

Victim Was an Aunt of Mrs. George W. Gaddis—Grand-daughters Had Narrow Escape.

A sad ending to a trip to this city where she came to attend the funeral of a relative, was the tragic death of Mrs. Jacob Hirdman, of Port Morris, on Monday night, while she was returning home. She was first pinned down by the wheel of a freight car under which she attempted to crawl and then ground to pieces beneath the wheel by another jolt from a shifting engine. The fatality occurred in the sight of Mrs. Hirdman's granddaughter, Mrs. Viola Johnson.

Mrs. Hirdman came to Plainfield to attend the funeral service of Louisa E. Gaddis, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gaddis, of Regent street, which was held on Sunday. She left here some time Monday for her home.

Upon reaching Netcong, the nearest railroad station, Mrs. Hirdman sought the dangerous passage to avoid making a long detour. She was fifty-seven years old. The accident occurred in the Port Morris yard of the Lackawanna railroad opposite the postoffice. Mrs. Hirdman was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Frank Ike, of Port Morris, who had also been to Plainfield. The former is an aunt to Mrs. George W. Gaddis.

In order to reach Port Morris it was necessary to cross about ten tracks or walk three miles around to a crossing. One of these tracks is always filled with cars at night, and residents of the row are obliged in passing to or from home to go under or over the cars, which are moved only at infrequent intervals.

FARBMAN SELLS SALOON TO ITS FORMER OWNER

Morris Farbman, who was convicted by the grand jury last week of keeping a disorderly house, has sold the saloon on Somerset street, which figured in the court proceedings, to Charles Jensen, from whom Farbman purchased it a year ago.

The place is now closed and an application has been made by Jensen for a transfer of the license, but it is not likely that this will be granted. The borough authorities will oppose every effort to reopen the place. They declare that not only is a saloon undesirable in that neighborhood but there is not sufficient business there for a legitimate place; that sooner or later it would revert to the kind of patronage which got Farbman into trouble. The officials have the sympathy of the entire borough in the matter, and the granting of a license to any one for a saloon in the old Arlington hotel building will stir up a hot fight.

EAGLES AT PERTH AMBOY INSTALLATION AND BANQUET

Twenty members of Freedom Castle, No. 42, the Eagles, went to Perth Amboy last night to attend the public installation of the officers of the lodge there. Delegations were present from Asbury Park, Spring Lake and Trenton, making a gathering of more than two hundred in all.

District Deputy Moons substituted for the grand chief who was unable to be present and the installation ceremony was performed by a committee of grand officers, comprising Past Chiefs Kenney, Allen, Vail and Miles, all of this city.

Speeches were made by Grand Vice-Chief Horace J. Martin, of Plainfield, and Grand Master of Records Clark, of Trenton. The entertainment which followed the instal lation was pronounced first-class and the supper simply great.

In the City Court.

Frances McCarthy and Samuel Herman, of New York, were arraigned in the city court, this morning, charged by Detective-Sergeant Flynn with peddling without a license. They pleaded guilty but Judge Runyon suspended sentence as both men are in poor health, Herman being well advanced in the first stages of a pulmonary complaint.

RETURNS FROM TRAVELS TO RUN AFOUL OF POLICE

John Mottley, a former well known North Plainfield resident, dropped into town yesterday after a year's absence during which he has undergone some great experiences. He began meeting old friends and late last night Patrolman Nolan found him helplessly intoxicated. He was arraigned in the city court this morning, but when he related his troubles Judge Runyon let him go with a warning to climb on the water wagon.

Mottley, who is in his sixty-fifth year, was willed a piece of property by his wife at her death in the borough a year ago. He converted it into cash for the purpose of taking a trip to Ireland and left Plainfield with the intention of sailing from Philadelphia. He struck up some chance acquaintances in the Quaker City and after a few social drinks displayed the roll of bills that was to defray his European trip. When he woke up—a few hours later—he didn't have enough money left to buy the arm-hole of a vest and struck out for Chicago to begin life anew. Nobody here heard any more from him until he blew into town yesterday. He declares he had a great time in the West but it's no place for a white man and hereafter he stays in Plainfield.

SEMINARY INSTRUCTOR GIVES FINE RECITAL.

Miss Jeanie Rogers May, of the Plainfield Seminary, gave a delightfuly piano recital Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry de Forest on Park avenue. Miss May always fills her audience with enthusiasm when she plays music such as the Tschaikowsky Meditation, the acceptable rendering of which depends upon mastery of tone and rhythm.

For the past two summers, Miss May has been studying with Mager Swayne, of Paris, a distinguished teacher of the Leschetizky method. Those who have followed her music closely attributed to this fact the almost perfect delicacy and finish with which she played The Arabesque of Debussy and L'Alouette of Balakirew.

The program follows:

Sonata, op. 27, No. 2, Adagio Sostenuto, Allegretto, Presto Agitato, Beethoven; Romance, Faure; Arabesque, Debussy; Nocturne, Scriabine; L'Alouette, Balakirew; Meditation, Tschaikowsky; Etude Ballad, Chopin.

Backaches Never Come If Kidneys Are Well

Do not blame your back if it is constantly annoying you with aches and pains; ten to one sick kidneys are at the root of your torture. The whole system's welfare depends on a proper working of the kidneys, and once they fail the least bit to drain the blood of all impurities there is a very natural revolt on the part of nature. Instead of rich, red, healthy blood coursing through the veins there is a poisonous admixture.

Warnings are sent out post haste in the form of backache, dizziness, occasional nausea, pallor or puffiness of the face, urinary troubles and so on. Make the most of such warnings and cure the sick kidneys so they will do their work as the Creator intended.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Jiggs Donahue of the White Sox for George Stone is a trade practically agreed on by Messrs. Comiskey and McAleer.

The Rev. Billy Sunday picks an All-America baseball team as follows: Catchers—Ewing, Kling, Kelly and Bresnahan; pitchers—Clarkson, Mathewson, Galvin, Walsh, Breitenstein and Brown; first base, Anson; second base, McPhee; shortstop, Wagner; third base, Denny; left field, Delehanty; centre field, Lange; right field, Cobb; utility infielder, Lajoie; utility outfielder, Donlin. The team would be stronger with Lajoie the regular at second base.

George Stallings, manager of the New York Americans, arrived at the New York American League headquarters Monday from his Georgia plantation. Stallings will be north about two weeks and then will go to his cotton fields again to stay there until his players report in Macon for their spring training. The players will leave New York on March 2 for the South. Stallings says they will go by rail. Before he left Macon this time the Highlander boss had the diamond on which the New Yorks will practice sodded. It was a skin diamond, but the field is very level and a good one for the purpose.

Contracts will be sent out to the New York players within the next few days. Stallings said there was nothing new regarding Elberfield. "I have had letters from the Kid," he continued, "in which he says he is quite willing to play in New York again, but whether he will be kept or traded is something I don't know about as yet. As a matter of fact we have so many players that it won't be an easy matter to make a final selection. We have two outfields and two infields and a lot of pitchers, and it looks as if the catching department is the only one that isn't in doubt.

"I see that no account has been taken of Engle by those who have been speculating on my outfield. Engle may be found in the outfield. He played third base for Newark, but he is a natural outfielder and a strong hitter and base runner. Willie Keeler hasn't stopped playing the outfield yet, either. Demmitt, Cree, Hemphill, Conroy and McIlveen all have a chance. There isn't a man in the country who has anything on Demmitt in throwing, and he played a good outfield all the time last year except in his last game in Providence.

PRICE THAW!

Profits Melt Away On All Winter Goods.

Every day we come nearer to the Springtime our profits on heavier goods and garments melt away. There has never been such a price thaw as has been experienced here this season, for we never were more determined to have a clear field for operations when the new season starts. You may not understand how it pays us to sacrifice profits, and often a good part of the cost on goods that might be held until another season. But it is the Big Store's way of doing things, and as you profit by buying now so do we profit by selling, even tho our gain is not an immediate one.

The present is a great time for securing bargains—surely the best time of all the year—as you will agree when you scan the offerings we make below:

Unprecedented Price Making on

Women's Suits and Dresses

More than half the stock we started this clearance sale with has found new owners, and every purchaser has profited immensely by securing high grade suits and dresses at prices so far below the worth of the garments as to be little short of the ridiculous. Many bought for the materials alone; some secured a whole dress just to get a skirt. Many, apt with needle and scissors, will remake some of the fancy dresses that are being sold for little or nothing; others will employ dressmakers to refashion some that they may be useful this Spring and Summer.

Those who buy now pay still lower prices, for as the stock diminishes the bargains become all the greater because the assortment, not being so full, makes selling harder, and we are going to make the prices still more tempting.

Suits and Dresses worth up to $12.50 now go at $4.50

Suits and Dresses worth up to $39.50 now go at $7.99

Suits and Dresses worth up to $49 will be marked $11.98

Suits and Dresses worth up to $69 now go at $13.98

Suits and Dresses worth up to $80 now go at $18.50

Fancy Dresses worth up to $225 now go at from $9.50 to $95

REPUBLICANS WANT ELIZABETH OFFICES

Elizabeth wants a board of four commissioners to manage the police and fire departments and wants a Board of Public Works of four members, all to be appointed by the Mayor.

Assemblyman Schwartz, of Union, last night at Trenton, introduced bills amending the Paterson police and fire board and Board of Works law so that cities the size of Elizabeth may take advantage of it.

In Elizabeth at present there is a fire board of five members, a holdover from the late Democratic city administration. Be it remembered that Elizabeth hasn't taken advantage of civil service reform and there are good jobs at stake. There is no police board and so the Republicans are to kill off the fire board and secure a new board of the new Mayor's selection to have charge of both police and fire departments. The board would be bipartisan, but naturally the administration would place its friends in office.

The amendments proposed are general, providing that any city of from 50,000 to 200,00 persons may take advantage of the Paterson act.

Used Roosevelt's Name.

Mrs. A. Siess, who is being sued in the Elizabeth District Court by the National Bureau of Literature and Art of Washington for the recovery of money for books which they sold her and for which she has refused to pay, declared today that the agent who sold her the books, which were for her son, said that President Roosevelt had heard of her son's brightness and would send him $50 as a result. Others, she claimed, were inveigled into buying the books under like statements by the agent.

Testing Jersey Automobile Law.

A test case of the New Jersey automobile law was begun yesterday in the Supreme Court by Peter Backes, of Trenton, counsel for Richard Johnson, who is the agent of a well known automobile company. Johnson was recently convicted for running an auto without a license, in violation of the laws of this State. Claiming that this law is unconstitutional, Johnson, through his attorney, has applied for a writ of certiorari to review the conviction.

In a fight with one of her boarders in a house which she conducts in Linden Township, Martha Jackson, aged forty, colored, was badly slashed by the man on the arms and head with a razor. LEGAL BATTLE FOR "OLD SLEUTH'S" MONEY

The Halsey will case, which was to have been continued yesterday in the Orphans' Court at Elizabeth, was postponed by Judge Atwater because his attention is being occupied at present by the Marone conspiracy trial. The Halsey case is a prominent one, as it involves the fortune left by Harlan P. Halsey, the writer of the famous "Old Sleuth" detective stories. More than $50,000 in extensive real estate holdings and securities were left by Henrietta Halsey, the widow of "Old Sleuth," when she died in Westfield last August, and it is her will against which a caveat was filed by Lewis H. Halsey, of Cranford, her son.

In contesting the will, Halsey is represented by William R. Wilson. Under the will, Rena Isabelle Halsey, a daughter, receives the bulk of the estate, and she is directed to care for Harry A. Halsey, another son, during his lifetime. The daughter is represented in the case by Raymond T. Parrot.

The grounds on which the will is contested are that Mrs. Halsey at the time of her death, according to her son Lewis, did not have sufficient mental capacity to draw the instrument, and that undue influence was used. While several witnesses have already been examined in the case, it is understood that the most important part of the testimony of the caveator is yet to come.

Harlan Page Halsey, whose fortune is now being disputed, was probably one of the cleverest detective story writers in the country. He acquired a considerable fortune from his efforts.

The greatest rival of Mr. Halsey's "Old Sleuth" was probably "Nick Carter," whose exploits and activities in detecting criminals were recorded from the pen of Frederick Marmaduke Van Rensselaer Dey. It was "nip and tuck" between "Old Sleuth" and "Nick Carter" for many years as to which was the greater detective, but the death of "Old Sleuth" several years ago put an end to the rivalry.

NEWARK'S EAGLES TO DEDICATE HOME

Newark Eagles will honor the memory of George Washington by dedicating their new home at 15 West Park street, Newark, on February 22, the natal day of the "father of his country," at which time Plainfield's aerie and others will be their guests. All arrangements have been completed for the ceremonies, which are expected to be the most imposing in the history of Eagledom in New Jersey. The Eagles will expend $10,000 in remodeling the lodgeroom alone, and new furniture will be installed throughout.

A majority of the New Jersey aeries heard from thus far have signified their intention of being accompanied by bands, so that the street parade in the afternoon is expected to be no ordinary affair. The aeries of the following places will be in line: Plainfield, Elizabeth, Phillipsburg, Jersey City, Paterson, Hoboken, Morristown, Dover, Montclair, Perth Amboy, Passaic, New York, Washington Heights of New York and New Haven, Conn.

Grand Worthy President Monahan, of Philadelphia, and all grand worthy officers, including Past Grand Worthy President Theodore A. Bell, the man who presided at the last convention which nominated William J. Bryan, and former Congressman Frank Hering, of South Bend, Ind., who was with Senator Kern, candidate for Vice-President, during his last visit to Newark, are expected to be present.

Arrangements are being completed for banquets at the Holland House and Koch's Hotel, at Newark. There will be string music and bands at the Eagles' home during the afternoon and evening of February 22, and the public will be welcomed. Lunch and refreshments will be served to all visitors.

BIG CROWD AT CONCERT

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra Gives Splendid Musical Treat to Well Filled House.

MISS GESSWEIN, THE SOLOIST.

Soprano Singer Wins Applause—Was Organization's Thirty-first Entertainment in Auditorium.

Another festival of music was enjoyed last night by an audience which filled the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. The popular association orchestra, with M. A. Korff conductor, gave its thirty-first concert and was assisted by Miss Laura Gesswein, as soprano soloist.

The program was begun with a march, "The Circuit," by Losey, followed by an overture, "La Reine Noir," White, both of which were heartily applauded. The rendition of the new intermezzo, "Sweet Violets," Powell, was especially well received.

When Miss Gesswein appeared on the platform she was greeted with a storm of hand clapping, and it is needless to say, was heartily encored on the completion of her song, "Ich liebe Dich." She then sang "But You and I" to the great delight of the audience, which again burst forth in applause. She was accompanied by J. E. Skiff with the piano.

One of the most appreciated numbers of the program was the instrumental trio, "Angel's Serenade," Braga, by G. Spier, violin; H. Smith, 'cello, and C. Spier, piano. This was followed by an orchestra selection, Egyptian intermezzo, "Zallah," Tobani. A characteristic selection, "Noisy Bill," Losey, was a decided hit, and completed the first part of the program.

After a short intermission, the "Red Feather," de Koven, was given; then came "Sunbeams and Shadows," Keiser; and the dance, "New Barn," Blanke-Belcher. Miss Gesswein again captivated the house by singing "Give Me Thine Eyes," Worden, and was obliged to respond with an encore. J. E. Skiff was at the piano.

The orchestra rendered the novelette, "Fascination," Powell; valse-elegante, "Enchantress," Blanke, and ended the evening's entertainment with a march, "The Millionaires," Henninger.

The orchestra is composed of these men: Violins, G. Spier, G. Mitchell, I. W. Binninger, C. T. Fisher, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, F. A. Broschart, A. A. Moser, G. Simons, G. W. Comes, C. Heaume, A. B. Drake, G. Cubberly, J. Manning, T. Young, E. Thomas, I. Kahn, G. Cashman; 'cello, Dr. Berg, H. B. Smith, bass, Dr. Buchanan, J. A. C. Byer; flutes, W. H. Sampson, E. P. Wheeler, E. Faber; clarinets, N. S. Wardner, F. Magne, C. Lane; cornets, W. Frazee, J. Emory, E. Guest, C. Engelhardt, Mr. Loizeaux; trombone, David Lawson; drums and traps, Philip Hapeny; piano, Edward Spier; M. A. Korff, conductor.

THE FORUM.

Police Regulations.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In behalf of the police of Plainfield I would say from personal observation we should have more consideration for the welfare of the men who protect our lives and property. An eight hour day with one day off in ten instead of working from nine to twelve hours with one day off in thirty; and a shift from night to day duty would be beneficial both to health and spirits to the men on the force, and at the same time not be unreasonable.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE TO HONOR AGED MEMBERS.

The sixty-fifth annual session of the grand division, Sons of Temperance of New Jersey, will meet today at Trenton.

About one hundred delegates will be present from various parts of the State. The session will be presided over by Grand Patriarch Grafton E. Day, of Collingswood. The annual election of officers will be held and considerable other business transacted.

Excelsior Division No. 4, the oldest in New Jersey, at its rooms last night, tendered a reception to Most Worthy Patriarch of North America Joseph McCarthy, of Toronto, Canada, the head of the order. He will be the guest of honor at today's convention. Grand Worthy Patriarch Day and Past Grand Worth Patriarch Edward K. Drake, of Lincoln Division, No. 27, of Elizabeth, were also guests last night of Excelsior Division. Mr. Drake then celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his joining Excelsior Division, he residing in Trenton for some years before removing to Elizabeth. There was also present at last evening's welcome to prominent and old members of the Sons of Temperance, the venerable Henry B. Howell, of Trenton, the only survivor of those who founded Excelsior Division, and who is now in his ninety-second year.

EDISON IS MAROONED ON NEW JERSEY ROAD.

Thomas A. Edison has found that steering an automobile over certain unimproved Jersey roads is a little more difficult than being an electrical wizard. The famous inventor took a specialist in his touring car to Burlington to see Thomas Willard, a relative who is ill.

Through some oversight of the Board of Freeholders, of Burlington county, the poorest roads in the county cluster most thickly about this city, and it was on one of these highways the Edison machine got into trouble. For three hours efforts to get it out of the clay into which it settled were futile.

Finding the electrical magic had lost its powers in this instance, the party were compelled to call upon nearby farmers to dig out the wheels before the car could proceed. Farmers are now wondering whether a long distance electric spark from the Edison laboratories will infuse action into the next meeting of the county board.

Newspaper Men to Confer.

A midwinter gathering of New Jersey newspaper men will be held in the Hotel Stirling, Trenton, on the afternoon of February 8. The meeting will begin at 12:30 o'clock, with luncheon an hour later. The object is to discuss the merits of a bill to be introduced in the Legislature for the purpose of increasing the compensation allowed for the publication of legal notices. It is probable that the date and location for holding the annual excursion of the New Jersey Editorial Association will be selected. Governor Fort and Attorney-General Wilson have accepted invitations to be present, and a number of Assemblymen also will attend.

Sprained Ankle While Shopping.

Mrs. Winfield Schomp, of West Front street, is experiencing considerable trouble from straining the muscles of her ankle, the result of a misstep while shopping in a New York department store one day last week. She is not yet able to bear her weight on the foot.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

One of the most successful dances of the season was the shirt waist dance, held last night in Excelsior Hall by a number of the young people from here and Plainfield. The floor was crowded with merry dancers from 9 o'clock until near the mid-night hour, when refreshments were served. After a short intermission dancing was again resumed and continued until 1:30. The hall was tastefully decoraed with bunting, the effect being very pretty. Suhr's orchestra furnished music for dancing. The committee who arranged the pleasant social treat was composed of Mrs. George Harper, Mrs. Charles Ketchum and Mrs. Robert Gow.

Rev. Franklin Mathiews, pastor of the Baptist church, who has been ill for several weeks, is improving slowly, although still confined to his room.

Thomas Sellers spent yesterday fishing at Rahway. The result of the day's sport netted nearly ten pounds of suckers.

The B. Y. P. U. hold a straw-ride tonight, the start being made from the home of Mrs. Edward L. Hand on Park avenue.

Miss Marion Goodwin has recovered from a severe attack of the grip and has returned to her position in New York.

Mrs. George L. Dunn and sister, Miss Cora Miller, have returned from a visit with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Sr., is improving from her recent severe illness.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The ruins of the mill stopped smoking yesterday. They have been smouldering for just twenty days, almost three weeks. The fire occurred on Wednesday, January 6.

A horse owned by David Blackford was stolen on Monday night from its stable. The horse was a big gray.

Mrs. Melvin Shrope and Mrs. Edward Alexander are visiting friends in Easton, Pa.

Miss Alice McCaffrey, of Elizabeth, is visiting her sister, Mrs. P. F. Kaine.

SENATOR FRELINGHUYSEN MAKES VIGOROUS DENIAL

Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, last night denied emphatically that he had any intention of trying to withhold Senate news from the papers or even asked that the Governor do so, as he was credited yesterday with having done. It was stated then that the Senator went to Fovernor Fort and asked that he keep the names of his appointees secret until they had been acted on by the Senate when that body would give them out. The Governor refused to do so, it was stated. What actually took place was merely a request for information, according to Senator Frelinghuysen. He said:

"I simply went to the Governor's secretary and asked for my own information if it was customary to give nominations to the newspapers before the seal was broken in the Senate. It is outrageous that a Senator should be misrepresented because he sought information. There was no move to prevent reporters from getting information."

Surprise Mrs. Van Winkle.

One of the most enjoyable parties held in the borough this season was a surprise given to Mrs. Nicholas Van Winkle at her home on Somerset street last night. About seventy people were present, including a number from other cities. The affair was arranged by Miss Lillian Van Winkle and Miss Elizabeth Kirch.

Will Exhibit Auto Apparatus.

The Councilmanic fire committee has arranged with one of the leading manufacturers to give a demonstration of an auto combination chemical and hose wagon at 4 o'clock this afternoon on North avenue.

SAYS MILK STANDARD IS NOT HIGH ENOUGH

The inefficiency of the State laws regarding the inspection of milk for home consumption was the basis of some severe remarks Monday night by Dr. Joseph B. Harrison, president of the Westfield Board of Health. His rap at existing methods was delivered at a meeting of the Woman's Club held in the Presbyterian chapel, his topic being "How Women Can Aid the Board of Health." He said:

"One of the most important sanitary questions is the milk of the community. Being the principal food of infants, invalids and convalescents, its purity should be beyond question. Perhaps it would surprise you to be told that the State laws are sadly deficient in this matter. I hazard the opinion that no baby can be reared to be strong and healthy upon milk conforming only to the State requirement. All efforts on the part of the medical profession and of health boards 'to procure State legislation that will insure satisfactory products, have proved futile not only in this but in all States.

"So important does the medical profession regard the subject that in several States district medical societies have appointed milk commissions with a view to improving the quality of milk. The cmomissioners have formed a national association which meets annually."

The speaker urged educating the public to the whole question, and called attention to the need of sanitary instruction. The most stringent legislation, he said, avails little if the education of the people is neglected.

The meeting primarily was called with a view of eliciting public support for village improvement work. Mrs. T. D. Bunce, chairman of the committee on social work, outlined plans for the organization of a boys' club, to keep the rowdyish element from the streets. Other speakers were John J. Savitz, Dr. Theodore Harvey and Mrs. Arthur ranger.

ICE CAKE DEATH TRAP FOR CRANFORD SCHOOLBOY

Full of pride in his prowess at safety guiding an ice cake bearing himself and three companions into the deepest part of the Rahway river at Cranford yesterday, twelve-year-old Douglass Myers leaped to another floating cake, which parted, allowing him to sink to death in the river.

His disappearance was so sudden that his three companions for a moment stood terror-stricken in the centre of their fragile craft. Then with cries for help that were not heard at once, the boys endeavored to pole their way to safety, but the current proved too strong. In the party were Charles Drake, John Osborne and Charles Wethered, all between ten and twelve years of age.

Warned by the cracking of the cake on which they stood that it might any moment let them into the water, with all their garments on, the boys decided to risk a swim to shore, after divesting themselves of shoes and all superfluous clothing. Myers was the only one of the four who could not swim.

When the current swept them nearer the shore, the boys seized the opportunity and plunged in. They swam safely through the broken ice and one by one crawled to the bank, when they spread the alarm about their drowned companion.

The Cranford Canoe Club has its quarters near Springfield avenue bridge, and a boat was soon launched from there bearing a searching party. It required an hour's work, however, before Myer's body was found. The body was taken to the home of the Wethered boy and there County Physician Westcott viewed the body and granted a burial certificate. The parents of the drowned boy made arrangements to have the body removed to their home.

Lecturer at N. P. H. S.

George N. Cross, M., gave an illustrated lecture yesterday to all the English history classes of the Somerset school. The subject was, "Sixty-four Years a Queen."

JERSEY IS TOO POOR TO SEND ITS TROOPS.

The House members of the joint appropppriation committee at Trenton will not report Colonel Austen Colgate's bill to set aside $20,000 for sending national guardsmen to the Taft inauguration until after it has been considered at a meeting of both Senate and Assembly members. Colonel Colgate yesterday afternoon consented to a cut in his figures to $17,500.

The State's poor these days and there is a deficit staring the officials in the face. A lot of unfavorable comment was heard on the Colgate bill among the committee members when it was taken up.

HUGH F. FOX'S ADDRESS

President of the State Board of Children's Guardians Speaks at Washington.

AT A BIG CONFERENCE.

Convocation on the Care of Dependent Children Hears Plainfielder's Views.

Following are the salient features of the address delivered by Hugh F. Fox, president of the New Jersey Board of Children's Guardians and president of the Plainfield Charities Organization Society at the Conference on the Care of Dependent Children at Washington, D. C., yesterday, his subject being "Should the State inspect the work of all child-caring agencies including both institutions and home-finding societies:"

"For the past fifteen years, people who deal with dependent children have thrashed this question out, at the annual meetings of the National Conference of Charities and Correction, and at many of the State and local conferences.

"Inspection or supervision is advocated upon the following grounds: The prevention and correction of abuses, the check upon irresponsible power, the need of assurance of fitness for the work involved, the prescribing of rules for the conduct of the work, and the raising of the general standard of efficiency, all of which imply concern for the welfare of the child, rather than concern for the protection of the public against imposition.

"The objections to such inspection or supervision are all carefully qualified, and are based upon the fear of the possible political character of the State Board charged with such duty, and the danger attending the exercise of public authority by erratic individuals, and the fear of official fussiness and red tape.

"We are all agreed as to the right and duty of the State to supervise institutions and societies which are in receipt of public funds. The question as to inspection of private agencies, which are supported entirely by private contributions seems to resolve itself into one of practical utility. We are all agreed as to the splendid work which has been done by private agencies, such as Children's Aid Societies, Societies to Prevent Cruelty to Children, and orphan asylums, but we might draw upon a common fund of experience for hundreds of instances of abuse, both by public and private agencies. It should be remembered that even a private institution supported entirely by voluntary contributions, is in a certain sense the recipient of public funds. That is to say, if it is a charitable institution, its taxes are remitted, and it receives gratis the service which the rest of us have to buy with our taxes.

"The exploitation of the child has not been entirely confined to whose who would profit by its labors in industries. Societies have been formed by needy and seedy individuals which have traded in children for selfish ends, and the day of baby farming has not yet passed away. Even reputable societies have been known to farm boys out for night work in factories, and for employment in other occupations such as racing, which are open to serious question from the standpoint of environment. We have even heard of some institutions which have developed their industries to such a successful point that the labor of the children has been an important consideration, and has led them to work the children long hours, under thoroughly unhealthy conditions. The children have been treated as though they were serving a sentence at hard labor. Of course, all of these are most exceptional cases, and yet I suppose that every man and woman who has had much experience in caring for dependent children, has come in direct personal contact with some such case as I have described. The home-finding and child-placing method of dealing with such children is now commonly accepted as the best method of dealing with them, because in a natural way it restores the children to their normal place as members of the human families, which are the units of our civilization. But it is a method which is peculiarly open to abuse and which needs the utmost care and watchfulness for its safeguards.

"I question the wisdom of handling dependent children through any national agency, or even through an agency which is doing an interstate business, unless it operates under State authority and direction, in each State. Take the case of a society which, in the course of ten years may scatter several thousand children through a territory covering an area of a thousand miles. Let us suppose that such a society, for financial or other reasons, should be discontinued. What happens to the children? Can it reinsure the human risks for which it is responsible with other agencies? If a receiver was appointed, would the receiver undertake to recognize the claims of these children for protection during their minority, at the hands of the parent society? Would it be anybody's business to find out whether records of these children had been kept, and what was their present status? Do you not know of instances of this kind which have really constituted wholesale abandonment of dependent children by benevolent agencies? Or again, take the case of societies which are organized for the prevention of children against cruelty and abuse, and which, according to our careless custom, have been granted extraordinary police powers, and even magisterial authority. There is no question that such societies have done an enormous amount of good. Can we say that these powers are not at times abused, and should there not be some provision for the instant remedy of such abuse?

"I could tell you of cases in which under the operation of the fee system, agents of such a society have co-operated with a crooked justice of the peace and have made arrests and conducted prosecutions for the sake of the fees involved. Of course inspection will not entirely prevent such abuses. We know that even in State institutions, which are subject to inspection, grave evils sometimes occur, but they do not go unchecked and the remedy for them is soon found. I think that a large part of the objections to public inspection of private institutions and agencies could be removed by a careful definition and limitation of the meaning of "inspection." When you talk of inspecting the work of such organizations, it may be interpreted to mean the actual visitation by the State of children who have been placed in families, which seems to me to be most unwise. What the State should do is to make sure that the children who are placed in families are visited and kept track of, so that the particular agency may have a constant record of the condition of each child. In the case of an institution, the inspection should be sufficient to satisfy the State as to the high character and conduct of the institution. The State should make sure that the buildings are sanitary, and that they are provided with proper fire escapes, and that the children are being comfortably fed and clothed, and given instruction in conformity with the school law. Personally, I believe that every child-caring agency should be chartered by the State and under the terms of their charter, the agencies should be required to make an intelligent annual report to the State. The State should have the right to suspend or abolish the charter after thorough investigation and a hearing, and the State should have the right to order such an investigation and compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses. At the same time, the State's inspection should be carefully defined and limited, so that the evils and abuses of officialism could be avoided.

"I don't think we need waste time in considering the question as to the right of the State to interfere on behalf of the child. The question is one of practical utility. If the advantages of State inspection are thoroughly demonstrated, reputable agencies, whether public or private, will be only too glad to get the benefit of it. After all, it is a case of the end justifying the means.

OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of Plainfield Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;
Have too much to do.
They tell about it in many aches and apins—
Backache, sideache, headache,
Early symptoms of kidney ills.
Diabetes, Bright's disease follow.
A Plainfield citizen tells here a certain cure.

J. H. Stewart, 313 Arlington avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "An acute pain in the region of my kidneys was a prominent feature of my kidney trouble. My back also ached and I had cold sweats. I finally became so bad that I had to stop work, but even then I did not improve. I at length commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills and three boxes stopped my aches and pains and restored my kidneys to a healthy condition. That was in 1905 and up to this time no attack of the trouble has ever reappeared. In return for the benefit I derived from Doan's Kidney Pills, I am glad to endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel," the most popular and surely one of the most entertaining of the really delightful series of travel-talks by Fred Niblo, will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The ever increasing popularity of these zig-zag journeys around the world, is evidenced by the fact that mail orders for the London travel-talk are far in excess of those received for any other of the series. In this offering, Mr. Niblo presents a wonderful tour of a wonderful town, interesting to those who have been to the world's metropolis, instructing to those who contemplate going, and delightfully refreshing to tourists who have recently returned. Like Africa, Egypt, Italy and Russia, each of which was so enthusiastically received and accorded the emphatic appreciation of the press, this, the fifth travel-talk, will be graphically illustrated with several hundred colored views, interspersed with panoramic photographs, augmented by an elaborate series of life-like motion pictures.

Fred Niblo.

The recent prosecutions by the government of certain corporations under the Sherman anti-trust law forms the basis for one of the most startling scenes in the forthcoming production of Lem B. Parker's powerful new American drama, "Married for Money," which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night. The story is one of present day incidents and characters and promises to rank with such well-known products of American authors as "The Man from Home," "The Man of the Hour" and "The Lion and the Mouse." To all lovers of the drama, the presentation in this city should prove more than ordinarily interesting, as the play has been received with marked favor throughout the East.

For a number of days this season Tommy Donnelly, one of the principal comediens with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, worked along with the show creating shouts of laughter everywhere he appeared but somehow with all the "hits" he had been making, he failed to see his picture in the dailies. Then he complained. He said that the other fellows were getting famous by just having their pictures in the paper and he by working. By some mistake no "cut" of "Tomma" as Billy Clark calls him, had been made. And so an order went in and only last week Tommy's picture all "done in copper," came along and the above is the first showing the funny comedien has had this season. Tommy Donnelly will be in Plainfield with the Al. G. Field minstrels next Saturday, afternoon and night. If one wants a hearty laugh all that is necessary is to hear him sing "Let Him Who Is Without Sin Cast the First Stone."

Tommy Donnelly with A. G. Field's Minstrels, at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, matinee and night.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will engage in a quoit match with Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., tomorrow night after the business session.

Plainfield Forty-One Years Ago...

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

March 26, 1868.

We hear complaints made regarding the management of the Public School in this village. We shall be pleased to receive communications touching on that subject. If evils do exist they should be exposed and a remedy applied.

We notice that a handsome iron fence is in process of erection in front of the M. E. church, of this place. It is a great improvement.

The bill incorporating the Dime Savings' Institution of Plainfield has passed to a third reading in the Senate.

On Monday last we noticed two large beeves tied to a post in front of Mr. J. V. Schenck's meat shop on Front street, which he contemplates cutting up into steaks for the benefit of the public. We could not ascertain their weight but they were "whoppers." Give "Joe" a call, and secure a piece of the mammoth beeves.

We mark with great satisfaction the election by the Legislature of our friend John H. VanWinkle, as Commissioner of Deeds for Plainfield. That is an appointment eminently proper to be made, as he comes squarely up to the good old Jeffersonian standard of capability and worth.

New Firm—Among the many changes which we have noticed in this place to take effect on the 1st of April, is that of the firm of Walker & Moffett, who have sold out their grocery store to William E. Gardner and Joseph Cutter, two enterprising young men who are well-known to our citizens. The firm name will hereafter be known as "Gardner & Cutter." Success to them.

The Postoffice has been removed to the new and commodius building of Mr. Woodland in Cherry street. The number of boxes have been largely increased, and we have now a postoffice as it should be. Mr. Williams, Newsdealer, has one side of the room, where can be had all kinds of literature.

We were shown a letter a few days ago from our friend, John Limbarger, Esq., of San Jose, Illinois, in which he makes mention of a shooting party in the vicinity of his place killing one thousand and sixty geese, brant and duck in three days—How is that "Uncle Bill?" That beats Porter's Pond! We understand that our friend Lyman C. Spencer, who went out west on a shooting tour a few weeks since proposed visiting San Jose. We hope he has got there in time to participate in the sport before the game is all gone.

It is proposed to lay out a new street, commencing at the northerly end of Second street, Plainfield, and to be a continuation of the same, to run along parallel with the Railroad, to cross Terrell road about 200 feet from the culvert, on the westerly side and terminating in the Darby road, near the residence of L. H. K. Smalley, Esq. This if done, will open a beautiful avenue from Plainfield to Scotch Plains, and will offer many very available and desirable building sites. Let it be done.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Citizen's Building and Loan Association, of Plainfield, held at Laing's hall, on Monday evening, Jan. 6, 1868, Zachariah Webster was appointed chairman, and J. B. Coward, secretary. After a reading of the names of the stockholders by Miss R. Pope, the following persons were unanimously elected a Board of Directors for the ensuing year: Zachariah Webster, Joseph B. Coward, Elias R. Pope, Oliver Runyon, Dr. John C. Sutphen, William C. Ayers, James F. Hubbard, Edward P. Thorn, Jonas H. Platt, Elston M. Dunn, William McD. Coriell and Martin Giles.

IN JAIL AGAIN SOON AFTER SERVING TERMS.

Henry Conners and John Sutton, said to have been recently released from the New Jersey Reformatory, and Elias Condit, a youth who, the police say, was recently discharged from State prison, were placed in the Somerset county jail at Somerville yesterday. They were committed on a charge of trying to rob W. E. Dunham's hardware store at Bound Brook Saturday night.

A conductor of a street car, in passing the Dunham store at midnight, heard the crash of a broken glass window pane and informed Marshal Flammer. Flammer caught the youths in the store. They showed fight, but Flammer drew his revolver and captured Connors and Sutton. Condit escaped. Flammer held his prisoners in Bound Brook over night and took them to the county jail yesterday morning.

Detective Totten captured Condit in a house in East Somerville Sunday afternoon. The three young men are residents of Somerville and are the sons of respected citizens.

—The second annual banquet of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Association will be held at the Hotel Iroquois tomorrow night.

CONVICTS NEARLY DIG THROUGH JAIL WALLS.

It was made public today that one-half dozen of the prisoners confined in the Warren county jail at Belvidere, for various crimes, attempted to break jail on Sunday, and had not former Sheriff Merrick, who has charge of the prisoners, been on the alert, they would have carried out their purpose.

In the afternoon the janitor of the courthouse, George Appleman, heard a noise that aroused his suspicions, and he at once notified Merrick, who made an investigation. He took the men by surprise and drove them to their cells and proceeded to examine the place where they had been at work.

He found their implement, which proved to be the leg of an iron bedstead. With this they were digging their way through the brick wall, in the rear of the main corridor, and had succeeded in getting half way through. In a few hours, if unmolested, they would have cut through and been in the yard surrounding the prison.

The men who were engaged in the work were John Kinney, who was sentenced to fifteen years in State prison; Joseph H. Miller, who has ten years to serve; Lawrence Troll, sentenced for two years, and others convicted of minor offenses. The sheriff took the convicts to State prison today.

James E. Corcoran to Wed.

Immediately afterward the couple will leave for Philadelphia, where a wedding supper will be served at the home of Mr. Corcoran's sister, Mrs. W. J. Dougherty on West Walnut street. After a trip through the south the couple will reside in Elizabeth.

ALL IN ORIENTAL GARB.

Menu Card Provokes Much Amusement—Program Source of Much Pleasure.

Under the auspices of the Men's Club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church a successful dinner and entertainment were given last night, and the patronage was large. In many respects it was the most novel affair ever arranged by the men, it being a Chinese dinner in so far as they were all costumed in the garb of that country. The scheme was carried out in the decorations, numerous signs bearing Chinese inscriptions were placed about the parlors and Chinese lanterns also added to the picturesque effect.

Accompanying the menu card was a verse printed in Chinese through the courtesy of the Chinese Reform News, of New York, and interpreted it read as follows:

"All human history attests that happiness for man—the hungry sinner!
Since Eve ate apples, much depends on donner."

This information also on the card provoked much amusement:

"Don't forget the waiter. Be liberal. He will have to turn over his tips to the cashier afterwards. If you get too much, or not enough, make complaint to F. J. Hubbard, the very civil engineer of the supper. He has an M. D. as head waiter and an expert at filling and extracting as assistant chef."

The various courses included everything from oysters to pie, ice cream, cake and coffee, and the food was well prepared and served in good style.

As president of the club, William C. Hubbard was an imposing figure, attired in the purple costume of a Mandarin and he wore a real pig tail. He had general supervision of the affair. The general committee comprised Frank J. Hubbard, chef; Dr. O. B. Whitford, assistant; Dr Marcus L. Clawson, head waiter, wearing the blue costume of a Mandarin; Ira N. West, John B. Cottrell and N. O. Moore. They all wore Chinese costumes, with the pig tail, the waiters being distinguished by the costume of white blouses, dark trousers and pig tails.

Theodore G. Davis, who was born in China and lived there for twenty years, was the artist, and he put the real Chinese expression on the face of each man. All the costumes were kindly loaned by Orson C. Green, of Alfred, N. Y., who will be remembered by the older residents as being a furniture dealer years ago,

As the patrons took their seats at the tables the waiters greeted them with "Haw la va," "How are you," and "Tsing Zoo," "Sit down." Among the table decorations were Chinese flags belonging to Mr. and Mrs. George L. Babcock. They secured them in China.

Dr. Marcus L. Clawson as head waiter was assisted by the following waiters: Asa F. Randolph, George M. Clarke, Nathan S. Wardner, Eston Jarvis, Irving S. Davis, Arthur J. Spicer, Charles L. Neagle, Rolland M. Davis and George E. Davis.

Dr. H. M. Maxson and David E. Titsworth were in charge of the entertainment, which comprised tenor solos by E. D. Young, popular selections by the P. H. S. quartet, and phonographic selections by D. E. Titsworth. Miss Jessie Utter was the accompanist.

In addition there was a sale of candy, Miss Isabelle Randolph and Miss Margaret Mortenson, two Chinese maidens, being in charge. Charles H. Dunham was the cashier.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcus W. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keen and Miss Jessie Duncan were elected members of the Hope chapel Christian Endeavor Society at the business meeting, last night. Reports of officers were read and approved. It was decided that the offering on Sunday, February 7, be devoted to the State Endeavor Union, and it was also decided to have the officers of the local Endeavor Union present if possible to speak on that evening. A social hour followed the business session.

MRS. GILBERT FLETCHER SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA

The many friends of Mrs. Gilbert B. Fletcher were shocked today to learn of her sudden death, which occurred at 7 o'clock this morning from pneumonia. She was taken ill about a week ago and the attack was severe from the first. Everything known to medical science was employed to stay the progress of the dread disease but the patient did not respond to the treatment. Her death has caused deep sorrow in a large circle of acquaintances.

Mrs. Fletcher was formerly Miss Laura Emmons and was the daughter of Mrs. Louise and the late Peter Emmons, of Jackson avenue. She was a favorite with all who knew her and she was esteemed for her rare womanly qualities. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church and the Young Women's Mission Band of that church.

Besides a husband and mother, two brothers, Walter and William Emmons and onesister, Mrs. Arthur Embury Smith, she is survived by a young son. The funeral service will be held from the late home, 946 West Seventh street, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

ENGINEERS DISCUSSING HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENTS

Practical methods relating to the latest ideas in public highway improvement is being studied by the members of the New Jersey Association of County Engineers in connection with the annual meeting of the association in Camden today. They will be taken in automobiles to view the Blackwood and Eavesham roads. The former is a macada mroad constructed with a heavy asphalt oil as a special binder. The Eavesham road is constructed of "amiesite," a special road material.

Following luncheon at the Robeson Hotel, the association met in the Camden County Court House. John J. Albertson, engineer of Camden County, is president, and presides. The secretary is State Road Supervisor Robert A. Meeker, of this city, of the State Road Department. State Road Commissioner Gilkyson spoke on "Future Purposes of the State in Advancing Road Improvements." Papers were read as follows: County Engineer Frank J. Eppele, of Mercer, "Asphaltic Binder;" County Engineer James Owen, of Essex, "Plastic Roads;" County Engineer John J. Albertson, of Camden, "The Virtue of Amiesite;" William E. King, Landing, N. J., "Road Repairs With or Without Elastic Binder." Each paper was followed by a discussion.

DR. ZELIE TO SPEAK AT WILLIAMS BANQUET

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will be one of the speakers at the annual dinner of the Williams Alumni Association to be held at Delmonico's, Friday night, February 5, at 7 o'clock. President Garfield will be the guest of honor, which will be the first opportunity that the association will have to welcome him as president of the college. Other speakers will be President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton; Dr. Henry S. Pritchard and former Attorney General Hampton L. Carson, of Pennsylvania.

About a dozen Williams' alumni are residents of this city, and as several of them have not yet had opportunity to meet President Garfield it is probable that they will arrange to attend in a party. Mr. Garfield, who succeeds the late President Henry Hopkins as head of Williams, is especially popular with the student body. Since he has come to Williams he has shown a great interest in athletics, and it largely as a result of his efforts that the college trustees have recently acquired sixty-five acres near the Hoosac river for a new athletice field.

M'ALL AUXILIARY GREETS FIELD SECRETARY BERRY

The McAll Auxiliary held a reception in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last night, which was of unusual interest to the members. Rev. George Berry, field secretary for the McAll work, spoke on the social and political conditions in France, especially at Lamoges, where a mission is being supported by the local auxiliary.

The message he brought was cheering to the workers here. He declared that the people were ready to adopt the Christian religion. The convert, Carret, who was educated in this country, is reported to be accomplishing great results among his own people, the French peasants, in the districts surrounding the mission.

A pleasing vocal duet was rendered by Miss Elsie Goddard and H. Raymond Loder. Dr. Waldo played a selection on the 'cello. Following the entertainment a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served. In charge of the tables were Mrs. E. T. Barrows and Mrs. A. V. Heely.

Delegations representing ten counties were present, and the hall was well filled. Councilman L. B. Woolston and his colleagues on the local entertainment committee did everything possible to make the delegates visit an enjoyable one.

FOUR THROWN FROM FERRYBOAT IN CRASH.

Four men were thrown into the water when the ferryboat Red Bank of the Central Railroad of New Jersey crashed into her slip at the foot of Liberty street shortly after 8 o'clock this morning. A fifth man had his leg broken, and another suffered from submersion following his attempt to rescue the four floundering in the river.

Three horses were drowned. They were attached to two wagons which were thrown forward though the iron gate by the force of the collision. The ferryboat as crowded with the usual rush hour throng of men and women from New Jerey hurrying to their offices in New York. The gangways were jammed full of teams.

LICENSE PLAN TO HELP

Increase in the Excise Tax Would Prevent a Deficit Says Mayor Fisk.

MEANS $840,000 FOR STATE.

Proposed Raise of Fees Would Also Bring Much More Money to Municipalities.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, president of the State Excise Commission did not "bombard" Governor Fort with figures and recommendations to solve the State's financial troubles yesterday. In fact the mayor did not even see the Governor but merely left some data with his son, Leslie Fort, whom it is presumed gave them out to the newspapers where they appear in a garbled form. That he has no recommendations, but that he merely wished to call attention to the excise commission's plan for gaining revenue for the State is the emphatic assertion he made to a representative of The Daily Press this morning. The published figures credited to him he says are all wrong and put him in a ridiculous light.

"At present the excise revenue amounts to approximately $2,700,000," said Mr. Fisk today. "If the plan proposed by the excise commission were to be adopted this would amount to $6,400,000, an increase of $3,700,000. Now allowing that the saloons would be decreased one-third, it would still mean that the total receipts would be $4,200,000. Should twenty per cent of the amount be given the State, as Mr. Matthews would have it, it would mean that the State would get $840,000 from this source, and it would mean $1,500,000 more for the municipalities, an increase of $700,000.

"In Essex county," continued the mayor, "for 1908, the receipts were $695,576.81, and under the proposed plan of the commission they would amount to $1,676,250, a net gain of $980,673.19. Again, for Hudson, the receipts were $868,795.83, and under our plan they would approximate $2,127,000, an increase of $1,258,204.17. In Union the revenue for 1908 was $125,520.00. The excise commission's plan would bring it up to $310,500, a gain of $184,980.

"Now don't imagine that the proposed increased rates would be exorbitant. On the contrary we have a precedent in New York, as well as in Massachusetts and in Pennsylvania. But understand, I have not endorsed the Matthews plan and would not until I gave it thorough consideration."

MAGIE TO ADDRESS THE BAR ASSOCIATION

Former Chancellor William J. Magie will mark the fifty-third anniversary of his admission to the bar on February 9, and this fact will lend additional interest to the address which he is to deliver before the Union County Bar Association at its meeting in the courthouse in Elizabeth. The former Chancellor was invited to speak at the meeting by President Connolly, of the association, and he was undecided as to whether he would be able to address the body on the date mentioned. When he recalled the fact that he will have been before the bar just three years more than half a century on February 9 he announced his determination to speak even at the cost of another engagement.

The meeting of the association will call for the regular business aside from Chancellor Magie's address, which is to be the feature of the session. In refering to the anniversary in conversation with a member of the association yesterday, the former Chancellor alluded to his early cases in Elizabeth shortly after he was admitted to the bar. He recalled many interesting incidents of his long and busy official career and stated that he could not more fittingly observe the anniversary than by addressing his colleagues of the bar association.

AUTO FIRE APPARATUS IS DEMONSTRATED HERE

Uvon the invitation of the Councilmanic fire committee, of which Robert E. Hall is the chairman, C. N. Perkins, manager of the fire apparatus department of the Knox Automobile Company, of Springfield, Mass., yesterday and today gave a demonstration of the company combination chemical and hose auto apparatus.

Yesterday afternoon Assistant Chief A. D. Jennings, together with the members of the Common Council and the chiefs of the fire departments at Westfield, Scotch Plains, Dunellen, South Plainfield and other nearby places, made a trip about the city, including the Netherwood section, where the apparatus ascended the various hills with apparent ease. It was a question in the minds of some how it would act in the bottomless roads in the Netherwood section, which just now are almost impassable on account of the mud. Mr. Perkins assured the officials that the apparatus would go anywhere that it is possible for horses and other apparatus to travel.

The machine now in town is equipped with forty horse power and is capable of traveling at a speed of thirty-two miles an hour. Completely equipped it weighs about three tons. One thousand feet of hose can be carried, in addition to the two chemical tanks. Provision is also made for carrying ladders, axes, etc There are about fifteen of these machines now in use, the lates being installed in the New York department on Monday and used on Tuesday for the first time. It proved satisfactory in every way.

It is the intention to equip the new East End house with an apparatus of this type, and for that reason yesterday's demonstration was made. As far as can be learned it was satisfactory and those who have made a close inspection of the machine believe that it would meet local requirements. The total cost of such an apparatus is $5,500. The fire committee will report the result of its investigation at the February meeting of the Common Council. Chief T. O. Doane, being detained by illness, was unable to go on the inspection tour yesterday.

BOROUGHITES OPPOSE A LICENSE FOR ARLINGTON

The announcement that the new proprietor of the Arlington hotel, Charles Jensen, had applied for a transfer of Farbman's license, that he might continue the business ,has caused a stir among the residents of the borough, especially in that neighborhood.

Three petitions were put in circulation almost simultaneously and are being signed remarkably fast. The first to subscribe his name was Charles W. McCutchen. Councilman C. L. Nichols was the first to start out with a paper, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Rev. W. E. Honyeman, also have petitions in circulation.

The movement is a protest to the Court of Common Pleas against issuing either a transfer of the license or a new license, to anybody whosoever, for the purpose of selling liquor in the Arlington building. The place has frequently been a sore spot in the quiet residence district where it is located, and now the boroughites intend taking advantage of the opportunity to do away with it entirely.

DECISIONS OF INTEREST TO THE P.S.R. PATRONS

Two cases in which the enforcement of the terms of an ordinance to prevent persons from blocking the rear platforms of pay as you enter trolley cars were disposed of in the Second Precinct Police Court, Newark, Monday. In each instance the ordinance was upheld. More than usual interest was attached to the actions as both defendants employed counsel.

Alphonse Baglin, the principal in one case, on November 21 last, insisted on forcing his way to the platform of a crowded car at Orange and Sheffield streets. The bar which had been lowered at Broad street to denote "no more passengers" was raised at Sheffield street to permit two women to alight and Baglin got on the car. He was asked to wait for the next car but refused and as there was no room in the vehicle, he stood on the platform. As an ordinance of the Board of Works directs that a passageway be kept clear, the conductor refused to give the starting signal until Baglin got off. Baglin stood pat, however, and after a delay a trolley inspector caused Baglin's arrest. The defendant retained Joseph A. Beecher as counsel and Chauncey H. Beasley appeared for the Public Service Street Railway Company. Much testimony was taken and the descision given by Judge Herr yesterday was that Baglin was guilty. He was fined $5.00.

The other case was that of a High School boy who refused to leave the platform of a pay as you enter car. He, too, retained counsel, but like Baglin was adjudged guilty and fined $5.00.

HOLY CROSS TEA AND SALE WELL PATRONIZED

The second of the series of teas being held at intervals during the winter at Holy Cross parish house, was given yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. In connection with the affair there was a sale of home-made cakes, candies and other dainties. The entire proceeds amounted to about $45.

Mrs. George O. Stevens, as president of the auxiliary, was chairman of the committee having charge of the entertainment. Mrs. J. M. Conklin presided at the tea table. Those in the candy booth were Mrs. McDowell and Mrs. L. Riley.

John Hunt.

John Hunt, aged 66 years, one of the oldest and best known residents of Dunellen, died at that place yesterday from a complication of disease. For a great many years he was a section boss on the New Jersey Central. He is survived by a wife, and three daughters, Mrs. John Logan and the Misses Lizzie, Minnie and Frances Hunt, all of Dunellen The funeral service will be held from the late home in Dunellen, Saturday morning at 9:15 o'clock and from St. John's church at 10 o'clock.

FOR MORE PATROLMEN

Five More Men Are Urgently Needed Now the Police Board Finds.

27 MEN NOW ON THE FORCE.

Petition for Re-adjustment of Patrolmen's Schedule Submitted Will Be Considered.

The question of providing the city with adequate police protection and at the same time granting the members of the department what they request in the re-arrangement of the schedule, whereby they will have shorter hours for work, occupied the attention of the Councilmanic police board last night. At present the force consists of twenty-seven men.

It was agreed that to afford proper police protection at least five more men should be added to the force. This was the suggestion of the mayor and he will make that recommendation to the Common Council possibly at the February meeting. The board recognizes the fact, it is said, that more protection is needed in the East and West ends of the city, it being impossible to cover this extensive territory with the present force of twenty men.

The board received a revised schedule from the Patrolmen's Benevolent Protective Association, which provides less hours of work and which it is believed will work out all right. While this schedule was not discussed at any length at this time, it seemed to be the opinion that it would not prove satisfactory with the present force employed.

According to the schedule submitted in summer there would be twelve men on duty from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m.; two men on duty from 8 p. m. to 4 a. m.; four men on duty from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., and 4 men on duty from 4 p. m. to 8 p. m. Each man would work four hours extra each day to make up the time for the day off, it being planned to give two men a day off every day in rotation The winter schedule provides for six men out at 6 p. m., in plain clothes until 10 p. m., with a swing for two hours. The patrolmen have thoroughly considered this revised schedule and are of the opinion that it would prove satisfactory. The police board will look into it more fully and give the men an answer within a short time.

FUNERAL OF J. V. FARLEE IS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral service of Joseph V. Farlee was held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home on Grandview avenue and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, was in charge of the service, assisted by Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel. They read Scripture selections and offered prayer. There was a large display of floral tributes, including a spray of calla lilies and smilax from all the neighbors residing in the block on Grandview avenue, where Mr. Farlee lived.

The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery, and the bearers were F. A. Cranston, J. W. A. Bauersachs, William Allen, Henry Nischwitz, A. N. Stein and Everett Marsh.

Art Exhibition a Success.

The art exhibition at the Plainfield High School which has been attracting many visitors this week, will close tomorrow. It is in charge of the Turner Art Company, of Boston, and comprises two hundred reproductions of the world's masterpieces of art. Only One Contested Case.

The only contested action in the District court this morning was the contract case of the Empire City Bed Company against Sachar & Sachar, to recover $500. Sol. Cohn represents the plaintiff and F. "What's a pun, father?"

"A pun, my son, is a play upon words. There are three kinds of puns; good ones, which you laugh at; indifferent ones, which you take no notice of, and bad ones, which make you throw something at the punster."

"Can't you make a pun, father?"

"Of course, my son! Now, you're thinking about your supper, aren't you?"

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The next annual championship tournament of the New Jersey State Golf Association will be held over the links of the Montclair Golf Club on June 3, 4 and 5. This was decided on at the annual meeting of the association at the office of Leighton Calkins in New York, on Tuesday.

Montclair has not been the scene of the State championship since 1902 when Allan N. Kennedy won the title for the second time. The date for the coming tourney is in accordance with the usual custom of selecting the first week in June. It was stated at yesterday's meeting that the Montclair links would be much improved before the coming tournament.

Although pressed by his friends to accept renomination for president, Mr. Calkins declined, giving as his chief reason that the precedent in the association had been to change presidents every two years. He also added that he believed it for the best interests of the organization to have this change take place.

When it was seen that Mr. Calkins could not be induced to alter his decision, Percy Jackson, the Yountakah Country Club representative, nominated H. V. Keep, of the Englewood Golf Club. Mr. Keep was unanimously elected. The custom in this association is for the president to select his secretary-treasurer and other members of the executive committee.

On a motion made by Mr. Calkins, the dues of the association were reduced from $15 to $10 a year. It was argued that the New Jersey organization's chief reason for existence was the holding of the one tournament, and as a comfortable balance had been accumulated in the treasury there was no longer any need for the $15 tax. It was likewise shown that it would take several years, even if each treasurer reported a deficit, for the balance to be wiped out.

The report of J. Whitney Baker, the secretary-treasurer, showed a balance on hand of $475.52, an increase of $125.70 over a year ago. The Trenton Country Club was elected to membership, making the twenty-fourth club enrolled on the association's roster. It was also voted to continue printing the association year book. The delegates present were as follows:

Plainfield Country Club, Leighton Calkins and J. Whitney Baker; Englewood Golf Club, H. V. Keep; Yountakah Country Club, Percy Jackson; Montclair Golf Club, Jason Rogers; Essex County Country Club, W. J. Kingsland; Morris County Golf Club, Fred H. Thomas.

A LITTLE SERMON FOR THE BUSINESS GIRL.

Never become careless about your work, and think you are indispensable.

No one is indispensable, so you can't afford to do anything but your best.

No difference how small the undertaking, do it as well as you can.

Be cheerful over your work. If you have to earn your own living, you might just as well be happy as be grumpy over it.

Put your whole heart and soul into doing your work well, and treat all with whom you come in contact courteously.

Attend to business during business hours.

And be punctual.

"What has become of your secretary?" said one merchant to another.

"I had to get rid of her," was the reply.

"Get rid of her! You told me she was the cleverest secretary you had ever tried!"

"She was. But she was never punctual. In the morning when I was ready to dictate letters Miss Jones had either not arrived or was removing her hat or would rush in breathlessly, with her notebook forgotten and her pencils unsharpened.

"After luncheon it was the same thing, and her letters, perfect when finished, never were finished without my either having to wait late to sign them or hold them over until the next day.

"I stood it as long as I could, because she was thoroughly conscientious and dependable in other ways. But her want of respect for the clock ruined her for business.

"My present secretary hasn't half her brains, but she is punctual."

If you are unpunctual you are undependable; if you are undependable, you are not wanted. Therefore don't get into the habit of being late—or if you have got into it, get out of it as soon as possible.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Can't Resist Him.

E'en though no glow of sun or star illumes your weary way,
Just make your peace with trouble and plod on from day to day.
Who knows? Tomorrow fortune may unbend and deign to smile—
She's bound to love a fellow who keeps hoping all the while!

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

THE LINCOLN STAMP BILL.

Senator Ackerman's bill, for such it may properly be called, seems to have commended itself to Congress as exactly the measure to be passed at this time, in honor of the Lincoln centennial. The bill has been favorably reported in the House of Representatives, and thus far seems to have aroused no opposition. No one can definitely predict its ultimate fate, but from present appearances it is destined to speedy enactment.

Should it become a law it will provide that a special issue of two-cent stamps shall be authorized, with the Lincoln head in the place of that of Washington. This is an innovation without precedent, for, up to the present time, th stamp which represents the unit of letter postage has borne only the head of Washington. This proposed exception, however, seems to meet with approval outside of Congress as well as within that body.

The New York Tribune, after crediting Senator Ackerman with activity and effective leadership in this commemorative movement, hopes the measure will succeed, because, "Washington alone excepted, there is no face more familiar to Americans than that of Lincoln, but it will be well to have it, if possible, made still more familiar by giving it, in this way, the widest possible circulation."

Senator Ackerman may be congratulated upon his ability to introduce a bill in Congress without being a member of that body, and it may occur to some voters that he should be given greater facilities in this direction. It should be remembered, however, that Mr. Ackerman could have had the Republican nomination for Congress sixteen years ago, but declined it.—Newark News.

Credit is due Senator Ackerman, of Union county, among others, for the active interest taken in the Lincoln stamp. It now appears that the Postmaster-General could not withstand the pressure which urged this little tribute to one of America's great men. Public opinion has won out. Possibly Senator Ackerman, who was certainly one of the first to become interested to carry out the plan and to use his influence to develop it, is more widely deserving of thanks than most people think. His interest in this instance comes not only from the fact that he is a stamp collector, but also because of his sincere and deep appreciation of the life and character of Lincoln.—Elizabeth Journal.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will have initiation tomorrow night.

Real Cold.

An American and a Scotsman were discussing the cold experienced in winter in the north of Scotland.

"Why, it's nothing at all compared to the cold weather we have in the States," said the American. "I can recollect one winter when a sheep, jumping from a hillock into a field, became suddenly frozen on the way and stuck in the air like a mass of ice."

"But, man," exclaimed the Scotsman, "the law of gravity wouldn't allow that!"

"I know that," replied the tale pitcher. "But the law of gravity was frozen too!"—Tit-Bits.

Measles have appeared in Ewan, and one of the cases is that of Mrs. Tomleson, who is over seventy years old. She is dangerously ill.

President James E. Mitchell, of the State Prison Board of Inspectors, is confined to his home in Millville with an attack of appendicitis.

There were 322 new buildings erected in Atlantic City last year, at a cost of $2,000,000, according to Building Inspector Albert Gillison's report to City Council.

From a swarm of bees he found in the loft at the Bobbins Memorial chapel, in Mt. Holly, Contractor Ezekiah W. Esham has gathered 200 pounds of honey.

A twenty-six-year-old "colt" belonging to James Bird, of Clarksboro, ran away yesterday and broke up things that would have done "credit" to a six-year old.

An analysis of Mt. Holly's water shows that it again contains traces of sewage contamination. Residents will again boil all water used for domestic purposes.

Camden City Council will tomorrow afternoon have presented to it a "skeleton" ordinance, providing for the Camden terminal of the tunnel to be constructed under the Delaware river.

Heads of Atlantic City's municipal departments who had planned to have fine automobiles before the opening of the spring season were given a jar when councilmen bluntly voted not to buy any more cars with city funds.

There was a largely attended meeting of the Tri-County Medical Society in Woodbury yesterday to listen to an address by Dr. Spitzka, of the Jefferson College, Philadelphia, on "Resuscitation of Persons Shocked by Electricity."

The Millville police, headed by Marshal Biggs, swooped down last night upon a band of alleged robbers which has been operating in Millville for several weeks. The officers arrested Charles Mason, Clarence Clevenger and Nye Edwards and recovered almost a woganload of plunder.

Charged with assaulting his father-in-law, John Long, of 443 Washington street, Camden, Harry L. Moyer, a Philadelphian, was put under $300 bail yesterday by Recorder Stackhouse. Moyer's wife recently died and Long told the court that he and his son-in-law have been engaged in a controversy over the insurance money.

Denying that he was implicated in the robbery, but admitting that he had knowledge of the hiding place of the proceeds of the haul, seventeen-year-old George Ross, of 548 Walnut street, Camden, was yesterday held on bail by Recorder Stackhouse on a charge of being a participant in the burglary at the residence of Harry Orr, of 907 Lincoln avenue.

The members of the Belle Vista Choral Society of Paterson made their debut on the concert platform last night at St. Paul's parish house, that city, and entertained a large audience with a delightful musical program. The concert was for the benefit of the home of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and a considerable sum was realized as a result.

To celebrate the tenth anniversary of their return from Spanish-American War service, veterans of Company K, Third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, will hold a reunion and banquet at the Auditorium, Burlington, on February 11. Nearly a hundred members of the original company are expected to be present, in addition to city, county and State officials.

Another Men's Club, modeled on the plan adopted by Rev. Sydney Goodman, of the Church of the Ascension, Atlantic City, to attract men to religious services, has been instituted by Rev. Richard Nolan, rector of the Church of Our Lady Star of the Sea, in Chelsea. Meeting-rooms for the 200 members of the club has been fitted up in the basement of the church with pool and billiard tables, and special services will be held there for the men. Members of the new club have started a campaign against profanity.

A Mixture of Extremities.

Little Roy was to be sent to his grandmother's on an errand, and was looking around for his hat, but failed to find it readily. As grandmother lived just in the next yard, Roy's mother said: "Oh, never mind your hat."

Whereupon Roy said: "Why, shall I go to grandma's with my head barefooted?"—Delineator.

THE BLANKET BALLOT.

The Australian ballot, which this paper has frequently commended to the state authorities for serious consideration, has found a champion at last in the person of the Governor himself. In an address in Jersey City last night Mr. Fort said with much emphasis: "I want to see a blanket ballot in New Jersey; one ballot and one piece of paper, so that every man will have the same piece of paper, and will vote for the same or other candidate as he chooses, taking the list and selecting his own party and marking every man."

This is the form of ballot used in Pennsylvania and many other states. In the name of good government, honest elections and honest counts, hasten the day when we have it in New Jersey!

RAILROAD PRESIDENT ON GOVT. PAY ROLL AT $1,000.

Washington, Jan. 28.—That Henry B. Ledyard, president of the Michigan Central Railroad, is on Uncle Sam's payroll as a mail messenger, at $1,000 a year, was admitted today by Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart.

Representative Murdock, of Kansas, cited the case yesterday in the House as an example of improper use of government funds. He claimed that the compensation was a gratuity to the railroad.

The department, however, holds that the payment is entirely proper, and is for services performed in transmitting the mails across to Canada.

"The only thing unusual about it," said Stewart, "is that Mr. Ledyard happen to be the president of a railroad. So far as I know he is the only man in such position who draws a salary fro mthe government."

D. A. R.'S JERSEY ROOM RELICS ARE FINISHED.

Timbers from the British frigate Augusta, sunk in the Delaware River, near New Salem, 1777, are being transformed by a Worcester, Mass., firm into interior panelings for the New Jersey room of the new building of the Daughters of American Revolution at Washington. Two years ago the Augusta was raised. Long immersion has given the wood a rich, dark color and has also hardened it to such an extent that the keenest of tools are quickly dulled in working it.

ELIZABETHAN HAS AN AIRSHIP MACHINE

Carl Semreau, of Elizabeth, the German machinist who has been working for months on a "bird machine, or airship, told a reporter that he expected to have it finished by spring, when he will give practical demonstrations in the vicinity of his residence in South Elizabeth. He is now working on the steering gear, and has completed the wings. The tail has not yet been attached.

"I received a letter the other day from wealthy New Yorkers," said Semreau, "asking me if I wanted to sell the machine as it was. I told them that I didn't. I know it will make good, and I don't want to sell it until I can do so to advantage." So saying, he sprang into the seat of the machine to demonstrate just how the vehicle would work when in operation. He lives in a little frame, ivy-covered cottage in the rear of his tiny workshop, and is seeking a partner who means business and is honest. He intimated that a little capital would not be amiss. He is confident that the machine is a winner and will some day bring him fame and fortune.

"Some of those who come to look at the machine," he said, "want to know more about it than I do myself, but I watch them," and with these words he patted the machine as if it were animate. The vechile is the work of years of thought and labor. Formerly Semreau was employed as machinist at the Stephenson Car Works, but gave up his work there to devote all his time to his invention. His wife is the only other occupant of the cottage, and she feels as optimistic regarding her husband's machine as he does himself, and is a frequent visitor to the little workshop.

BOTTLERS' ASSOCIATION DENOUNCED IN COURT

The Middlesex Bottlers' Association was denounced in open court at the Perth Amboy city hall, Tuesday night. It was charged that the association had used a search warrant and the attending criminal process to persuade a bottler who did not wish to do so, to become a member of the association. Several days ago a search warrant directed against "Tony" Rupino, of Port Reading, was issued, upon complaint of Jacob Rosenthal, agent of the bottlers. Tuesday night the hearing was to have been held, but Rosenthal appeared before Justice of the Peace H. E. Pickersgill and announced that Rupina had joined the association and the charge would not be pressed against him.

The justices turned on Rosenthal and told him that an officer of the association had offered to settle the case with Rupini on a basis of fifty cents for every contraband bottle found in possession of the Port Reading man. The fine fixed by the law enacted at the behest of the bottlers of the State is $5 per bottle.

Rosenthal admitted that the charge was true, but pleaded that no wrong was intended. The justice announced that hereafter no complaints against offending bottlers would be entertained. The association has been at war with the independents for two years and a large number have been fined.

TEMPERANCE FOLK PROTEST AGAINST LIQUOR LICENSES.

A petition from church and temperance people was submitted to the South Amboy City Council last night, asking that council refuse to grant the applications for licenses now before that body. The request was made that "no more applications be granted." Councilman-at-large Hains thought the petitions were not correctly worded. He said they gave the impression that the temperance people were not consistent in their position, in asking simply that the number be not increased. He moved that the petitions be returned to the petitioners that the word "more" might be erased, making the petition to apply to all applicants alike.

No action was taken on any license applications. They have been referred to a committee. The chairman of that committee has reported that in the absence of an enabling ordinance the City Council is not qualified to consider applications for inn and tavern licenses.

Two ordinances were introduced, one to establish a City Court and the other providing for the proper handling of receipts and disbursements. Upon motion of Councilman Hains, a committee was appointed to revise the old borough ordinances so as to make them apply to the present form of the city's government. The committee is composed of Councilmen Hains, Berrien, Campion and Stanton. This motion was opposed by Councilman Stanton, but was carried against his vote. A committee from the Board of Trade requested the council to have the public dock repaired for service, that a steamboat freight service might be established between South Amboy and New York. A committee was appointed to consider the advisability and probable cost.

DEEP SILK FRINGES ARE PRETTY AND BECOMING.

Exceedingly graceful and becoming is a dress which shows how very effectively deep silk fringes can be arranged on chic gowns both for day and evening wear. In the present instance a rich crepe de chine is the fabric chosen, bright and soft in texture as satin, and selected in a lovely shade of turquoise blue.

The graceful tunic, which represents quite le dernier cri, is cut in one with the lightly draped bodice, and is brought high on one side, where it forms a kind of square tablier, bordered with silk fringe in the same shade of blue.

The tunic draperies are then taken round to the back of the waist, whence they fall, in the form of long sash ends, bordered with fringe, and reaching to the hem of the skirt. The bodice is outlined with the same silk fringe, put on in the form of a berthe, and arranged in such a way that the strands of silk fall like epaulettes over either shoulder.

The front of the bodice is filled in with fine silver lace, sewn with glittering diamond sequins, and adorned here and there with turquoise cabouchons, while the sleeves are made entirely of the same jeweled dentelle. Clusters of forget-me-nots are worn in the hair, showered with tiny diamond dewdrops.

Wide scarfs in crepe de chine, bordered with deep silk fringe, are being used just now, arranged in many different ways, to drape the close-fitting satin frocks which are so generally worn for dinners and receptions this winter. These scarfs have many advantages, since, with a little skillful adjustment, they can be made to break most becomingly the somewhat severe lines of the Empire and Directoire gowns.

THE ELDERLY PERSON AND THE FASHIONS OF LONG AGO.

Although no one is middle-aged in these days, there are inevitably a few genuine old ladies, and to them Fashion is exceedingly kind. First they have the dainty neck frills of tucked muslin or pleated net to wear inside the collar, which give such a youthful touch (it must have been a surprise to some of them who have always worn this particular finish to awake and find their "frillings" the mode of the moment!); then they have a wonderful choice of most becoming bonnets. Some of the prettiest are made entirely of black miroir velvet, well puckered and fastened down at intervals with dull silk or shiny jet buttons. I have also seen old ladies look bewitching in the "granny" motor bonnet, which may be worn with equal propriety by young and old. Taking things al round, this seems a most auspicious moment for those who have been hovering on the brink of three-score and ten to take the plunge and become old with a good grace. The "frillings" present an opportunity too good to be missed.—Philadelphia Record.

ELIZABETH PASTOR IS BEREFT BY 'QUAKE

In a brief note to his friend, the Rev. Dr. William B. Hamilton, a Presbyterian minister, of Elizabeth, the Rev. Enrico Aurelio Cantafio has outlined the awful fate of his friend's relatives and neighbors in Montelone, his native city, and throughout Calabria and the devastated part of Sicily. This is the first message of any length that the Elizabethan has sent. He left Elizabeth in November for his native land intending on his return to take up ministerial work among the Italians to Elizabeth. He has a brother a student in the Bloomfield Theological Seminary. This is Mr. Cantafio's letter:

"My Dear Brother—I hope to be in Elizabeth about the end of January or the beginning of February. Here we have an earthquake every day. I have lost some of my best friends and some of my relatives.

"Two hundred thousand people have been buried alive in their homes. It is something dreadful. In every home there is nothing but grief and tears. Remember my country in your prayers. My best regards to you and your people."

Miss Mary Sherman, who is in the devastated district, and whose home is in Oetroit, has not yet reached this country. Her friends in Elizabeth, the DeHart family, are expecting a visit from her on hera rrival.

QUEER CHINESE EDICT ON EMPEROR'S DEATH.

Washington, Jan. 28.—"Our late Emperor ruled the empire for thirty and four years. He kept on his clothes through the night and took his food after dark, earnestly devoting himself to the work of government. We hoped that his glory would be long enduring, and that he would live to complete the reorganization of government. But the 'sacred body' was too frail. On the twenty-first day of the tenth moon of the thirty-fourth year of Kuang Hsu he 'took the dragon ride to be a guest on high.' We have entered on the great succession; the 'divine utensils' are very heavy; the responsibility rests upon the feeble body; we think of our youth and scanty merit and fear we shall be unequal to the test."

The above are some of the curious announcements in the proclamation issued by the new Chinese Emperor on the occasion of his enthronement in December, which has come to the State Department.

AUTOMOBILE TARIFF RULING.

Washington, Jan. 28.—A letter of deep interest to automobile manufacturers and dealers in the United States was addressed to the collector of customs at New York yesterday by Assistant Secretary Reynolds, of the Treasury Department. The latter directs that henceforth all automobiles of foreiyn manufacture brought to the United States shall be assesed at the full rate of duty regardless of whether they have been used abroad by Americans or not.

This order is a complete upsettal of the practise which the Treasury Department has followed for years of classifying automobiles as household effects in case they were bought abbroad and used by Americans at least one year before bringing them to this country.

The ruling is a result of the decision handed down in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals last week declaring that automobiles are not personal or household effects within the meaning of the tariff laws.

MARRIED ON SIX CENTS.

Newark Bar Boy Weds to Get Out of Middlesex Jail.

John Marty, who says he is a bartender in a Market street saloon, Newark, was married at the county jail at New Brunswick yesterday afternoon to Miss Ethel Gotza, of this city. Marty was locked up Tuesday on complaint of the girl, who charged him with breach of promise of marriage. Yesterday morning the visited him and said he was willing to marry him and call off the charges. Marty pleaded poverty.

"I have only six cents to my name and how can I pay a 'squire to wed us?" he asked. But Justice Sedam was willing to tie the knot and it was tied. "I'll drop in to see you later," said Marty to the Justice. How to furnish a flat on six cents does not seem to worry the couple.

Opposed to Tariff Commission.

Washington, Jan. 28—There is little likelihood the the House Ways and Means comittee will consider any proposition involving a tariff comission as suggested by President-elect Taft. Chairman Payne and other members are known to be opposed to a commission which would have the power to mage rates while some members claim that a commission for the purpose of gathering information is unnecessary in view of the numerous sources of information through the various government departments.

JERSEY TUBE THROUGH TO CORTLANDT STREET

The last rock barrier from the east and west ends of one of the two tunnels, which will run from Cortlandt street, New York under the Hudson river to Jersey City, was blasted out at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The blast was witnessed by a distinguished company of officers of the company and engineers.

A general celebration followed, with speech making, and a distribution of bonuses among the laborers.

The blast was under a point about 300 feet from the Cortlandt street ferry. It was fired from the New Jersey side, and shattered four feet of tap rock.

On the New York side were Walter G. Oakman, president of the Hudson Company; Chrales M. Jacobs, chief engineer in charge of the work; his assistant, J. V. Davis; Colonel J. H. Wells, the architect of the Hudson terminal building; Charles J. Fisk, Wilbur C. Fisk, and Pliny Fisk, the bankers, and many prominent engineers as well as representatives of newspapers.

On the Jersey side, with the men who set off the blast, were engineers representing the Pennsylvania and Erie Railroads.

When the dull boom of the blast was heard on the New York side, and the rock wall from which the spectators were held back to a safe distance by a rope barrier, shivered and fell, there was a scramble to reach the hole. Mr. Jacobs was the first through.

THE FURNISHING OF OUR MODERN HOMES

Many pretty pieces of bric-a-brac are touring this globe under a new name, that of puritanical china, puritanical candles, puritanical this and that. One of the cutest little affairs imaginable is a jewel case that has all the apeparance of an oval mirror on a silver stndard. It is very plain, in fact a dull silver subpect, anw hen turned upside down, a tiny keyhole is found. When the door is opened it discloses a little nest for small articles of jewelery. When I was told of this was a receptacle for jewelry I thought of a story about a visit to the moon, where the houses all had three doors: "One to go in by, one to come out by, and one in the middle to keep locked to keep out the burglars." This is an article which could easily be carried off, but even a safe cracker would be surprised to tell which was the lock and which the ornamental part.

And have you seen the hand-loom rugs? They are of a pattern identical with the bright carpets that once adorned grandmother's parlor. Of course the texture is smoother and some have a genuine velvet finish, but they are Colonial from corner to corner. And the colonial mirrors are shown in newer patterns. They are the big-massive affairs that so closely resemble the articles of olden times. Miss Polly of today need not be surprised if when she goes to view herself in the great mirror with heavy gold frame she beholds, not herself, but a smiling belle with powdered hair and a thin kerchief drawn neatly around her plump shoulders. The new housewives are eagerly searching for the latest puritanical pieces for their new homes. The modern three-corner cupboard with heavy glass doors is again in use and is found in real or imitation polished cherry.—Woman's National Daily.

Trouble for the New Tenant.

"What are you going to do with all those things?" was ask of our friend, who is buying a drum, a trumpet, a toy pistol, a xylophone, a pair of cymbals and various other noise-producers.

"Going to give them to the little son of the man who has the flat over ours."

"Gracious! You'll not get a wink of sleep."

"Yes, I will. We move out of our flat the day before Christmas."—Chicago Post.

"How many ribs have you, Johnny?" asked the teacher of physiology.

Killed Closed by Home.

Within a block of his home, where a wife and family awaited him, Michael Cooney, of Jersey City, sixty-five years old, was struck by a derrick beam and killed. He was tossed sixty feet. Cooney was signal man for a construction company excavating for the new Erie railroad cut through the heights. He was signalling to workers at the bottom of the excavation when struck. He landed on his head far below and was terribly crushed.

Would Keep All School Funds.

At a special meeting of the Trenton Teachers' club yesterday afternoon the suggestion mode by Givernor Fort that $900,000 of the fund appropriated for school purposes be used to meet the deficit in the State treasury was unanimously declared to be unwise. A communication embodying the views of the organization will be personally presented to the Mercer county representatives in the Legislature.

Undecided as to Herron's Case.

Former Judge C. T. Cowenhoven said yesterday afternoon at New Brunswick that he has not decided what his next move will be in his attempt to save Archibald Herron from the electric chair. He feels gratified at the thirty days' reprieve given by Governor Fort, and declares that it will give him ample time to determine whether Herron is sane or crazy.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

An offering of more than passing attention, will be the forthcoming presentation of the new drama of contemporaneous American life entitled, "Married for Money," which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. The production is under the direction of Clay T. Vance, the well-known dramatic manager and producer, and the patrons of the New Plainfield theatre will have the pleasure of witnessing this new contribution to the American dramatic stage. The story is one which will interest all thinking men and women who believe in the sanctity of the home, and it preaches a powerful sermon against the loose manner and utter disregard for the sacredness of the marriage vow among a certain portion of our society, who have acquired sudden wealth and affluence. The story is said to be founded upon facts and depicts the life story of a humble toiler in one of the mills of our great iron industries, and who finally becomes president of the great corporation, only to divorce the wife who had stood by him in his long and weary fight to gain position, power and wealth. His subsequent ruination by the unscrupulous members of the trust, and the desertion in his adversity of the fair charmer for whom he forsook the wife of his youth, forms the basis of one of the most interesting dramas of late years. The play is said to be one that cannot fail to leave its impress upon the American theatregoing public. The presenting company is composed of an unusually strong cast of players and the engagement promises to be one of the most interesting dramatic events of the season.

"Let Him Who is Without Sin

Billy Clark, the Minstrel with the A. G. Field Greater Minstrels, at New Plainfield Theatre, Saturday, January 30, matinee and night.

Cast the First Stone," is the title of the song Tommy Donnelly, comedian with the Field Minstrels is singing this year, and it is one really funny bit of coon melody, especially funny when after several encores, Tommy is forced to "do" it in pantomime. The show was at The Park Theatre in Philadelphia all last week and Tommy Donnelly's fun resulted in the following excerpt from a criticism of the attraction appearing in the Philadelphia Ledger: "The show has a number of men who are really and naturally funny and one of the greatest producers of laughter is Tommy Donnelly a comedian who has been with Al. G. Fields for years and who has sang and danced his way the entire distance around the theatrical world. His coon song pantomime is one of the most laughable bits of work imaginable." The Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels will be at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night.

Monogram Hatpins.

First we had large, round hatpins of tortoise shell and celluloid, and then we had long, thin ones of the same materials. But while our minds were busy running to these eccentricities the jewelers were busy designing pins to appeal to fair woman, and now the result of their efforts is given to the public.

The very latest hatpin is of gold, and, like the seal of a masculine watch fob, engraved with the monogram or crest of the owner. These pins are very beautiful, and, while they are very expensive, they are well worth the money, for there is nothing fragile about them and they should wear a long time.

The Flat-Chested one.

There are no exercises which will so effectively develop a flat chest as skipping and running. If these exercises are taken i nthe open air the results will be a great deal more beneficial than if taken in a room with the windows closed. These exercises dilate the lungs and increase the depth of respiration. If you have no place in which to run take the running exercise in one spot. The movements are exactly the same but the person stays in one spot.—Philadelphia Press.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Every Christian's life should every day be a fresh, new song.—Rev. Dr. John H. Prugh, Reformed, Pittsburg.

The Life We Lead.

The thing that is most admired in a man is not his taste for dress nor his ability to make money, but the kind of life he leads.—Rev. W. W. Bustard. Baptist, Boston.

Man of God.

To be a man of God is to have a title of nobility worn by the prophets of old—the highest expression that a man is capable of becoming.—Rev. C. R. Hemphill, Presbyterian, Louisville.

Life's Final Results.

Many of the final results of your life and teaching will report themselves to you long years after you come before the judgment seat of God.—Rev. Dr. N. Dwight Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Mind and Religion.

The more highly developed the mental life is, the more correctly one thinks, the more complete and perfect his knowledge, other things being equal, the better will be his type of religion.—Rev. John W. Rowlett, Unitarian, Atlanta, Ga.

Heaven on Earth.

If there is anything that is heaven on earth it is for the provider of the family when there is real need of provision to come back with the day's wages or the day's provision for the loved ones.—Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

Consecrated Backbone.

Men must possess consecrated backbone in morals. Man is not expected to be a jellyfish morally, but an imperial, majestic vertebrate who stands up to give and receive blows in defense and in behalf of the God who gave him his soul and his lofty estate.—Rev. Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Methodist Episcopal, Los Angeles, Cal.

True Discipleship.

Immorality stands already and sufficiently condemned, but a shallow life must also be contemptible. It is for this that the church must stand in modern life if it would win not only those who are weak, but those who are morally strong. To sacrifice not only the evil, but also the good, this is true discipleship.—Rev. Clayton J. Potter, Congregationalist, Simsbury, Conn.

Growing Like God.

When one's heart throbs go out in kindliness, good will and sympathy and in all the gracious sentiments of brotherhood toward his fellows, then is he growing in likeness to his Father in heaven. And this conduces to the common happiness. Trusting others, they will trust us. Caring for others, they will care for us. Self sacrifice brings life's sweetest reward.—Rev. Junius B. Remensnyder, Lutheran, New York.

Disease Result of Thought.

There are a vast deal of suffering and disease in the world which are the product of men's thoughts. But if a disease is caused by the mind it is certainly reasonable to believe that it can be cured by the mind. To give the sufferer a new outlook upon life, to inspire courage and hope and faith, to renew the forces of the will, to turn away the mind from conditions which have caused nervous overthrow, will bring physical cure.—Rev. C. Waldo Cherry, Presbyterian, Troy, N. Y.

Manifestation of Deity In Nature.

The messages conveyed to us by nature do not need to be translated from the original Greek, and there is nowhere that we can learn a better idea of the majesty of God and his illimitable might. By limiting ourselves to the gospel alone we develop a Christianity that lacks strength and robustness. It is outside the Bible and in nature that we find what may be called the brute energy of God. The laws of nature are the forms in which God has crystallized his will. — Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York.

Value of a Clean Heart.

The man who does not live on good terms with himself, whose mind is not clean within, has very little to hope for in the way of moral and spiritual cleanness. This is the first thing that the perception of religion as an inner reality does for us. It guarantees our tranquillity, our sereneness, our undisturbable calmness here and hereafter. It introduces us to our own selves and says to man, woman and child, "Here you will find God or nowhere." Make clean first the inside of the cup, and the outside shall become clean to you. Ethics, pure social life, must flow from the heart that is fed with divine love.—Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Unitarian, Washington.

World's Greatest Treasure.

Man's life comes from within. It rises superior to circumstance and situation. It enables him to have happiness even in trial and sorrow. The martyr burning at the stake may be happy even amid suffering. Such strength is not obtained; it is attained —not an acquisition, but a growth. You can buy pleasure, but not happiness. The heart rich toward God solves life's paradox. Peace within the soul and the abiding conviction that the kingdom of heaven is within you give the knowledge and possession of the world's greatest treasure. A man may possess the world and not be happy, but with the soul enriched with eternal things he will be satisfied. This is the secret of the happy life. Happiness is a byproduct of an unselfish life. It is a wayside flower growing along the path of duty. A purpose consecrated to lofty ideals makes worthy the efforts of every one who strives to improve his own character and to uplift mankind.—Rev. Dr. George H. Bickley, Methodist Episcopal, Philadelphia.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 31, 1909.
By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Heroes of missions in India.—Ps. xcvi, 1-13.

Every mission field has had its heroes. Indeed, every true missionary is a hero, especially those who in the years gone by left their homes and countries to go to foreign shores then scarcely known that they might preach the gospel of Christ. But to some missionaries more than others opportunities have come to show the heroic mold of which they were made. No one doubted the heroism of the missionaries of Paotingfu, but it was only when at the time of the Boxer movement, when they so bravely and calmly met death, that the opportunity was presented to demonstrate it. Among our missionaries there are many devoted men who would have shown their heroism by facing the cannibals of the New Hebrides, but to John G. Paton alone did God give the privilege. Indeed, Christian heroism has not degenerated. Times have changed, but the devotion of Christians to Christ has not changed. Could a Roman persecution of the first century be reproduced in the twentieth there would be just as many of Christ's disciples ready to die for Him. The hour demands not martyrdom, but active, living service, and let us not come short of its demands.

India—great, gorgeous India—has not wanted for missionary heroes. From the beginning of the work there down to the Christian martyrs of the latest uprising against England some years ago India has had missionaries who were heroic in service and heroic in death when that was required of them. In that great empire, where "every prospect pleases and only man is vile," heroism has played no small part in extending the kingdom of Christ.

But one name stands out in India above all other names—William Carey. His heroism was not displayed in martyrdom, but in long years of self sacrificing service which has forever linked his name not only with missions in India, but with the empire of India itself, as its true friend and benefactor.

William Carey was born in Northamptonshire, England, Aug. 17, 1761. For a time he worked with his father, a weaver, but was later apprenticed to a shoemaker and worked at that trade for twelve years. At eighteen years of age he became a Christian and an earnest preacher of the gospel. His vision of the kingdom of Christ was a worldwide one. But he found no sympathy even from the ministry. Rather he was mocked, and in derision he was called the "consecrated cobbler," a title which today is one of great honor. He was even derided as a "maniac," but there was "method in his madness." His great sermon on two propositions—"expect great things from God and attempt great things for God"—aroused great interest, and the Baptist Missionary society accepted him as its missionary. He preferred to go to Africa, but obeyed orders and went to Calcutta, India, arriving Nov. 11, 1793. To sum up even his forty years' work in India is impossible. As superintendent of an indigo factory he later supported himself and his family while preaching and studying and translating. He was afterward a professor in William college, Calcutta. He revealed India to the world. He translated parts or the whole of the Bible into twenty-four Indian languages or dialects. He brought about the abolition of the suttee, and the English government requested Carey to translate the proclamation declaring it punishable as homicide into the Bengali tongue. The order reached him as he was preparing for public worship on the Sabbath. He threw off his black coat, secured a pulpit supply and went to work on the translation, saying, "If I delay an hour to translate and publish this, many an Indian's wife may be sacrificed." With the Sabbath sunset the translation was completed. This was William Carey. He died June 9, 1834, at the age of seventy-three. He was buried the next morning in the mission burying ground. May the spirit of Carey possess us and lead us to increased zeal for missions.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii, 7; Matt. v, 11, 12; xxviii, 18-20; Rom. x, 14, 15; Acts i, 6-14; viii, 26-40; xv, 25, 26; xvi, 8-12; II. Tim. iv, 1-8; Heb. ii, 36-40.

Busy Endeavorers In All Lands.

Dr. John F. Cowan while addressing a gathering which welcomed him to Hawaii spoke as follows concerning Christian Endeavor societies:

"In other lands than the United States Christian Endeavorers are active. In London there are 1,000 Christian Endeavor societies. They help the poor and are all busy workers. Some societies sent a steamboat in pieces to Africa to do missionary work on the Kongo. So in Turkey, in India, in China and in Japan Christian Endeavorers are earnestly working for Christ. During the Boxer trouble in China one society put up the notice: 'This house belongs to Jesus Christ. He has not run away, nor do we.'

"In the islands of the Pacific there are many Christian Endeavor societies. I can hardly realize that I am now in one of the islands of the Pacific. But not only here, but in the other islands to the south, there are many societies, and they have done a great work."

Hungary's Good Work.

The Christian Endeavorers of Hungary raised over $1,200 last year and have started a fund for a building in Budapest to carry on Christian Endeavor work on a larger scale.

MOTHER'S WAY

"SOME are born victims, some achieve—" Lucy hesitated.

"Some achieve victims and some have victims thrust upon them." finished Miss Haywood, promptly. "If you are going to paraphase, paraphase to the bitter end. But why this pessimistic outburst?"

"Oh, I have victims thrust upon me," said Lucy, laughing. "Of all the easy marks—to quote my brother Frank—my mother is the limit—still quoting my brother Frank. We never know what portion of our belongings have been handed out to some one who asked for them. Frank kept his closet locked until the day he was invited to spend the night at Glenwood and forgot to give the key to the porter when he sent for his clothes. Mother had always felt injured by the locked closet and you should have seen her face when Frank came home in a state of foaming wrath. She looked like the cat that ate the canary. He hasn't locked it since then, though he runs big risks.

"Last week when I came home I found mother in tears. She refused to explain for some time, I think she had made up her mind never to tell, but she craved sympathy. It seems that a young man in uniform—she dwelt upon the uniform as an extenuating circumstance—had come to the door with an express package from New York upon which there was a charge of $1.55. She said she told him she didn't know any one in New York and she thought it queer any one would send a present with a charge on it and she thought $1.55 too much and she had only $1.50 anyway. The messenger refused the reduced rates and was going away with the package when mother managed to scrape up four pennies, which he accepted.

"I can just imagine her look of pleased expectancy as she opened the package, and the awful realization when she saw the cake of soap and the lot of tissue paper she drew.

"Well, she pledged me to secrecy. She pretends not to mind Frank's teasing, but she does. A few evenings later Frank was looking over the paper and said, after making various exclamations all bearing on the incredible gullibility of women: 'Trot out your gold brick, mother. No gay deceiver ever missed you and this fellow must have sold you one."

"Poor innocent mother said with great dignity that it wasn't a gold brick, but a cake of soap, and that she knew she didn't know much, but she knew enough not to buy a gold brick and that any one would have been taken in by his uniform and that she always thought she could trust me to keep my word.

"Nothing that Frank or I could say would convince her that her confidence was not betrayed.

"One Saturday she was in a perfect fever, hunting for two cents. She refused all offers of dimes and nickels with the mysterious remark that she did not want to give him so much. I naturally suggested that if he hadn't the change she might tell him to call again, but she paid no attention to me. I went out into the kitchen to see what manner of tradesman the man was. On the edge of a chair sat a brisk-looking old man twirling his hat very impatiently. After mother returned triumphantly with the penny she remembered to have seen in the bottom of a drawer and I had dug one out of little Jim's bank with the edge of a knife, he said: 'God bless you, but you've been a long time,' and departed.

"Frank came in then and she said apologetically that he was a poor old man to whom several women in the neighborhood paid a weekly tribute of two cents for his room rent. She said he must be a nice old man or he would ask for more than two cents. This kind of logic made Frank speechless. Then when he burst into a laugh mother said that from the time he was a child he never had much sense—which was a very scathing remark for her.

Mother.

"But when the old man failed to appear for two of three weeks mother was so worried that Frank went and looked him up, which wasn't an easy task."

"Was he a millionaire or a miser?" asked Miss Haywood.

"Neither," said Lucy. "He was just a poor old man who was trying to keep from going to the poorhouse.

"Since that old man has been found worthy mother has a strong weapon of defense when we tell her she is easily imposed upon.

"After all, I'd rather have her as she is and run the risk of being robbed than have her any other way."

Public Service

A few facts about what the PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION has done for the public since it was organized little more than five years ago;

IT HAS GREATLY IMPROVED THE STREET RAILWAY SERVICE.

IT HAS REDUCED THE PRICE OF GAS

IT HAS LOWERED THE COST OF ELECTRICITY.

Since 1903 PUBLIC SERVICE has expended more than $30,000,000 for improvements to its railway, gas and electric properties, many of which had to be practieally rebuilt.

PUBLIC SERVICE has built or rebuilt 156 miles of track for its street railway system.

PUBLIC SERVICE has added 860 cars of the most modern type to its rolling stock equipment.

PUBLIC SERVICE has extended its five-cent carfare zones and enlarged its transfer privileges.

PUBLIC SERICE has increased its electric lighting and railway power generating capacity from 47,700 kilowatts in 1903 to 102,900 kilowatts in 1908.

This means 137,200 horsepower available for generating electricity at the present time as against 63,600 horsepower at the time PUBLIC SERVICE acquired the properties.

PUBLIC SERVICE has put into effect throughout almost its entire system a base rate of ten cents per kilowatt hour for electricity, whereas many consumers formerly paid as high as eighteen or twenty cents.

PUBLIC SERVICE has increased its mileage of gas mains from 1,335 miles in 1903 to 2,037 miles in 1908, of which increase 232 miles were acquired by lease, and has made dollar gas a reality in all but a small portion of its territory. Some sections getting dollar gas now were paying all the way to $1.80 six years ago.

All these changes have vastly bettered the service and the public derives the benefit. And all these improvements were instituted and carried out in accordance with a well defined policy, fixed by the company at the outset of its operations, to give the people the best possible service at the lowest feasible rates.

This policy is to be continued and the service in all three departments of railway, gas and electricity is to be made as nearly perfect and as low priced as the wise expenditure of money and intelligent effort can make it.

Attention is directed to the card of Corra Ryno. Those in want of a neat fitting boot or shoe, should give him a call. He has a large assortment of the best of material on hand and knows how to do good work.

Bold Robbery—The store of Messrs. Pickell & Ramsey was entered by burglars on Wednesday night last week, and goods to the amount of $1,500 stolen therefrom. The thieves broke one of the large glasses in the front window, first having smeared it with paste to prevent any sound, and thus gained entrance to the inside. No clue to the robbers has been obtained.

The Union County Court commenced its session last week. Plainfield was represented on the grand jury by John Simpson, A. Bonnel and George R. Pound.

Fire—On Friday evening last, about nine o'clock, a barn on the corner of Fourth and Mechanic streets, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm was given, and our ever ready Fire Department was promptly on hand, but found that their services were not needed, as the building was burned to a complete skeleton when the fire companies arrived. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary as there was a strong smell of oil or kerosene about the burning building. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon our indefatigable "chief" John Roselle, who with Mr. J. F. Layton, remained at the fire all night. The wind rising during the night, they were compelled to carry water and throw on the re-kindled flames, in order to subdue it. The fire companies will lose a valuable officer when he retires.

We request the sextons of the different churches to ring the bells of said churches at every fire or alarm of fire, as we have no alarm bell that we can hear.—Suggestion passed at meeting of Fire Board, April 20.

Ed.—An exchange says Butler will go into Grant's cabinet. No doubt, if it is not kept locked.

A conscience stricken thief left a roll of cloth worth sixty dollars, which was stolen at the late fire at Belvidere at its owner's door, labelled thus: "Rum took this off, but Sober brought it back."

A good substantial walk has been laid in front of the Post Office. It is called "Concrete Pavement," and is far preferable to the old style of flagging, as it will last a life time.

FOR THE ONE WHO KNITS AND CROCHETS.

A useful little bag for the girl or woman who knits or crochets is one that holds the ball of yarn and prevents it from slipping from the lap.

The bag is made from a piece of gay ribbon or silk about eight inches long and fourteen or sixteen inches wide. Each end is turned over and gathered around a small brass ring an inch or so in diameter. Enough opening is left in the seam at one side to slip in a ball of yarn.

When the ball is in place one part of the seam is hooked over upon the other to keep the ball inside and the end of the yarn is taken up through the ring at the top.

These little bags may be made in any size to fit knitting balls of any dimensions. A smaller ring should be used for crocheting spools or balls of silk.

TENNIS AND GOLF.

He learned of tennis terms a drove,
Knew what they meant by "forty-love."

But then a new election came,
And Mr. Taft got in the game.

And now to master he doth seek,
Such mystic terms as "put" and "cleek."

Such is a politician's fate,
A struggle to keep down to date.

"I did put it on my bread, mother," said Wilbur, "but it wouldn't stay there; it's too nervous."—Exchange.

BOWLED OVER 900 IN THREE STRAIGHT

The Park Club five rolled its final match of the season on its own alleys last night with the Roselle team, and established the enviable record of going over 900 in each game. The Parks were determined to make the last game here one to be rememberd and thy succeeded well. They were constantly cheered by their friends who were out in large numbers.

The local five won the three games by scores of 934, 914 and 937, and among the best individual scores were those of Daniel 222, Ball 200 and 230, Long 202 and 192, Barlow 190, while the scores of the other members of the team were 160 or much better.

As it stands now the Parks cannot be tied and as this makes the third win, the Central Journal Bowling League trophy becomes the permanent property of the Park Club. The team average to date is 886. It has won 23 games and only lost four. There are three more games to roll on the Jersey City Club alleys next Wednesday, but there is nothing at stake except individual averages. BOROUGH GIRLS LOSE HARD GAME TO P. H. S.

The P. H. S. girls defeated the young women of the N. P. H. S. basketball team yesterday afternoon at the city school gym in a hard fought game, by a score of 22 to 9. Miss Harriet Moody did most of the scoring for her team. Miss Marjorie Cooley and Miss Anna Daly each played well.

The line-up:

P. H. S. DEFEATS EAST ORANGE H. S. IN FAST GAME.

The P. H. S. basketball team defeated its old rivals, the East Orange H. S. five, in an exceptionally fast game at the local gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The final score was 38 to 31. The victory was largely due to the fast team work of the Plainfield boys and also to the good field and four goal shooting of Doane, captain of the team. Snyder also distinguished himself by shooting five difficult goals from the field.

The line-up:

P. H.S.—Forwards, Doane, Snyder; centre, Lidgate; guards, Prior and Clark. East Orange H. S.—Forwards, Banks, Whinery; centre, Clark; guards, Beek and Woekering.

Goals from foul—Clark 1, Doane 8. Referee, Paul Collier.

BOWLING.

The Miantonomo team will roll a match game with the Alis five of Elizabeth tonight at Campbell's alleys.

The Red Men will endeavor to square matters with the visiting bowlers for the defeats handed them in Elizabeth.

The Fraternal League's schedule comes to a close tomorrow night when the Wetumpka and Miantonomo teams meet. The latter have to win all three games in order to tie the Elks for first place and as the Wetumpka team has yet to win its first game it is hardly probable that they will make any trouble for the Miantonomo team.

Entries for the two man tourney will close on next Wednesday night when a meeting will be held to elect officers and make up a schedule.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. John A. Pierce, of East Newark, is visiting friends in this city.

John C. Reynolds and family, of Westervelt avenue, are visiting Mr. Reynold's relatives in Virginia.

Mrs. Caroline Rogers, of Maryland, is a guest at the home of Edwin A. Hooley, of Rockview avenue

Harry B. Dennis, of Watchung avenue, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, is now able to be out again.

G. L. Van Emburgh, who has been detained at his home for some time by a severe illness, has sufficiently recovered to take a short walk on the sidewalk yesterday.

Miss Lucie Coriell, of West Fifth street, is improving nicely from her recent injury. Yesterday her physician made an X-ray examination of the injured foot and found it to be all right.

Blood Poisoning of the Knee.

Thomas Hendry, of West Fourth street, who suffered severely from an attack of blood poisoning about two months ago, recovered and resumed his position at the Pond Tool Works last Friday, when he was again stricken with blood poisoning on the knee a little below the place where he had the first attack. Dr. E. W. Hedges and Dr. P. B. Cregar were called in Tuesday and found it necessary to perform an operation for the removal of the affected part. Since then Mr. Hendry has shown marked improvement but will be detained from work for an indefinite time.

Will Take Witnesses Testimony.

Arrangements were made today to take the testimony of Harvey Platt, of Brooklyn, in Elizabeth, in the action in tort of Mrs. Helen Meyers against the Public Service Corporation, which has been set down for February 15 in the Union County Court. This case has already been postponed several times owing to the inability of Mr. Platt, who is a witness for the defendant company to be present. Robert Newton Crane and W. S. Angleman represent the complainant and A. A. Clark the company.

GOVERNOR CHAMPIONS THE BLANKET BALLOT

Governor Franklin Fort was a guest of honor last night at the annual banquet of the board of trade of Jersey City. The Governor declared himself very emphatically on several propositions, and the diners frequently broke in upon his speech with applause.

He said in part:

"I want to see economy in every department of the State of New Jersey, without destroying the interests of the State. I want to see the good roads extended in every direction in the outlying country across Hudson. I want to see a primary system established in this State that will insure to every honest man the right to vote and an honest result at the primary.

"I want to see a blanket ballot in New Jersey, one ballot and one piece of paper so that every man will have the same piece of paper, and will vote for the same or other candidate as he chooses, taking the list and selecting his own party and marking every man.

"I want to see every useless commission in New Jersey abolished. I understand the difficulty has been to do these things. Here over this State is a State Board of Taxation, with four men in office with their salaries behind them, standing against the Legislature with all the political pull and power that they have got to maintain that decrepit institution with the further expense annually.

"I want a fair and just public utilities bill in this State that the public corporations of the State shall be regulated uniformly and justly in dealing with the people of New Jersey. I want just as little legislation enacted as it is possible to have enacted to secure good results.

"I want every State institution in this State and every charity supported well, and above and beyond all I want a high moral tone in the State, in all the political standards of the State and that the one question in public office shall be 'Is it right?' not 'Is it good politics?'

"I care nothing for office and I desire none. If I had my own way this minute I would be sitting where this distinguished gentleman (waving his right hand at Supreme Court Justice Francis Swayze) is, sitting in courts.

"My ambition is to fill the office of Governor now that I have it, creditably and to hold the esteem and affections of my fellow citizens and whatever the consequences, I am willing to leave it with them."

ROOSEVELT'S FEDERAL ORPHAN HELP MESSAGE

Washington, Jan. 28.—"I shall send a special message to Congress," said President Roosevelt, at the subscription dinner in connection with the conference for dependent children last night, "recommening the establishment of a federal children's bureau and a law for the District of Columbia and the Federal Territories which shall apply the principles and methods you advocate in practical fashion."

Declaring that "afencies which were the best possible agencies a decade or more ago have been passed by," he said, "we were then in the muzzle-loading stage in the fight against evil. Men and women did mighty good work with the muzzle-loaders, but we want to use breech-loaders now.

"Institutions have a great part to play," he continued, "but the most important of all institutions is the home, and where we have to utilize an institution as a substitution for it, it is well to make the unit of influence as small as possible; that is, to adopt the so-called cottage plan as nearly as may be, to reproduce the conditions that make the home of such inestimable value to the growing child."

He expressed the hope that the State Legislature would "not preserve in a course of conduct which means a refusal to do each its duty by its neighbor."

The dinner last night was a brilliant one, being attended by more than five hundred people, representative of every State. Herman A. Metz, comptroller of New York iCty, was among the list of speakers.

FEASTED ON MR. TURKEY

American Bird and "Fixins" Relished by Big Crowd at Trinity Reformed Church.

KEEP THE WAITERS BUSY.

Ladies' Christian Work Society Provides Enjoyable Repast—Another Dinner Tonight.

The great American bird—the turkey—was supreme last night, when the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church gave its annual supper in the lecture room of the church. The affair was a great success in every way and the women who worked so hard and faithfully in preparing for it were amply rewarded by the liberal patronage accorded. Between the hours of 6 and 9 o'clock 371 turkey suppers were served and frequently those in charge found it difficult to take care of the large crowd. All were patient, however, and felt repaid when they got their supper.

The supper was considered the best yet given by this noble band of chuch women and not a thing was left undone in the preparation and serving of the meal that could be desired. The menu was replete with liberal portions of turkey, accompanied by all the fixins' and it all tasted so good. There were eight tables arranged about the room and they were made attractive by silver and cut glass decorations, carnations, ferns and candelabra.

The rooms were tastefully decorated for the affair by Henry Seader's Sunday-school class and the members certainly did themselves proud. There was a pleasing arrangement of the colors red and green; also cut flowers and ferns. The color scheme added greatly to the success attained.

The supper was announced from 6 to 9 o'clock and before the former hour, there was a goodly number of people present waiting for the feast. In less than an hour, the rooms were crowded with members of the church and their friends and the women were kept busy until long after 9 o'clock in serving everyone.

Another feature that added enjoyment to the occasion was the program of piano selections rendered by William Kenyon. He played continuously during the supper hours and the music enlivened the affair.

In addition to the supper there was also a sale of cake, candy and aprons, all of which added greatly to the receipts of the treasurer of the society. Practically everything was sold out, necessitating a new supply for tonight.

The patrons of the affair were made welcome by a reception committee, comprising Mrs. William A. Woodruff, Mrs. Henry B. Paul, Mrs. Mary Disborough, and Mrs. M. Hille. Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle as chairman of the general committee, as well as every other woman on the various committees deserves great credit for the unqualified success of the supper. An extra attraction at the candy table was the display of photographs of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor-emeritus, and they were quickly disposed of to those who have a very warm spot in their hearts for one who served the church so long and faithfully.

The supper will be continued tonight from 6 to 9 o'clock and there will be a generous supply of good things for all who patronize the affair. There will also be a program of music to entertain those attending.

The complete committees are as follows:

General committee—Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle, chairman; Mrs. Annie E. Leggett, Mrs. A. L. Force, Mrs. J. S. Miller, Mrs. George W. Cole, Mrs. Frank Templin, Mrs. Anna Gillem, Mrs. William VanDeventer, Mrs. L. C. VanCamp, Mrs. Edward J. Cooley, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Mrs. John Krymer, Mrs. Virginia Chickering. Those who presided at the tables were as follows: Mrs. Horace J. Martin, Sr., Mrs. Julius Williams, Mrs. Henry VanName, Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mrs. John Whitnack, Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mrs. Frank Templin, Mrs. L. C. VanCamp, Mrs. A. L. Force, Mrs. Edward J. Cooley, Mrs. John Beckman.

FOR THE TRADE SCHOOL

Rev. Mr. Warner Makes Plea for Technical Institutions at Builders' Banquet.

MAYOR EXTENDS A WELCOME.

L. B. Woolston Presides at Dinner at Saengerbund Hall—Evarts Tracy's Talk.

Following the business meeting yesterday afternoon of the seventh annual convention of the Master Builders' Association of New Jersey, held in the Knights of Columbus hall, the delegates met at 7 o'clock in Sangerbund hall and partook of the hospitality of the local members. After the dinner, served by Timbo, the convention was addressed by Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield; Andrew Dickinson, of Paterson, president of the association; Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Holy Cross church, of the borough, and Evarts Tracy, of this city. Councilman Lemuel B. Woolston, of Woolston & Buckle, acted as toastmaster.

Mayor Townsend, on being introduced, welcomed the delegates to North Plainfield. He expressed the hope that it would not be necessary when the convention meets here again to explain why they had their business meeting in one city and their banquet in another, that the two municipalities should then be all united as one big city.

Mr. Dickinson talked of the high standing of the builders' trade, speaking of the pride he felt in being a builder himself. He admitted however, that things were a little slow in his "God-forsaken city of Paterson." He said he felt like moving to Plainfield to get some of the good business which enable the Plainfield association to furnish such a sumptuous repast. "We could not afford it in Paterson," said he. In closing Mr. Dickinson voiced the sentiment of those present in a few words of hearty thanks to the local members for their generous hospitality.

The Rev. Warner's address concerned the need of the country and especially our State for more trade schools. He quoted instances and statistics to show how many boys between the ages of 14 and 17 drift out of school and come to nothing simply because they can get no practical education. He explained how hard it now is for a boy to get any general knowledge of a trade as an apprentice. "Germany's manufacturing supremacy," said Rev. Warner, "is due to the large number of trade schools which are found in every city. What we need today is industrial schools for the young. If this country is to maintain its commercial supremacy it must take up the question of the trade school."

Mr. Tracy spoke on concrete as a building material dwelling on its possibilities from an artistic point of view. He told of the way in which the forests are being used up and how concrete is coming in to save them and to take the place of wood as a building material. He spoke of the many ways in which it is being used, predicting that it would soon be the principal material for smaller buildings and dwellings. He showed how the concrete block manufacturers, with their forms for imitating stone, were the ones who were making concrete a synonym for cheapness in looks as well as price. "The possibilities of concrete as an artistic building material and a cheap one have not been dreamed of," said Mr. Tracy. He believes the proper way to use the blocks is with a plain front. Some very elaborate illustrations were passed around the room showing what an architect could do with the blocks in this form.

During the dinner, which was a fine one, some good songs were sung to the accompaniment of a guitar. Cigars were an item of the program. The delegates returned to their respective cities feeling well repaid for their trip to Plainfield.

Singing Evangelists Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Schiffert, of New York, singing evangelists, conducted the Christian Alliance at the W. C. T. U. last night, and they were so much enjoyed that they have been persuaded to remain over for tonight's meeting. They are exceptionally good singers and speakers and the room was unable to accommodate all who desired to attend.

FAIR ACRES CLUB DINES

Wm. Hudson Acts as Toastmaster at Riding and Driving Club Banquet.

EXCELLENT REPAST SERVED.

Happy Speeches Are Made by Adam C. Blair, Charles Woolston, Thomas Brantingham and Others.

Good fellowship and a fine dinner were enjoyed at the annual gathering of the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club, at the Hotel Iroquois, last night. During the evening there was an informal discussion of plans for the coming year whereby the membership of the association is to be increased. William Hudson was toastmaster for the evening and he called upon the several speakers, including Harry Evans, A. C. Blair, Nate Robbins, Lewis Bellis, Charles Woolston, Thomas Brantingham and several others.

The prospects for the year seem to be bright. The club has made an offer for the driving park which is to be sold under foreclosure proceedings, and the members believe that they will be able to get control of the grounds and track which will insure good racing every season. Representatives of the Westfield Driving and Riding Club were present and they felt sure that the coming season would be a success, especially as the racing will be divided between the two places and thus create a rivalry.

The excellent dinner was served by Timbo and was enjoyed by everyone. Among those present were the following.

William Hudson, Percy Dayton, Charles Woolston, Marcus Hoyt, H. W. Evans, Adam C. Blair, Thomas Brantingham, Fred Hand, Harry Smith, Thomas Quinn, Thomas Lawless, W. S. Rule, Dr. Guy Hillman, William Passmore, Nate Robbins, W. L. Smalley, Jr., James Guttridge, Henry Uhrhahn, Augustus Mobus, Albert Vail, Frank Irving, Joseph Darby, John Barrett and Henry Sabocher.

CONSUMPTION CAUSES 40 PER CENT. OF DEATHS

Dr. Norman H. Probasco, in an address to an audience of women last night in the Y. W. C. A. rooms, called attention to the fact that forty per cent of the deaths in this city last year were due to consumption. His subject, "How to Prevent and Cure Tuberculosis," is one of vital importance and to which he is giving a great deal of attention.

Dr. Probasco's talk contained many valuable pointers on how to guard against the disease, the keynote of which was sanitation and cleanliness. There were sixty-five women present.

After the lecture the girls of the two basketball teams, the "Reds" and the "Yellows," who had been on a training diet in preparation for the game last Monday night, broke training and indulged in a candy pull.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOYS EFFECT ORGANIZATION.

The boys in J. Clymont's Sunday-school class at the Congregational church, have effected an organization and elected these officers: President, Edward LeRoy Voorhees; secretary, Carter L. Goodrich; treasurer, A. Holmes Clawson. They will strive to promote the interests of the younger boys in the school and foster a school spirit by united effort and by having "something doing" all the time. Hereafter they will be known as the "Tuckabactchu Class" the name being taken from the Indian and meaning "add to and stick together." Profitable talks on interesting subjects will be given from time to time.

Tomorrow night there will be practice for the coming checker tournament.

Will Preach for Dr. Herring.

During the absence of Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring the first three Sundays in February, his pulpit at the First Presbyterian church will be occupied as follows: February 7, Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, New Brunswick; 14, Don O. Sheldon; 21, Rev. Dr. Stanley White or Rev. Arthur Brown, secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian church.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Manhart, of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Manhart, to Maxmillian Vincent, also of this city. No date has been fixed for the wedding.

FARBMAN FINED $200; WANT LICENSED REVOKED

Morris Farbman, the former proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, which was raided on November 21, last was fined $200 in the Somerset county court, this morning on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. The fine was imposed after the defendant's counsel, William G. DeMeza and A. A. Clark made earnest pleas for leniency. The penalty was generally considered a light one and caused some surprise among those in court.

Immediately after Judge Schenck imposed the fine, the mony was paid and the prisoner was released. There will be no appeal from the sentence, counsel having decided that because it would cost at least $250 to have the case printed, to say nothing of counsel fees.

Borough Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed then made application for a rule to show cause why Farbman's license should not be revoked, and upon the request of Mr. DeMeza the court laid the application over until next Friday. Farbman is now residing in this city.

URGE THAT CENTRAL AVENUE BE WIDENED

Property-owners interested in the widening of Central avenue, beginning at West Front street, apepared before the Councilmanic street committee, last night, and urged the improvement. They also presented a strong petition signed by all the property-owners along that thoroughfare, with a few exceptions, requesting favorable action. Those who appeared before the committee were Charles P. Sebring, L. L. Manning, A. C. Wadley and Morris Abrams.

The widening of the avenue is especially urged because of the erection at present of a sone-story building at Central avenue and West Front street, which is close to the sidewalk and rather detracts from the attractiveness of the corner. The propertyowners were assured that the matter would be given full consideration and a public hearing given.

The committee informally discussed general street improvement work, and formulated plans of work for the coming year. There was also a consideration of the amount of money thought to be necessary for this year's street work.

WARREN CHAPEL CLASS HOLDS A RECEPTION.

The Men's Bible Class of Warren chapel gave a reception to its teacher, E. E. Parvin, at the chapel, last night, the idea being to promote sociability and discuss plans for effecting a permanent organization. A committee was appointed to nominate officers and committees, which will report on the same at a meeting to be held within a short time.

During the evening there were short addresses by E. E. Parvin, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Charles Windham and Joseph W. Gavett. The committee in charge of last night's affair comprised Charles Windham, chairman; William Welsh, Albert Everett, Joseph Mills and Alexander Dresselt. After the refreshments a meeting was held for the purpose of discussing plans for the permanent organization.

MRS. EMMA K. CONOVER HAS BEEN LAID AT REST.

The funeral service of Mrs. Emma K. Conover, widow of the late George Conover, was held from the residence on Jackson avenue, at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was largely attended by relatives and friends. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The service was conducted by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, of which Mrs. Conover was a communicant. "Abide With Me," and "Some Time We'll Understand," were sung by E. E. Runyon.

The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Werner Philpott, Winfield Philpott, David Conover, B. R. Conover, George Philpott and Oscar Philpott, all cousins of Mrs. Conover.

Remembered McKinley's Birthday.

Exercises marking the birthday anniversary of President McKinley were held this morning in the Stillman, Franklin, Washington, Lincoln, Bryant and Irving public schools this morning. The children sang McKinley's two favorite hymns, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." At the Stillman school, Miss Day, the principal, made a few appropriate remarks and Miss Margaret Bunnell gave a recitation. The music was in charge of Charles L. Lewis, director of music in the schools.

AGITATING PLAYGROUNDS

Charity Organization Association Addressed by Wm. J. Kiernan.

COMMISSION HERE PROBABLE.

Statute Provides for Places of Recreation for Children—What's Likely to Be Done.

William J. McKiernan, one of the commissioners of playgrounds in Newark, addressed a small company of members of the Charity Organization Association at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany on Crescent avenue, last night. His remarks were most interesting as he told what had been accomplished in establishing playgrounds in Newark and the management of the same.

All playgrounds in New Jersey are established under an act of the Legislature of 1907 and amended in 1908. This is an act to establish playgrounds in cities and it empowers the mayors of such cities to appoint a playground commission.

In October last the Charity Organization Society appointed Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, Mrs. J. K. Myers and William S. Tyler a committee to consider the feasibility of establishing playgrounds in this city and the committee has been expecting to ask Mayor Charles J. Fisk to appoint such a commission. It has been suggested that the society ask the Board of Education to open the school grounds here after school hours and on Saturday, but no definite decision has been reached in this particular.

Commissioner McKiernan gave those present at last night's meeting a full and clear idea of the playground question that will enable the committee to proceed along more intelligent lines in accomplishing the purpose desired in this city.

FIRST PRESBYTERIANS HOLD A SOCK SOCIAL

An old-fashioned or sock social held at the First Presbyterian church last night, under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society, proved to be one of the most successful affair held by this society in a long time. It was largely attended and everyone had a jolly good time. Those who planned the entertainment carried out the idea of introducing as many old-fashioned things as possible. These were found in the decorations, while six young women, Miss Sue Farland, Miss Helen Farland, Miss Jessie Hill, Miss Helen Russell, Miss Hyatt and Miss Marion Englehart appeared wearing the wedding gowns of their grandmothers. They were all the object of much interest and their gowns were greatly admired.

During the evening there were vocal solos and duets by Mrs. Charles Clark and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell; piano solos by Miss Helen George. Miss Lettie Remsen and Miss Beatrice Miner were the accompanists. Perhaps, one of the most amusing features of the affair was a spelling bee. The sides were lead by Miss Addie Dietrich and Alvin E. Hoagland. The contest narrowed down to Mr. Hoagland and I. B. Hil and it was a long time before Mr. Hill finally won out, it being impossible to "spell him down."

The "sock" feature was that each person attending was requested to contribute a sum of money equal to double the size of the sock or stocking worn by them. This netted about $100. During the social hour refreshments consisting of doughnuts, crullers, cookies and coffee were served. Mrs. Clarence E. Bond was chairman of the general committee and she was assisted by Mrs. W. W. Dunn, Mrs. George B. Wean, Mrs. A. D. Diman and Miss Wandell. Miss Beatrice Miner had charge of the music.

Smith, of the firm of Smith, Wallace & Co., of Newark, grain merchants, has purchased the French mill property on Somerset street, and within a few days will make a lease with Percy Dayton, the present occupant for a term of years. BUILDERS UPHOLD COURT Association by Resolution Endorses Decision in Gompers-Mitchell-Morrison Case.

NEW OFFICERS ARE ELECTED.

Reports Are Read and Minor Matters Transacted—Next Convention in April.

The Master Builders' Association of New Jersey, which held its twenty-third quarterly convention in Knights of Columbus hall, this city, yesterday afternoon, passed a resolution endorsing the recent action of Judge Wright in imposing prison sentences upon Labor Leaders Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison for disobeying an injunction. Andrew Dickinson, of Paterson, president of the association, presided at the meeting. One hundred and fourteen delegates were present.

These officers for the year were elected: President, Andrew Dickinson, of Paterson; county vice-presidents—Essex, B. F. Robinson, of Newark; Union, John Frederick, of Elizabeth; Middlesex, W. J. Huston, of New Brunswick; Hudson, J. M. Lothrop, of Jersey City; Morris, L. C. Thomkins, of Morristown; Monmouth, M. V. Poole, of Long Branch; Passaic, W. T. Gutherson, of Paterson; Bergen, J. H. Christopher, of Ridgewood; Somerset, H. W. Hoffman, of Bernardsville; Atlantic, G. M. Thompson, of Atlantic City. Secretary, A. E. Pearson, of West Orange; treasurer, A. J. Crowder, of Newark; delegates to the National convention, Andrew Dickinson, A. E. Pearson and Joseph Elibacker, of Elizabeth.

The annual reports of Secretary Pearson and Treasurer Crowder were read as were also those of the chairman of the various committees. Following the routine business M. V. Poole, of Long Branch, addressed the gathering on the subject, "Technical Education," after which there was a general discussion of the question.

The prevailing sentiment as expressed was that the founding of technical schools, to be maintained by State aid, should be encouraged by the association. There is a great need for skilled workmen in the building industry it was declared and the training of youths in these schools offers the best solution of the problem. Considerable enthusiasm prevaded the meeting, which was declared to have been the most profitable yet held.

The Master Builders' Association of New Jersey has a membership of 1,600. It comprises forty-three local associations in ten counties, and has been in existence since May 20, 1903. The delegates here yesterday represented the associations of Atlantic City, Elizabeth, Englewood, Jersey City, Hackensack, Long Branch, Cranford, Montclair, Morristown, Newark, New Brunswick, Orange, Passaic, Paterson, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, Ridgewood, South Amboy, Summit, Westfield and Roselle Park.

The next convention will be held in April but the place was not decided upon. In the evening the delegates were treated to a banquet at Saengerbund hall, given by the members of the local association.

EX-LAWMAKER'S DAMAGE SUIT CLOSE TO JURY.

Final testimony in the suit of former Assemblyman Joseph A. Riordan, of Harrison, against the Public Service Corporation to recover $15,000 damages, which was begun yesterday before Judge Speer, in the Hudson County Circuit Court, at Jersey City, was heard yesterday morning. It is expected that the case will go to the jury late this afternoon. Mr. Rioridan's suit is the outcome of an accident at Halsey street and Central avenue, Newark, May 4, last, when an automobile belonging to the West Hoboken man was struck by a trolley car and wrecked. The occupants of the au to were all more or less hurt.

In his action Mr. Riordan seeks to recover $5,000 for the loss of his machine and personal injuries, and $10,000 additional for the loss of his wife's services. Mrs. Riordan testified yesterday that she had been a nervous wreck since the accident.

Upon the completion of this case the trial of the suits brought by James Cunliffe, chauffeur of the Riordans, will begin. Assemblyman Edward Kenny and Charles G. Borgmeyer are representing the Riordans and Edwards & Smith, of Jersey City, the defendant company.

Four other suits, it was said yesterday, will follow in the Essex county courts, as a result of the accident. In these cases Edward Riordan, a son of the former Assemblyman; Peter and Edward Boyle, brothers of Mrs. Riordan, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Boyle, all of whom were in the auto at the time of the crash, will be the plaintiffs.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will meet tonight.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

The board of directors of the Eastern League met in the office of Pat Powers, president, Wednesday to talk over matters that have come up in connection with the new order of things which puts the Eastern League and American Association in a minor league class by themselves. The directors on hand were Edward Hanlon, of Baltimore; C. T. Chapin, of Rochester; J. J. McCaffery, of Toronto, and Jacob Stein, of Buffalo, representing A. B. Potter.

The subject most discussed was the new form of contract to be used since breaking away from the other minor leagues. At present the Eastern and American are operating under a National Association contract, but this will have to be changed. Messrs. Stein and Duffy, who are the Eastern League members of the new board of arbitration, were consulted on the subject of contracts and other new arrangements, such as certificates of ownership, telegraph and railroads. The schedule was another subject gone over and the best way of playing the increased number of games. Pat Powers will draw up three schedules and it may be decided to begin the season earlier and end it later than heretofore.

Powers has appointed the following umpires for the coming season in the Eastern League: W. J. Byron, of Detroit, last year with the Virginia League; J. E. Stafford, of Boston, last year with the Eastern League; J. J. Murray, of Chester, and Thomas B. Kelley, of Brockton, both with the Eastern last year, and Thomas Connor, Philadelphia, and William Finneran, Erie, both with the Tri-State League last year. McCaffery, of Toronto, and Joe Kelley have had a talk on Kelley's taking the management of the Toronto team, a matter which hadn't been positively settled.

The following players of the Highlanders have signed contracts: Joe Ward, infielder; E. M. Gardiner, second baseman; S. F. Pauxtis, catcher; Daniel Barry, first baseman; Walter Lonergan, shortstop; John M. Warhop, pitcher; Norman Elberfield, who has a three year contract, and Hal Chase, who has a two year contract; W. F. Cree, outfielder; A. P. Wilson, pitcher, and John J. Quinn, pitcher.

W. H. Lucas, president of the Northwestern League, has written to President Pulliam of a change in the playing rules he would like to have laid before the rules committee at its meeting next month. The idea originated with Ed Dugdale, the old time catcher, and is as follows:

Whenever bases are unoccupied, the pitcher shall be required to deliver the first two balls pitched to each batter perfectly straight, and no curve or split ball to be allowed, and same to be judged by the umpire. For any infringement of this rule the umpire to penalize the pitcher delivering a curve or spit ball by calling same a "ball" regardless of its going over the plate.

President Pulliam will submit the suggestion. The National League president has employed personal counsel to advise him when necessary on matters pertaining to his duties as president of the league. It appears that he was authorized to do so by the board of directors at the National League meeting in December. Mr. Pulliam's attorney is Charles W. Sinnott, who used to be a ball player himself. He was a southpaw pitcher at Fordham College several years ago.

PROGRAM FOR PADEREWSKI RECITAL TOMORROW.

The only appearance of Paderewski in Newark this year will be in the Krueger Auditorium tomorrow afternoon. This will be his first recital of his present tour, which is his eighth in America, and he intends to play in Newark the same program which he will play in New York and Boston next week. The great pianist is in the best of health and spirits but immediately on his arrival announced his decision not to gve more than one recital in any one city. The program that he will play in Newark tomorrow afternoon is as follows:

Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, Bach; Sonata, op. III, Beethoven; Etudes Symphoniques, Schumann; Nocturne, E major, op. 62, Mazurka, A flat, op. 59, Barcarolle, Polonaise, op. 53, Chopin; Reflets dans l'eau, Debussy; Rhapsodie hongroise, Liszt.

Seats are on sale at Lauter Co.'s piano warerooms, 657 Broad street, Newark.

WHEN WIFE LEFT HOME GAFFNEY TRIED SUICIDE.

William Gaffney, a miner employed at the Shoemaker iron mines, near Belvidere, tried to kill himself yesterday. He shot himself in the head with a revolver. His condition is critical. Gaffney had been despondent. Several days ago his wife left him. He told a number of his friends that he intended to shoot himself. His life was wrecked, he asserted, because his wife had disgraced him.

He entered one of the shanties near the mines, and, placing a revolver against his head, pulled the trigger. The ball entered near the temple. A physician was called, and the wounded man hurried to the hospital. His age is about forty years.

Mrs. George H. Babcock, of West Eighth street, who is sojourning in Florida, will return to Plainfield about May 1, when her remodelled home on Eighth street, will be ready for occupancy.

The BOYNTON Square Fire-Pot

Furnace

develops every atom of heat energy possible, by complete combustion, and leaves no clinkers and no waste.

The square pot burns less fuel and it thoroughly consumes all it takes—a double economy. All your earnings don't go into the fire when you run a BOYNTON.

For cleanliness and the trifling care necessary to run it the BOYNTON is easily the first choice of every man who takes the trouble to get acquainted with it. Look up the BOYNTON dealer in your town. The price is not prohibitive.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

A Sensational Climax to the Furniture Sale!

All Parlor Suites at Half Price

We couldn't do anything much more startling in a furniture selling way than to place our entire collection of splendid parlor suites at your command at just half the regular market prices. But that is what we are going to do tomorrow, the last day of our most successful January Furniture Sale.

Every Parlor Suite on our sales floor.
2-piece suites, 3-piece suites, 5-piece suites.

Plain designs and elaborately carved; most of them in mahogany finish; some in gold with coverings of velour, tapestry, silk plush; panne plush; damask and silk novelties; suites appropriate for parlor, library or reception room, the product of the best makers of this country—some of them brand new in design, not having been on the floor more than a couple of weeks; all are included in this wonderful offering at exactly half price.

Fully 150 Suites are here to choose from.

Regular prices run from $32 to $1,275 the suite.

Pick any one you like tomorrow, and pay us just half the marked price.

We wish to impress upon you the fact that in no furniture store in the United States are parlor suites priced more moderately than here. We have always invited comparisons of qualities and prices and have never failed to hold our own with any competition.

This being true the reduction of one-half means more than it would were our regular prices exorbitant as they are in many furniture stores—especially the so-called cheap stores.

NOTE—No parlor suite bought in this sale will be held unless entirely paid for, and they will not be exchangeable. A sale must be a sale as our object in making the price one-half is to clear every suite out of the store.

On Monday, February 1st, every parlor suite left will go back to its original price.

FALL FROM SCAFFOLD
KILLS WILLIAM LUTZ.

William H. Lutz, twenty-six years old, met death while at work on the construction of the new Continental Silk Mill at Phillipsburg Wednesday evening. Lutz was one of a gang of carpenters and was standing on a small platform of the false work over the second story of the building. He made a misstep and fell to the floor below, a distance of thirty feet. The foreman and other carpenters in the gang saw Lutz make the misstep, which cost him his life, but were unable to catch him before he went through the timbers. When picked up he was still alive, but died before a physician could reach him.

Coroner Kenney was summoned, and after viewing the body and investigating the circumstances of the accident, issued a certificate of accidental death.

This is the third tragic death in the Lutz family within a short period. The father of the young man was killed while at work by a falling wall about two years ago, and his brother, Andrew Lutz, met death on the railroad at Freemansburg, Pa., a year ago. A wife and one little daughter survive the victim of the silk mill accident.

Dr. S. D. Keeney, of West Fourth street, who has been visiting at Jacksonville, Fla., has gone to New Orleans, where she will remain for a time.

HOUSE PLANTS AND WHY THEY DO NOT LIVE.

In almost every house one may find plants growing in pots. In many cases it would be more correct to describe the plants as dying. The short life of the average indoor plant is not to be attributed to carelessness, but to a lack of knowledge on the part of those who tend them.

A plant, like every other living thing, needs food and this food is largely taken from the soil in which it lives, in the form of soluble salts. In Nature the salts are continually being replaced, but in the pot plant this is impossible.

What actually occurs is this: The plant for a time flourishes at the expense of the salts already in the soil, and then begins to show signs of failing. The usual course adopted under these circumstances is to shower the poor plant with water, and with more water, until it eventually dies a lingering death.

When the plant begins to droop it is probably in need of more food, and not of more water.

Clearly, then, attention must be paid not to the plant, but to the soil, and two courses are open to us. We may either repot the plant with fresh soil, or we may add to the surface of the original soil those salts which have been lost.

Purchase from your chemist a small amount of potassium nitrate and of super-phosphate of lime. It is then only necessary to mix the two powders to obtain a rich and complete fertilizer which, if every few months is spread over the surface of the soil in a little pot in a thin layer, will ensure a rich soil and well fed plant.

The soil in a potted plant should always be kept fairly moist, but should never be very wet to the touch. More plants die of hunger than of thirst, but a still greater proportion are drowned.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of Sandford avenue, will preach at the First M. E. church, Sunday morning for Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea.

THE THREE D'S AND THE SEWING CIRCLE.

A few young married women have formed a little sewing circle to meet at each other's houses during Lent. They will sew for the poor and at the close of the afternoon gather round the tea table.

There is but one restriction to these gatherings. The members have sternly forbidden the three D's, and conversation which touches on dress, domestics or disease is strictly tabooed.

To keep the matrons from straying back into familiar conversational paths a fine of ten cents for each offense is imposed upon every one indulging in those enthralling topics.

The proceeds of the fines are to be devoted to a charity yet to be voted upon. At the first meeting it looked as if they could endow a hospital bed, but at the next one fines had lessened marvelously, nor had the members turned deaf mutes.

To relieve the strain, part of the afternoon was devoted to reading some interesting topic of the day which was later discussed.

Similar vows against the three D's would be excellent Lenten discipline for many women, either in clubs or alone. To realize how large a part of daily conversation is occupied by these three topics one need only decide to cut them out.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW.

Fringed doilies are kept in better condition if the fringe is brushed with a small nail brush rather than with a comb.

Oilcloth can be brightened quickly if after it is washed and dried it is rubbed over with a cloth dipped in skimmed milk.

Be careful in scouring faucets to keep the scouring material out of the joints, as it is apt to wear on the screws.

If the temper of an iron is spoiled it will never retain the heat so well again. Never let irons stand on the range or get red hot.

A hardwood floor can be kept free from scratches longer if the legs of chairs have a bit of felt pasted on the bottom. An old felt hat can be utilized.

Meat loaf of chopped veal or beef is made much more moist if three or four tablespoonfuls of cream are added at the last, just before baking.

Perfect cleanliness does much to prevent rats and mice from congregating. If food is not left around the room or closet the rodents rarely favor an occupied house.

An old but successful cure for rats is to rub the edges of their holes with lunar caustic. This must not be touched with the fingers, as it burns them badly.

HEMMING THE TABLE LINEN.

Every woman who has ever attempted to lay hems on napkins or tablecloths or to hem them after they are laid, knows the impossibility of doing them quickly or well if the stiffening is not first removed.

One way to get them in proper condition is to rub the linen between the fingers and thumbs along the entire length of the hem. This gets out the stiffness and prevents needles from breaking.

Another and better method is before linen, napkins particularly, is cut apart, wet it along the line of division and for about an inch on each side with a small toothbrush dipped in soapsuds. Not only will the thread draw with few, if any, breaks, but the hem can be laid with much greater ease.

Never attempt to cut linen by the eye. It takes little more time to draw a thread, and that is easily made up by the quickness and accuracy with which the hem is laid.

In hemming all table linen, fold it over twice to the desired depth of hem, then turn back, crease and overcast neatly on the wrong side This makes much neater effect than hemming in the usual way.

*To Eradicate Moles.

Moles on the face are now being successfully treated by the use of sodium ethylate. The mole is painted with the sodium ethylate, a fine glass rod being used. When the mole has a varnished look, the ethylate is gently rubbed with the glass rod to make it penetrate deeply. The mole turns nearly black, and a hard crust forms over it, which is nearly three weeks in becoming detached. When it comes off the mole is much lighter than before, and this treatment can be continued until the mark is scarcely noticeable.—Family Doctor.

A USE FOR OLD PIECES OF LEATHER.

Do not throw away the old shoes, or the gauntlets of heavy riding gloves or other pieces of leather. They are excellent as an interlining for iron holders.

Do not make the holder too large, as it is clumsy to handle. Those which are oval in shape are preferable. Cut the covering and the interlining the same size and shape, stitch all the thicknesses on the machine, close to the edge of the material, then bind with a tape or piece of seam binding.

Another use for old leather is to make small mats, on which bottles or hot tin cups may be set in the bathroom. This prevents the heat or liquid from staining the marble on a stationary washstand or woodwork. Such mats need not be covered, but can be either pinked neatly on the edge or can be bound with a piece of gay ribbon.

The tops of shoes if cut into squares and provided with a tape hanging close to the range are good substitutes for dish cloths when handling hot pots. Insist upon the cook using these leather lifters, and the kitchen linen will last twice as long.

The choir of the First M. E. church is rehearsing for a special service to be held Sunday night, February 7, when excerpts from Gaul's "Holy City" will be rendered under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist and choirmaster.

The new prayer of the Radical politicians is—Grant U. S. Office.—Editorial.

We were somewhat astonished on Sunday morning, while passing our office, to notice a large evergreen tree reared toward the skies, from one of the chimneys on top of our office. Can this be the new Flag Pole that we have heard so much about in our town? If so, we must say, the parties who erected it have chosen rather neutral ground, it being hard to tell whether the honor was intended for us or our worthy landlord, Mr. Vanderbeek, but as it somewhat interfered with the draught of our chimney, we have been obliged to take it down.

We have noticed that our Town Committee have issued a notice setting forth the law in reference to cattel grazing in our streets, which reads that all such are liable to be taken to the pound. Mr. Asa Vail is the Pound-keeper.

SOMETHING DOING IN PRINCETON ATHLETICS.

Princeton, Jan. 29.—That an upheaval in Princeton's athletic system is coming is indicated by the announcement made yesterday that on February 13 there will be a joint meeting of the faculty committee on outdoor sports, the graduate advisory committee and the undergraduate executive committee of the athletic association. The meeting has been called for the purpose of considering the financial side as well as the general policy of athletics here, and several important changes are expected to result. It is certain that there will be a reorganization of the management of affairs.

The Daily Princetonian, the college paper, started a wave of criticism against the financial extravagance of athletic teams and also declared the various administrators of athletics here to be inefficient. The meeting is directly the result of the movement started by the college paper.

The students wanted a more rigorous system, and indications are that the conference February 13 will result in action which will meet the wishes of alumni and undergraduates for a revision of the present system.

On February 20 it is expected the meeting of football coaches and eligible undergraduate gridiron candidates will be held.

PICKS AT DYNAMITE CAP; LOSES SEVERAL FINGERS.

Walton Lacy, fourteen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lacy, of Oxford, had his two hands and his face badly injured yesterday by the explosion of a large detonator or cap used for setting off dynamite. He was at play with other boys in the yard back of the house when one of his companions showed him the cap, which had been found at a neighbor's house.

With penknife young Lacy tried to pick out the powder. This caused the cap to explode. He was taken to the office of Dr. L. B. Hoagland and Dr. Mickell. They found it necessary to ampufate three fingers on the left hand and the thumb of the right hand.

Roswell Ewart, of Fairview avenue, is detained at home with German measles.

THE INEXPERIENCED COOK AND PIES AND THINGS.

I think every girl should know how to cook before she goes into her own home, but I do not think, nor could I be convinced, that it is absolutely necessary. It has been demonstrated so often that the young woman who has been genuinely busy in her girlhood, without the advantage of learning the art of cooking, often makes one of the very best cooks. Her stumbling block will be baking pies and cooking meat. Pies are more difficult to make than cakes, for with cakes one has merely to follow a recipe to the letter, have the oven medium warm and the recipe, if a reliable one, seldom fails even the uninitiated. In making a pie, it is different. In the first place there is more or less waste, but the experienced pastry cook learns to guess at making pies and have a mere pinch of dough left. One pastry cook explains her success in this manner: "I have pastry cool, always cool, I sift the flour, put in a very little salt and a pinch of baking powder which helps to lighten the dough and makes it more flakey. I work in enough lard to be felt in the flour. If a pinch of flour, squeezed between the thumb and forefinger, just holds together and then crumbles, it contains sufficient lard. I stir the larded flour to make it light, and then mix a very little at a time. I handle pie dough very little and mix a handful at a time, then put all together and take off enough for the lower crust of the pie. This should be a piece about the size of a biscuit. After dusting the breadboard with flour, I roll the dough as lightly as possible. I have long since learned not to use all pie crust parings for another pie crust, but I mix it with fresh dough, making it about half and half, otherwise it would be tough. Use very cold water for mixing the dough. Ice water can be used."—Woman's National Daily.

Four a Cough.

A simple home-made cure for a bad cough or to relieve hoarseness is to be found by mixing ten drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia with a teaspoonful of glycerine. Stir the ammonia in with the end of a knitting needle so that it does not burn the throat.

If preferred, a bottle of this preparation may be mixed at once, using the same proportions. It should be kept tightly corked. This simple cure if taken in time will not only relieve a cough, but break up a threatened bad cold.

RELICS OF PATRON SECURED BY YALE

Two autographs of Elihu Yale, for whom Yale college was named two centuries ago, have just been received at the university at New Haven, and are the first to ever come into the possession of the college. The first is a signature of Elihu Yale cut from the consultation book of the council of Fort St. George for the year of 1691, at which time Governor Yale was president of the council. It was secured from the government archives through Dr. Edgar Thurston of the government museum at Madras.

The second is a complete letter in Yale's handwriting. As far as is known, it is the only one in America. It was at one time in the Greenough collection in Boston, and was exhibited at Yale at the time of the bicentennial. It has recently been presented to the university by Sherwin L. Whipple, '81, of Boston. It is as follows:

"London, the 7th September, 1714.

"Mr. Jones:—Since yours of ye 21st past, with your bill for 30 pounds from Mr. Hughes, which is promised to be paid in Tyme. RAILROAD MEN CAPTURE GANG OF CAR THIEVES.

Hackensack, Jan. 29.—Six men were arrested yesterday while plundering a freight car of the Susquehanna Railroad Company at Little Ferry Junction. The arrests are part of a war on what is known as the county road gang. The gang is said to have been responsible for a chain of thefts from freight cars of the Susquehanna Railroad Company between this place and Homestead. Detective F. E. Egerton, in the employ of the railroad company, with the aid of a freight train crew, arrested the men.

The car was consigned to D. A. Kerr, of this place, and contained household furniture. Among the things which the thieves were about to make way with was a gold-plated sword of the Knights of Columbus.

The accused were committed by Justice of the Peace Jacob Shweitzer to await the action of the grand jury. They gave their names as George Ahlers, Carl Ruff, William Trunton, Arthur Van Derbiller, James Merrill and George Brown, all of Jersey City.

OVER THE HILL

Davy looked wistfully at the road which passed his aunt's house. He knew that it led to the village, for he had been there, and he could see it on the hill in the distance. He wondered if it ended there or if it kept on and on.

Perhaps if he should follow it a long way, it would take him where his pretty mamma was. His Aunt Kate wasn't pretty, and though she took good care of him, he didn't like her a bit. And there was his papa, who was a doctor and knew a whole lot, but a papa isn't like a mamma, somehow.

Boys always thought more of their mammas—at least boys of seven did. It was hard enough for a little boy not to have a mamma, but it was lots harder to have one and not know where she was.

For two years Davy had not seen his pretty mamma. He remembered vaguely that one morning he had asked for her, and his father, with a grave face, had told him that he couldn't see her any more. He knew that she wasn't dead, for he had heard his papa say once to Aunt Kate:

"It would not have been so hard if she had died."

He had decided then that his mamma had gone a long way off and left him and his papa. At that time they had lived in the city; but the next summer his papa had sent him to see his Aunt Kate and somehow he had stayed with her ever since. This year his father had moved into the country, and now had a large practice.

Davy was not happy. His aunt wouldn't let him do what he wanted to. It was a fancy of his that sometime he should find his pretty mamma if only Aunt Kate would allow him to look for her, and it seemed to him that if he should follow the road over the hill she would be waiting for him somewhere. But he had never had a chance to try until to-day, when his Aunt Kate was called to see a sick neighbor.

Then Davy quickly decided that he would follow the white road over the hill, until he had found his mamma.

It was the hottest day of the season, and the sun beat mercilessly down on the little figure as it trudged bravely along. After awhile Davy grew very tired, but he still kept on. When he reached the steep hill which he had so often looked at from a distance he was nearly exhausted, but he only stopped to rest for a moment.

Then he started to climb it. It was hard work for the little chap, but finally he stood on the summit. Just a little way in the distance was a summer hotel. As he drew near he could see ladies in white linen flitting about, and gentlemen in flannels.

Davy's face was flushed and his throat parched, and although he was usually timid with strangers, he determined he would ask the lady who was sitting under a tree with a tall, dark man bending over her, for a drink of water.

They were talking in low tones and did not see Davy as he approached. He would wait a minute, he thought, before he spoke, for he did not want to interrupt them. The little boy had not seen the man who had ascended the hill a little behind him, and who now stood only a few feet away.

"Why do you follow me from place to place?" the lady was saying. Davy could not see her face, but somehow he was sure he would like her. He did not like the looks of the tall dark man at all.

"You know I—" began the man. But the lady, to silence him, put out her hand; and it looked so soft and white, that Davy wished she would rest it just one minute on his cheeks which were burning as they had never burned before.

"You spoiled my whole life," she went on. "Is that not enough? You made my husband believe that I was false to him. I tried to explain, but he would not listen to me. I had to leave my home—my little child. I came here so I could be near him, so that I might see him perhaps, sometimes—and now you follow me. Why do you persecute me so? You know I despise you."

There was a silence; and Davy stepped forward with uncertain steps. What made his head feel so queer? The lady rose suddenly to her feet, and as she saw Davy she gave a glad little cry. He took another step; then with a smile he fell unconscious into her outstretched arms. "Pretty mamma," he had murmured.

When Davy awoke to consciousness he was lying with his head on his mamma's lap, and his papa was there, too. The tall dark man had gone away.

"How do you feel now?" asked his papa. "I guess the heat was too much for you."

"Oh, I'm all right," said Davy. He would show his pretty mamma how brave he was, and he struggled to his feet, but as he tottered a little, his papa took him up in his arms. For a moment he felt ashamed that his mamma should see this, but when she smiled reassuringly and said it was the best way he felt at east.

"Well, son, I guess we'd better be starting for home now," said his papa.

An icy fear clutched the boy's heart. What if he and his papa were going alone. He couldn't bear that.

"Y-you're coming, ain't you—pretty mamma?" he faltered.

His papa answered the question: "Why, son," he said in a glad voice "of course she's coming."

Your Home---Do You Own It?

"Why, of course," say you, "haven't I the deed and haven't I paid all the interest and taxes?

Caracul Coats $7.50

They never were made to sell for this price, nor did we buy them to sell at so low a figure, in fact, at wholesale many cost us more. But this is not a time for profits, it is a time for clearing out winter stock. You derive the benefit and we are happy if they are sold, for the room they take will soon be needed for spring merchandise which is already well under way.

They are of fine caracul cloth in striped and moire effects, semi-fitted and with shawl collars, well lined with satin, ladies' and misses' sizes, 30 and 36 inches long. They were marked $12.50 and $15.00; choose at $7.50.

Those Suits at $10

are creating a stir; still good choosing in all sizes.

Women's Shoes $1.79

Yes, we know we had a sale of them a week or two ago, and it is really because they sold so well that we are forced to have another sale. Of course, it is practically impossible to sell every shoe from one lot for as the lot becomes smaller it becomes more difficult to fit the feet. We can sell the balance but slowly as people come in that have feet to fit the shoes; but we want a great many to come in, and as we cannot invite them for odd sizes, we will sweeten this lot by drawing on our regular stock of $2.00 and $2.50 shoes and here and there a $3.00 pair.

ALL SIZES. ALL STYLES. ALL LEATHERS.

VISITOR WAS SHERLOCK HOLMES

Marvelous Powers of Deduction That Astonished Storekeeper.

Though it had happened a long time before, the honest storekeeper still spoke of the occurrence with awe.

"It was this way," he said. "I was standing behind the counter in my store, thinking of nothing in particular, when a hawk-eyed gentleman walked in, followed by a quiet, unassuming chap.

"The hawk-eyed gentleman, after looking all about, turned to me.

"'Do you—er—perhaps—sell coffee?' he asked.

"'Yes, sir.'

"'And—sugar?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Nice raisins, too, I take it.'

"'Yes, sir; we have a very superior line of raisins.'

"He paused a while. Then, turning to me again:

"'Cheese?'

"'Yes, sir—good cheese.'

"At that he beckoned to the quiet, unassuming chap and whispered in his ear:

"'What do you make of it?'

"'Not a thing.'

"'Watson—it's—a grocery store!'

"'No!'

"'I'm sure of it, Watson.'

"'Marvelous!'

"And signing to his companion to follow, the hawk-eyed gentleman stole away, with catlike tread, looking warily about him on all sides.

"Not until after he had gone did I realize who my distinguished visitor was."

BUILDING UP WORLD'S CITIES.

Growth of Centers of Population in Past Century.

The century just passed has witnessed an enormous multiplication of large cities and their rapid growth. In 1801 there were in all Europe but 22 cities of more than 100,000 inhabitants, of which only London and Paris had more than 500,000 and none reached 1,000,000. At present there are 160 cities of more than 100,000 inhabitants, 55 above 500,000 and seven of more than 1,000,000. In the entire world there are 13 cities of 1,000,000 or more inhabitants, including the European seven. M. De Foville, a French student of comparative statistics, attributes this unprecedented increase to the fact that the combined efforts of science, industry and invention have actually changed the face of the world. Chemistry, steam and electricity, railways and steamers, gold and credit have all appeared during this period and have given both to men and to affairs an impulse like the stroke of a magic wand.

Tender Tribute.

The author of the following gem is now being assiduously hunted for by all the Kansas newspapers: "Tenderly she laid the silent white form beside those that had gone before. She made no outcry, she did not weep. Such a moment was too precious to be spent in idle tears. But soon there came a time when it seemed as if nature must give way. She lifted her voice and cried loud and long. Her cries were taken up by others who were near and it echoed and re-echoed over the grounds. Then suddenly all was still. What was the use of it all? She would lay another egg to-morrow."—Kansas City Journal.

The Horse's Eyes and Ears.

Never buy a horse that shies without first having a veterinarian examine his eyes for cataract, as the tendency to shy is more often than not the result of defective vision. It may be only a small, bluish white speck to begin with, but even at that stage it impairs the sight, and it is incurable, says a writer in Country Life in America. Any one versed in equine character reading can learn much from the way a horse carries his ears. If they are always "pricked up" or carried forward, he may be partly blind or deaf, or both. If the ears are always laid back he is nervous or vicious, and in either case will give you trouble.

Bee Marmalade.

The analysis of a remarkable Japanese confection is reported in a recent bulletin of the College of Agriculture in Tokyo. This is no less than a "bee marmalade," said to be made of young wild bees and seasoned with soy. The results of the analysis show that the reputed composition of the sweetmeat is quite correct. The marmalade is said to be exported in airtight tin cans. A French commentator remarks sarcastically that it will doubtless be welcomed at tables where they serve grilled locusts, as in Africa, or the Chinese dainty made of silkworm cocoons.

He Hits Back.

There had been a domestic spat at breakfast.

"You monster!" snapped the matron, who was always scolding, "you are not like my two former husbands. They were tender men."

"I never doubted that they were tender, Maria," ventured the meek man, "when you kept them in hot water all the time." And he just cleared the front porch two yards ahead of the rolling pin.

Cruel Candor.

"Was that glass Mrs. Shoddy gave the bride for a wedding present the real thing? She declared it was."

"She told the truth. She got it at a marked-down bargain sale, so whatever the material, it was really cut glass."

A PROGRESSIVE AGE.

"I'm a practical and experienced widow," said the woman in black, "and I want to look at some coffins without any foolishness."

The undertaker looked up with the unhappy smile of his craft.

"We have them all styles and prices," he replied softly and hopefully.

"And how about trading stamps? Give 'em, I suppose."

"No-o," admitted the proprietor, almost losing his professional poise. "The truth is that at these solemn moments our customers do not, as a rule, indicate any desire for stamps."

"I guess I know a solemn moment all right," rejoined the widow; "but there's no use in making it solemner. I've just lost my third, and don't intend to lose a chance at a cuckoo clock into the bargain."

She was gone. The undertaker realized that in the race for business he was being left behind.

NOT SO HONEST.

Tramp—You gave me a coat last week and I found $5 in the pocket.

Lady—Honest man; so you have brought it back?

Tramp—No, lidy; I've come for another coat.—Chicago Journal.

Strictly Proper.

Old Barnacle Ben sat on a tar barrel and rolled his tobacco in his blistered palm.

"Yes, mates," he related to the crowd, "when I was on that Asiatic cruise I certainly saw some wonderful big fish. Why, off from the island of Borneo I caught a fish that measured ten feet from tip to tip."

"Come, come, Ben," protested his listeners. "Fish are not measured from tip to tip. You must be speaking about birds."

Barnacle Ben frowned.

"Now, look here, mates," he growled, "I reckon I know what I am talking about. These here were flying fish and had wings."—Chicago Daily News.

If He Were a Poet.

"If I were a poet," he said with great enthusiasm, "I would write a sonnet on your instep."

"You would, would you?" snarled her father, looming in the doorway. "You try it once and I'll add a footnote that will lift you so high above your contemporaries that they won't be able to see you."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Out of the Dim Past.

Christopher Columbus looked at the land ahead with some trepidation.

"This is close enough," said the great navigator. "If I go any nearer to the mainland I may get into trouble with Castro."

Hastily dropping anchor, he landed on Cat island and decided to leave to others the discovery of the real America.—Chicago Tribune.

Collateral Evidence.

His indulgent grandmother had given him a half of a custard pie.

"You seem to like it, Tommy," she said.

"Like it!" exclaimed Tommy, taking it away from his face for a moment, "jes' see how I'm mussin' up my ears!"—Chicago Tribune.

He Did.

"And you walked along the shores of the Mediterranean? Well, if I had been there I should have brought away a lot of pebbles as souvenirs."

"Gracious, I did! I've got a lot of 'em at home now that I shook out of my shoes after I had gone back to the ship."—Chicago Tribune.

Made Twice the Work.

Customer—What's the charge?

Barber—Fourpence.

Customer—Fourpence? Why, I thought you only charged twopence for a shave?

Barber—Yes, sir; but, you see, you have a double chin.

Had Him Frightened.

"Oh," she said as he led her to a seat, "I could die waltzing."

"Well," he replied, "to tell you the truth, I was afraid, owing to the way you breathed, that you were going to."—Chicago Record-Herald.

No Use.

Mamma—When that boy threw stones at you, why didn't you come and tell me instead of throwing them back?

Little Son—Tell you? Why, you couldn't hit a barn door.

Usually He Hasn't.

It doesn't follow, because a man happens to have a little more money in his pocket than he used to, that he has any more brains in his head.—Detroit Free Press.

MUSINGS.

Poor judgment is the blossom and bad luck is the fruit.

A girl's cheeks naturally burn when she is made light of.

After inheriting a fortune a crank gets to be merely eccentric.

The man who gets his price seldom wins the public's applause.

All the world's a stage, and nearly all the actors thereon are high kickers.

Absent treatment is one of the things that will sometimes cure a lovesick youth.

No woman can be very friendly with any other woman whom her husband likes.

If any man lives for himself alone it must be because he has found his earthly ideal.

Remember that as the guest you get more enjoyment out of it than you would as the host.

Did it ever occur to you that the majority of life's real pleasures are comparatively inexpensive?

One of the worst things that can be said about love is that so much of it is adulterated with money.

A woman thinks a man is extravagant because he would just as soon pay $10 for anything he wants as $9.98.

If only men without freckles on their reputation should butt into the political game it would be something like solitaire.

PENCIL POINTS.

When a woman has her hair fixed up she is half dressed.

Lot's wife may have been peppery before she turned to salt.

It's awfully hard for a crooked man to keep in the straight path.

A man may follow his natural bent and yet be perfectly straight.

You can flatter a homely man by telling him that his baby looks like him.

Many a girl who marries for money doesn't even draw a housekeeper's salary.

If you require food for thought go to the public library and get a free lunch.

Beauty is only skin deep, but the skin of a rhinoceros is too deep to show it up to advantage.

And it occasionally happens that after sowing his wild oats a young man reaps a grass widow.

A woman would rather have a man say he loved her and lie about it than have him really love her and say nothing.

A spendthrift, like a buzz saw, scatters lots of dust while running around, and has nothing but his board to show for it.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The best way to kill a falsehood is to let it lie.

A man's talk shows up best after a good dinner.

If a man is financially weak he's unable to stand a loan.

The things that would make a woman happy look foolish to a man.

It's only a matter of time until a white lie takes on a somber hue.

Many a man who can't write has made his dollar mark in the world.

Never show your dislike unless there is a point to be gained thereby.

If a man is a financial success people overlook the means that made him so.

It doesn't take a girl long to catch a husband after she begins to pose as a man-hater.

The largest sinking fund in the world is represented by the money lost in the sea.

Nothing pleases one woman more than being the first to convey a piece of information to another.

The average girl treats a new acquaintance better than she does an old friend—so the old friend thinks.

And the woman who looks as though she had a secret sorrow is always interesting—until she begins to turn it loose.—Chicago Daily News.

QUIPS.

To gain happiness, give it.

Remorse is merely indigestion of the conscience.

When twins arrive, either of two proverbs are appropriate—"It isn't often that Fortune knocks twice at one's door," or "Trouble never comes singly."

NO SAINTS FOR HIM.

A lawyer named Ratcliffe was famous in his circle for scepticism and his hatred for religious things. One time this Mr. Ratcliffe had occasion to go to St. Albans to take testimony in a law case in which he was engaged. He amused himself during the proceedings by continually alluding to the town as "Albans," instead of "St. Albans."

Presently one of the local lawyers present asked:

"Why do you call this place 'Albans?'"

"Because I don't like saints," said Mr. Ratcliffe.

"Oh!"

Nothing more was said on the subject, but by and by, the work being completed, the lawyer rose to take his departure.

"Good-bye, gentlemen," he said to three or four St. Albans men who were present.

"Good-bye, Mr. Cliffe," they all answered at once.

"What do you mean by calling me Mr. Cliffe?" he exclaimed.

"Why, we don't like rats," said one of the St. Albans men.

Reasons.

"What are your wife's reasons for wanting to vote?"

"Well," answered Mr. Meekton, "I don't know exactly; but I think Henrietta believes the destinies of the nation would be more secure if they had iced tea and lettuce sandwiches at elections and decorated the ballots with poster designs."—Washington Star.

Uncertainties of Fame.

"In Europe it is customary to name streets after great men."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "In some cases the compliment is a little bit unsatisfactory owing to the difficulty of foretelling what kind of a street it is going to be."—Washington Star.

The Difference of a Vowel.

"The reasoning in your campaign talk," remarked the cautious friend, "is good; but I doubt the correctness of the premises."

"My constituents don't care for premises," answered Senator Sorghum. "They're interested in promises."—Washington Star.

THEY ALSO SERVE.

Rampus—Yes. I'm willing to admit that football is a good game for those who play, but most of the students take no part in it.

Campus—Well, we've got to have somebody to root for us, haven't we?

Depressing.

All work and no play made Jack a dull boy.

But that wasn't the worst.

It made him enormously wealthy, too—so wealthy that his wife and daughters became deeply infected with social ambition.

That was the worst, Jack being dragged out to dinners and musicales and dancing parties, where he cut a sorry figure and was extremely wretched.—Puck.

Desperate Author's Desperate Remedy.

"Brainleigh, the novelist, allowed himself to be run down by an auto yesterday."

"Why such insane daring?"

"He hopes to get enough out of the owner of the machine to enable him to publish his new novel himself."—Puck.

The Popular Distrust of Literature.

"Shakespeare was not considered a great poet in his own day."

"No," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, "that's where he was lucky. As long as his plays were not regarded as real poetry, people were willing to pay liberally to see them."—Washington Star.

The Professor.

"Uncertainty," moralized the doctor, "is the poison that lurks in everything in this life."

"Certainly," said the professor; "life itself is one-half 'if.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Domestic Politics.

"Whom did you support during the last campaign?"

"A wife, two children and a mother-in-law and kept up my life insurance at the same time."—Puck.

Hard Work.

Flipper—What is he doing since he went broke?

Flapper—Trying to keep the knowledge from his friends.

The Reason of It.

Perhaps one reason why politeness pays so well is that so few people think politeness worth while.—Detroit Free Press.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Whereas, the Comptroller did, on the fourth day of January, nineteen hundred and nine, under the provisions of an act entitled "A further supplement to an act entitled 'An act to provide for the imposition of state taxes upon certain corporations and for the collection thereof,' approved April 18, 1884," which supplementary act was approved June 3, 1905, report to the Governor a list of all corporations coming under said act; and

Whereas, under the provisions of said act the charters of said corporations are repealed and all powers conferred by law upon such corporations declared inoperative and void, unless the governor gives further time for payment; and

Whereas, the Governor has not given further time to the corporations so reported and hereinafter named for the payment of such taxes, and the same are still unpaid; now,

Therefore, I, John Franklin Fort, Governor of the state of New Jersey, pursuant to the provisions of said act of the legislature, do hereby issue this my proclamation that the charters of the following named corporations so reported and in default, to wit:

THE PROFESSOR MADE A HIT.

"Yes," said Prof. Knowitall, at a social gathering, addressing his remarks to a small man to whom he had been introduced. "I flatter myself that I have never failed to read a face correctly."

"So?" queried the small man, politely interested.

"Yes. Now there is a lady," continued the professor, indicating a 200-pound specimen of the fair sex, "the lines of whose countenance are as clear to me as print. The chin shows firmness of disposition amounting to obstinacy, the pointed nose a vicious temperament, the capacious mouth volubility, the square chin denotes trouble for those who oppose her wishes, the eyes show a hardness of heart—"

"Wonderful—truly wonderful, professor," interrupted the small man.

"You evidently know something of the lady, then?" said the professor.

"Certainly," replied the small man. "She is my wife."

DIDN'T SECOND THE MOTION.

Poetical Youth—Father, how can you behold unmoved the glory of the autumn woods?

His Father—I don't; an' I move right now that you take this here ax an' cut me 'bout ten cords of wood outen 'em. So jerk off your coat an' light in.

The Right Man.

Tailor (to applicant for a job)—We want a good cutter. Have you had much experience in tailoring?

Applicant (with a confident smile)—I never had a suit of clothes ready when I said I would since I've been in the business.

Tailor—You'll do. You must be an old hand.

A Pictorial Traitor.

"Smiggs never talks about people."

"No," answered the man who is reluctant to praise; "he never talks about people, but he takes snapshot pictures of his friends and shows them behind their backs."—Washington Star.

No Legislation Needed.

Foreign Visitor—Mrs. Vidders, can a woman marry her deceased husband's brother in this country?

Mrs. Vidders—Yes; she can if she chooses, but she seldom does. She generally knows him too well.—Chicago Tribune.

Innocent.

"Edith, I was ashamed of you when you called Mr. Midlage an old man to his face."

"Why, mamma, I did nothing of the kind. I wouldn't be as impolite as that for the world. I called him an old gentleman."—Chicago Tribune.

To Be Avoided.

The Artist—You have a perfect head.

The Model—Then I suppose I may say that my head is my fortune?

The Artist—Exactly. But if you're not exceedingly careful, it may become a swollen fortune.

Nature Below Art.

Guide—What do you think of that? Isn't it a magnificent view?

Miss Blassay—I must confess my disappointment. But then (apologetically) I've seen postals of the place, you know.—Puck.

The Fall.

Sabbath School Teacher—Quite right, Johnnny. And now, when the serpent had tempted Eve to eat the apple, what did Eve do?

Johnny—Well, she fell for it.—Puck.

Conditions.

Nodd—Do you think it is possible for a man to live in New York on ten thousand a year?

Todd—He might, if he rode on street cars, took only one paper and lived on prunes.—Life.

Sound in One Respect.

"How is that horse you bought?"

"Well," answered the man who tries to be optimistic; "his legs ain't very good and his hoofs have a few cracks and his wind is poor, but he has a great appetite."—Washington Star.

Didn't Know Him.

Bob—Introduce me to the old guy.

The Hostess—Why, you must know him. He's the president of your college.

"No, I don't. He isn't interested in athletics."—Life.

A Generous Love.

Mother—Tottie, you must be generous with your candy. Pass it around.

Tottie (to guest)—Take all you want. Take two.—Life.

THINKLETS.

The bigot is sometimes pretty little.

The dead sure thing is often so dead that it can't be resuscitated.

The man who borrows money on his future never catches up with it.

The difference between a man and a mule is that a mule kicks with his feet.

Don't ask a candid man for his honest opinion unless you are prepared for a jolt.

No, Maude, dear, we wouldn't say that the people who live on tick are as regular as clockwork.

When a man's wife begins to lecture him on the sins of gambling it's a pretty sure sign he has been losing.

When a fellow has more money than he knows what to do with he always has a lot of friends anxious to tell him.

First Actor—"Henry Hamphat has had a five-cent cigar named after him." Second Actor—"I hope it draws better than Hamphat does."

Nell—"Jack asked me to marry him last night." Belle—"Did he press you for answer?" Nell—"Press me? He nearly squeezed the life out of me."

When a man wears a swallow-tail coat and a woman wears a decollete gown it proves that clothes don't make the man or lack of them the woman.—Philadelphia Record.

SAID BY THE OWL.

In hustling for No. 2 a widow looks out for No. 1.

The average man keeps a lot of ready-made excuses on tap.

In after years what a man doesn't know his son can teach him.

A man's enjoyment of a cigar is not governed by the cost thereof.

You are not entitled to much credit for doing the things you want to do.

The outcome of a trip on the matrimonial sea depends largely on the ballast.

How a man does like to have his wife refer to him as an authority on anything!

A woman isn't necessarily the sunshine of a man's life because she makes it hot for him.

When a man shouts his virtues from the housetop it's time for people to sit up and take unfavorable notice.

Every married woman should imagine that her husband is the only man who has brains enough to understand her.

If the festive gobbler escapes the Thanksgiving slaughter on account of old age he should rejoice because of his tough luck.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

The reason the baby is always so smart is because its parents aren't.

When a girl meets a man she likes in the street by accident it hardly ever is.

All a woman has to do to be able to manage a man is not to be married to him.

The reason a woman can think her husband is clever is because she knows he isn't.

A woman can deceive everybody about how she trusts her husband, especially herself.

If a man didn't waste his money on his own favorite foolishness he would on some other fellow's.

When a man prefers to live in the suburbs he wouldn't if his wife would let him live in the city.

A good thing about a college education would be if somebody could invent a way to make it useful to a man.

One of the delights about gambling is how the men who do it can always tell when they win and never when they lose.

A girl would much rather you told her how pretty she is than how much brains she has, but you might just as well tell her both.

BUSINESS PHILOSOPHY.

Play is work that you don't have to do.

Never hire a traveling man whose waistcoat is more insistent than his personality.

Don't rise so high in your calling that you see only one side of your fellows.

It's true that a marble statue has no faults—but then it has no friends, either.

There are plenty of doors labeled "Pull," but the majority, after all, bear the legend "Push."

There are self-made men in this world who ought to be suffering from remorse.—Lippincott's Magazine.

TWISTERS FOR TORPID TONGUES.

Some alliterative gems from an elocutionist's collection that will tie knots in the tongue of the most careful speaker:

A growing gleam glowing green.

The bleak breeze blighted the bright blossoms.

Flesh of freshly dried flying fish.

It is simply impossible for any one to repeat these three sentences fast. They are the gems of a collection of tongue twisters that an elocutionist has made. And almost equally difficult are the following, taken at random from the elocutionist's collection of more than 200 tongue twisters:

Six thick thistle sticks.

Two toads tried to trot to Tedbury.

Give Grimes Jim's great gilt gig whip.

Strict, strong Stephen Stringer snared slickly six sickly silky snakes.

She stood at the door of Mrs. Smith's fish sauce shop welcoming him in.—Scrapbook.

His Tailor Was Anxious.

"By Jove," said Reggy Sapp, "it doesn't pay to let the girls mix you up in their fads. Miss Rose went around telling people I was interested in settlement work."

"And what happened?" asked his chum.

"Why, my tailor got wind of it and he wrote me a note stating he would like a settlement at once."—Chicago Daily News.

Queered.

Jack—I just had a reason why I wanted to kiss you.

Eva—And what was the reason?

Jack—Er—really, I have lost it and—

Eva—Well, that will do. I couldn't think of allowing a young man who had lost his reason to kiss me. Good night.—Chicago Daily News.

Dispelling His Fear.

Collector (warmly)—I've been here a dozen times, sir, and I positively won't call again!

Mr. Poorpay (cheerfully)—Oh, come, now, old man, don't be so superstitious about making the thirteenth call—nothing will happen, I assure you.—Puck.

Real Mean.

Madge—How is it you don't speak to Edith any more?

Dolly—She won three of my engagement rings from me playing bridge.—Puck.

A PARADOX.

"That man Robinsky is the most worthless fellow I ever had the misfortune to meet."

"That's strange. I happen to know that his life is insured for $20,000."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Had a Kick Coming.

"See here, Mr. Sands," said Mrs. Tightwad, "that cheese is full of holes."

"Yes, ma'am," rejoined the grocery-man, "that's the way it comes."

"Well, I don't want it," said Mrs. T. "I'm not going to pay for half a pound of holes."—Chicago Daily News.

Our Language.

"Glad to see you, old man."

"Thanks. I'm glad we happened to meet. Where are you located now?"

"I'm in the new Cloud-Tickler building—ninety-eighth floor. Drop in and see me some time when you're passing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Travel.

"Don't you think travel broadens one?"

"Yes. After ma's trip to Massachusetts she didn't have a thing hardly that she could wear. And hips are so unfashionable now, too."—Chicago Record-Herald.

An All-Round Actor.

Mrs. Sportington—I shall want you promptly at ten, Parker.

Parker—Yes, mem, but—beg parding, mem—will you want me as chauffeur, groom or coachman, mem?—Puck.

Natural.

Visitor (in prison)—And that convict standing over yonder?

Guard—He's a trusty.

Visitor—Indeed! What trust was he connected with, if I may ask?—Puck.

She Would Never Rise.

"I heard to-day Miss Bond's grandfather was a baker."

"He must have been a poor one."

"Why do you say that?"

"She is so heavy."—Puck.

Sure.

A man may be the head of the family, but it's the woman's hat bills that cost the most.—Detroit Free Press.

Defined.

She—What is "platonic love?"

He—The straight and narrow path which does not lead to alimony.

NERVES OF LEARNED PEOPLE.

May Be Calmed by Silence, Solitude and Sleep, Says One Writer.

In an article on "Nerves," published in Harper's Bazaar, the story is told of one of our noted scientists who went to Dresden to consult the famous specialist for broken-down nerves. On hearing his symptoms the great physician said, indifferently:

"Ach, so? It is probable that you have—yes, all the gelehrten (learned) have neurasthenia naturally." The remedy suggested was "Play golf and go to Egypt. You can get Munich beer in Cairo, though it is disgustingly expensive there."

Silence, solitude and sleep are the sovereign remedies suggested for jagged nerves. Slight daily doses of the three "S's," it is claimed, will prevent a nervous breakdown, and may be obtained by even the most busy people. But "All the learned have neurasthenia" is at once a warning and a consolation to the brain worker. To "drive the machine" with skill and care is the problem of the successful American.

The writer of this article urges that we ought to thank God that we belong to the most nervous, restless, all-pervading race the world has seen since the days of Julius Caesar. It is our "nerves" that make us what we are.

MAIN THING IS TO KEEP COOL.

Advice for Those Who May Lose Their Way in the Woods.

Let the man who is lost in the woods be very careful not to overexert himself. His chief dangers lie in panic and overexertion, and, though he may be in a great hurry to find shelter, I must warn him to go slowly. Two miles an hour, on an average, through the snow in the woods, is all that a man in his condition will be able to stand without overfatigue and its attendant dangers, overheating and perspiration. By exercising caution, a man may live through a week of what he is undergoing. To make this article brief, we shall suppose that he regains the road by the afternoon of the first day. He doesn't yet know, of course, just where he is. He should examine the tracks of the person who last passed that way. It being afternoon, he must follow the direction taken by the last passing vehicle or team, as shelter will be nearest in that direction. Had it been morning he would have taken the opposite direction, as whoever made the tracks must have come from the place where he obtained shelter the previous night.—Outing Magazine.

Commerce.

If commerce hath wrought wonders till wonders never cease, not least among them is that in virtue of which we fatten bulls with wheat that falls—the nice distinction of meum and tuum whereby misfortunes are rendered into assets—thy misfortunes into my assets.

A thousand years ago you might get it in the neck, and that would be about all—you would perhaps be the wiser, but no man would be any the richer. Now, however, the sun cannot burn up a Hindu's rice, or the hail pound a Russian's corn into the ground, without somebody's prosperity being boosted. And that is because, in spite of poets and other kickers, commerce has steadily come on.

Truth Versus Politeness.

Ethel was going to take supper with a little friend.

"Now, dear," said her mother, "when you are leaving, you must bid Marian's mamma good night, and tell her you have had a very pleasant time."

When the little girl returned, her mother asked if she had done as she told her.

"Not 'zactly, mamma," was the reply. "Marian took the biggest piece of the apple and spilled lemonade on my new dress, so I couldn't say what you told me, but I told her mother good night, and I said I guessed Marian had had a very pleasant time."—Judge.

Natural Question.

Little Margaret went with her mother to the dock to see her aunt set sail on the big ocean steamer. Margaret had never seen the big steamer before and she watched everything with great interest. The monster of a boat slipped slowly away from the dock and Margaret waved her hand frantically with the rest. Then she looked up at her mother solemnly.

"Mamma," she questioned, "does the water follow that ship all the way over to England?"

Delicate Way of Putting It.

"I met a relative of Bill Jones the other day, and he told me Bill had gone into business where he was making money so fast that he had to give it up and go into seclusion for a while."

"So he did."

"Is he at a sanitarium for his health?"

"No; he's in the penitentiary for counterfeiting."

Room for Sophie.

Sophie, the maid, was cross, and little Richmond did not like her.

In his prayer the other night he said: "God bless papa and mamma and Harold and Willie and Helen."

"But you haven't said: 'God bless Sophie'," reminded his mother.

"Oh, well," Richmond said resignedly, "let her go in with the bunch!"—Bohemian Magazine.

Trained Nurses at Sea.

One of the great transatlantic steamship lines has added trained nurses to the medical personnel of its vessels. This opens a sea career for the trained nurse. BUILT WITHOUT GRAFT

Somerset County Proud of Its Handsome Marble Temple of Justice.

IT WILL COST COUNTY $290,000.

A Model in Modern Exterior Construction and Arrangement —New Proposed Armory.

Justice is soon to have a new home in Somerset county and plans are being made for a housewarming, which, it is hardly necessarw to say, will be along dignified lines. The new temple of justice is situated in Somerville, the county seat, on the site of the old Court House. It is a white marble structure and the residents of the entire county, but especially those of Somerville, are intensely proud of it. Not only is its exterior imposing, but the interior, considering both its ornamental and practical features, is said to be such as to place the edifice in the first rank of public buildings.

Attention of the public in all parts of New Jersey and in other States has been attracted by the new Court House. Not only have many inquiries been made by letter, but several delegations from other counties and municipalities where it is proposed to erect public buildings have inspected Somerset's marble palace. The most recent visit of that kind was made by a committee from Bergen county that has been appointed to erect a new court house in Hackensack. It is small wonder that Somerville's citizens are proud, for, in addition to the fact that it will greatly facilitate the transaction of the county's business, which for many years has been hampered by lack of room, it will be a pronounced ornament to the town.

There is another feature of the new court house, however, on which the residents, and more especially the authorities, of the county pride themselves. This is exemplified in the answer of Justice of the Peace Arthur P. Sutphen, clerk of the County Board of Freeholders, when he was asked how much the building cost. "It cost $290,000, without a dollar of graft." There is not the slightest reason to doubt that assertion. Mr. Sutphen, by the way, has been clerk of the Board of Freeholders since 1875, with the exception of the three years from 1881 to 1884.

Somerset is one of the oldest counties in the State. It was formed in 1688. The first court house was erected at Franklin Park in 1717. It was destroyed by fire, with all the records it contained, in 1734. The following year a new court house was erected at Millstone. That one was burned in October, 1779, as were many other public and private structures during the Revolutionary War. In 1782 a little building was erected in Somerville, where the stables of the Somerset Inn now stand.

The site of the present building, at the corner of East Main and Grove street, was purchased by the county in 1799 and a brick ecourt house was erected. That building was used for more than a century, until it was torn down to make room for the present structure. It had a frontage of sixty feet in East Main street and was forty-two feet deep. The building was inadequate to the needs of the county by 1840, when two small brick buildings, one on each side of the court house, for the use of the county clerk and county surrogate, were built. These buildings are still standing, but will be removed when the county clerk and the surrogate have moved into their offices in the new court house.

Although Somerset is still what might be called a rural, or agricultural, county, the volume of public business has tremendously increased in the last twenty-five years. The building that had done service for 106 years had utterly outgrown its usefulness when in 1905 the Board of Freeholders appointed a special committee to erect a new court house and jail. A comprehensive scheme for the county buildings was decided upon, and the jail was erected first in the rear of the court house. It is a date features of buildings of that kind, and will meet the requirements of the county for many years to come. The erection of the jail was completed in December, 1906.

Contracts for the new court house were awarded on May 12, 1907, and work was started the following July. The cornerstone was laid on November 8, 1907, with Masonic ceremonies. The exercises were held under the direction of Solomon's Lodge, No. 46, F. and A. M., of Somerville. Austen H. McGregor, grand master of the State, and other officers of the New Jersey Grand Lodge, officiated. The ceremonies were attended by all of the county

MITCHELL CAR BEST IN ENDURANCE RUN

The 156-mile automobile endurance race from Hartford through Winsted to Pittsfield and Springfield, Mass., and return to Hartford on Wednesday was won by a Mitchell car, driven by B. F. Smith, after it had been in collision with a telephone pole early in the start at Avon, getting a badly bent steering knuckle and having its running board ripped off and fenders smashed. The course was principally over icy roads and brakes were of little use. The Mitchel car was ten hours making the trip.

Two of five cars entered were disabled in accidents, and the other two entrants are on the homeward stretch from Pittsfield Thursday night. A test car, driven by John Coffey of Hartford, and running ahead of the Mitchell, skidded into a bridge between Sheffield and Great Barrington and became firmly wedged. No one was hurt, but the car and the bridge were badly damaged.

The referee's car, containing Philip E. Curtiss of Hartford, and a chauffeur, turned turtle north of Stockbridge. Both occupants were thrown out, but neither was hurt. The Maxwell No. 2, driven by Herbert S. King, broke a driving pin and was detached. No one was hurt. The Mitchell No. 2 took the wrong course after leaving Hartford and its where abouts are unknown.

MR. M'CLYMONT RESIGNS AS GRACE CHOIRMASTER

William E. MacClymont, who, for several years has been the organist and choirmaster at Grace church, has tendered his resignation to take effect May 1. His reason for taking this action are that his position with The Aeolian Company, of New York, requires so much of his time, that he has found it necessary to give up his work here. It is possible that he may not resume organ work again.

For many years Mr. MacClymont has been a prominent figure in local musical circles. His first position here as organist was at the Church of the Holy Cross. From there he went to the First Baptist church, where he remained for a long time and with much success. He then accepted the position as organist at the First Presbyterian church, afterward taking a similar position in New York, which he combined with other work of the same character in other places. He was then engaged as organist and choirmaster at Grace church, which position he has filled with eminent satisfaction.

In addition to his church work, Mr. MacClymont has also been successful in conducting oratories, musicales and his latest effort here was a comic opera which he produced with great success at the New Plainfield theatre. His organ recitals at Grace church on Sunday afternoons have also attracted considerable attention and through his efforts a fine vested choir was organized. Who his successor will be is not known at present.

Surprised Laurence Green.

A surprise party was given in honor of Laurence Green at his home on West Third street, last night. An informal program was enjoyed and refreshments were served. Those present were Annie Grindley, John Grindley, Arthur Jeffrey, Edith Jeffrey, Agnes Green, Joseph Green, Blanche Askham, Nellie Askham, Emma Askham, Edna Brown, Mrs. William Dean, Mrs. William Askham, Miss Kitty Green played several piano selections and games were also a feature.

She has also received an offer to sing at the West End Presbyterian church, New York, where Ward Stevens is the organist. She was selected out of fifty-two candidates for the position of soloist.

Foresters Meeting.

—Neuman Brothers are offering an exceptional line of canned fruits, choice variety, all standard goods at twenty-five cents a can. Special price by the dozen. They include peaches, pears, plums and apricots.

Probably no Christian congregation in Union county, excepting probably that of St. Patrick's R. C., in Elizabeth, has today as fine an edifice as the renovated house of worship of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterians in this city. The extensive improvements costing many thousands of dollars are now completed and the interior of the structure as transformed presents a most beautiful ecclesiastical appearance. James E. Ware & Son, of New York, were the architects and the list of contractors have already been enumerated in this paper.

Among the important features of the changes to the interior of the church is the introduction of old English exposed trusses with their tracery, carrying the lines of the interior up to the roof bridge. These trusses are entirely of chestnut, showing a handsome grain and have been stained an antique walnut color. Under the ends of each truss are dignified Norman columns. The pulpit niche has been raised in height and beautifully treated in Old Norman architecture executed in Caen stone. On the back wall of the niche is a handsome lacquered gold plaque framed with a rich ecclesiastical painted border. Upon the plaque is stenciled in glass mosaic the symbols Alpha and Oemga, and a text from the New Testament.

Five new handsome Gothic pulpit stalls executed in black walnut fill the remainder of the niche directly under the plaque. The centre stall will be occupied by the minister of the church. The other four stalls will be occupied by the ministers of the Warren, Bethel and Hope chapels, and the missionary minister, Changteh, Hunan, China. Each stall bears a beautiful bronze inscription plate.

A complete new lighting scheme has been introduced, adding greatly to the beauty of the interior. From the ends of each truss hang cast bronze electroliers, made from original designs, and carrying out the combined Gothic and Romanesque intermingling of style. Around each fixture is placed eighteen amber tinted incandescent lights, producing a soft golden glow. The fixtures under the gallery and in the vestibules and staircases leading to the gallery are carried out in harmony with the large electroliers and the effect when illuminated is very churchly. All the side walls and gable ends of the church have been treated with glazed colors to represent old medieval stone work. All the electroliers, organ pipes and plaque in pulpit niche have been finished in dull antique gold. The new windows, throughout the entire interior, have been executed in simple amber glass, producing an effect of warm sunlight within, on the grayest of winter days.

The woodwork, throughout, has been kept in harmony with the present black walnut pews and gallery. The church floor has been covered complete with fine quality quartered oak. Down the aisles will be carried strips of handsome Wilton carpet of a soft olive green color and the gallery will be covered entirely with carpet to correspond. The pews have been re-cushioned, throughout, with fine hair cushions covered with a soft olive green Venetian plush. The effect of the color scheme is extremely quiet, but very rich and dignified; the aim being to produce quiet and restful effects.

TRINITY WOMEN FED 585 AT THEIR SUPPER

The turkey supper was continued at Trinity Reformed church, last night, with unabadted success. The Ladies' Christian Work Society, under whose auspices the affair was arranged, was more than gratified with the large patronage accorded. The first night 371 suppers were served and last night, despite the disagreeable weather the number served was 214, making a total of 585 for the two nights.

Everything was sold out and considering the night the large attendance surprised everyone. The society will realize a handsome profit and the women are very thankful to their host of friends who made the supper such a success. Pastor Broek was present last night and proved himself to be a good salesman as well as a preacher. A very enjoyable evening was spent by everyone.

A pleasing feature was the piano selections by Masters Ernest Stevens and Russell Vroom, two talented players. They entertained the guests throughout the supper hours with an attractive program of music.

HEROISM OF WOMEN PREVENTS FIRE LOSS

A fire at the home of A. B. Davies on Belvidere avenue last night, was subdued by the heroic efforts of Mrs. Davies and the maid, who worked with buckets of water in the face of a blinding, choking smoke which filled the room.

The flame started from a curtain which came in contact with a gas jet, in the nursery, where the little boy was playing. The blaze quickly spread to the wall decorations and had made considerably headway when attacked by the women.

The fire department responded with a hose cart and chemical wagon. Their services were hardly needed, however. Chief Doane, who accompanied the fire fighters, praised the work of the women. Seasoned firemen would have had difficulty in coping with the conditions which he found had been successfully overcome. The loss amounted to about $100.

PUBLIC SERVICE has added 860 cars of the most modern type to its rolling stock equipment.

PUBLIC SERVICE has extended its five-cent carfare zones and enlarged its transfer privileges.

PUBLIC SERICE has increased its electric lighting and railway power generating capacity from 47,700 kilowatts in 1903 to 102,900 kilowatts in 1908.

This means 137,200 horsepower available for generating electricity at the present time as against 63,600 horsepower at the time PUBLIC SERVICE acquired the properties.

PUBLIC SERVICE has put into effect throughout almost its entire system a base rate of ten cents per kilowatthour for electricity, whereas many consumers formerly paid as high as eighteen or twenty cents.

PUBLIC SERVICE has increased its mileage of gas mains from 1,335 miles in 1903 to 2,037 miles in 1908, of which increase 232 miles were acquired by lease, and has made dollar gas a reality in all but a small portion of its territory. Some sections getting dollar gas now were paying all the way to $1.80 six years ago.

All these changes have vastly bettered the service and the public derives the benefit. And all these improvements were instituted and carried out in accordance with a well defined policy, fixed by the company at the outset of its operations, to give the people the best possible service at the lowest feasible rates.

This policy is to be continued and the service in all three departments of railway, gas and electricity is to be made as nearly perfect and as low priced as the wise expenditure of money and intelligent effort can make it.

MAY BE INSANE OVER LOSS OF HIS ESTATE.

William Schneider, a mason, twenty-five years old, who boards at 121 Smith street, Elizabeth, was committed to jail yesterday for a medical examination to determine his sanity. He became very violent in the street at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, and it took a couple of policemen to subdue him. He is a son of the late Louis Schneider, who was a wealthy master mason of Elizabeth, who died in Germany several years ago. Before going to Europe he had appointed William Miller, a local merchant, as executor of his estate.

Miller's dead body, badly mangled, was found on the Central Railroad tracks between Lorraine and Roselle in the summer of 1907. Miller was said to be financially embarrassed at the time of his death. It is said the Schneider estate was absorbed in Miller's financial wreck, and it is claimed this has preyed on William Schneider's mind.

SHOOTER OF CHUM PAROLED.

Christopher Meyer, who at first gave his name as Wagner, fifteen years old, arrested Thursday for attempting to kill Edmund Labor, twelve years old, at Wyckoff, Saturday night, was paroled by Judge Denel in New York yesterday morning in the care of the Gerry Society. Both boys live in New York and came to this State to start on a "Wild West" trip.

Meyer told the court he shot at his companion five times because he would not return home. One bullet went through Labor's hat and another laid open the side of his head. Meyer said he gave a tramp $5 in Park Row to go to buy a pistol and the tramp did so, retaining $2.50 as his own share of the money.

PATERSON LAWYER SENTENCED

Robert P. Geyer, a prominent lawyer of Paterson, was yesterday morning sentenced by Justice Francis Scott in the Court of Quarter Sessions, to serve two months in the county jail at hard labor and pay a fine of $1,000. Geyer had nothing to say. Geyer was charged with the embezzlement of $400 from Mr. and Mrs. Emil Geering, the former being a prominent silk dyer in Paterson.

It was alleged that Geering paid Geyer $5,000 to give to Mrs. Geering to quash divorce proceedings which she had started. Geyer is said to have turned over all but $400.

NOTICE ONE-COLOR SCHEME IN EVENING DRESSES NOW.

The predominance of a one-color scheme is most noticeable this winter and there is a lively scamper for trimmings to match. In some cases there is failure in quest for such colors, in which case other colors must be used. While one color may be used, several materials of the same shade can be combined. For example, one dress of pink satin was trimmed with real pink corals of the same shade. It had a pink yoke and was worn with suede slippers. The sleeves were down up to half length with pink velvet cords, so this, you see, brought out many very good materials.

Apropos of the evening dress, the most noticeable feature is th miniature tight sleeves that covers only half the upper arm and fits very snug to the arm. Strange to say, the sleeve is very plain, but it had best be so, because the corsage is decollete.

On one evening dress of black satin was an apron effect of back pailleted net, with a gold edge. It was pointed at the front at the very edge of the dress, the bib formed the waist front and the sides, which, by the way, were pointed, for the apron was almost a diamond shape and held back with a loose black satin sash that tied low upon the dress. Of course, the back of the dress was very short-waisted.

WANT DISTRICT COURT IN MORRISTOWN SECTION.

The lawyers of Morris County wish to have a district court established at Morristown, and Thursday posted the usual notice saying that an application will be made to the Legislature for the creation of such a court.

It is to be known as the First Judicial District of Morris County, and will include Morristown, the boroughs of Madison and Chatham, Morris and Chatham townships and Florham Park. The effect of the establishment of such a court will be to do away with courts of justices of the peace and materially reduce the number of such magistrates, as there will be little or no business for them.

FORT ANSWERS JR. O. U. A. M.

Says His State Tax Recommendation Doesn't Affect School Fund.

It became known today that the letter to the members of the Junior Order United American Mechanics criticizing Governor Fort for his position on the disposition of the school tax money was written by Crafton E. Day, State Councilor of the order, and William H. Miers, secretary, and that while the letter is marked official, it is only the expression of the opinion of the officers, not of the Supreme Council nor of the membership of the organization.

Gov. Fort said: "The effort seemed to be to make it appear that the proposed increase of the proportion of railway taxes that should come to the State was an attack upon the public school system.

"The school fund is an invested fund and is no part, and never has been any part, of the taxes derived from railway property, and the fund is not touched in any way by any suggestion which I have made."

The Governor said that the suggestion he had made would relieve the necessity of a direct State tax; would still give to the schools over $500,000 from the railway taxes, and if the valuation of railway property should be increased in the future, would probably give them over $2,000,000 as at present.

TAFT ON TARIFF COMMISSION.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Letters passing between President-elect Taft and Richard Campion, of Philadelphia, in reference to Mr. Taft's position toward a tariff commission, were given out for publication here yesterday by Representative J. Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia. Mr. Campion had asked Mr. Taft for a further expression of his views concerning a letter that Mr. Taft wrote to Henry Reisenberg.

To the not of Mr. Campion, Mr. Taft replied, under date of Augusta, Ga., January 18, as follows:

"I didn't expect my letter to Mr. Reisenberg to be printed, but now that it has been published, I have no objection to saying to you that what I meant was that I think there ought to be some commission of experts in the government who shall keep track of the varying costs of production of the numerous articles under the tariff. The great trouble about the tariff is the difficulty of obtaining a knowledge of the facts, and I think we ought to have experts to do it. Of course, I have no idea of taking away from Congress the power to make the schedules. Congress would not have the power to delegate this function, and I would not ask it from them if they did.

Day of Prayer for Colleges.

New Brunswick, Jan. 30.—Rutgers College observed the day of prayer for colleges Thursday. Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Plainfield, a graduate of Williams College, preached the sermon in Kirkpatrick chapel. The sermon was followed by a prayer meeting conducted by the president, Dr. Demarest, with Dr. Zelie and Dr. Searle, of the Theological Seminary.

TRIO OF MURDERERS ENTER STATE PRISON.

Smiling and apparently without realization of their plight, Walter Zeller, Herbert Grigg and Cline Wheeler, the boys who were convicted at Bridgeton last week for the murder of William Reed, grandfather of the Zeller boy, were received yesterday in the New Jersey State Prison at Trenton.

Zeller was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be electrocuted the week beginning March 8. Griggs and Wheeler were convicted of murder in the second degree and were sentenced to thirty years each. Zeller is nineteen years of age and Griggs and Wheeler have just passed eighteen years.

SUITS FOR HEAVY DAMAGES.

John W. Hurlburt, of Highland Park, brought suit Thursday against the Auto Car Company of Ardmore, Pa., for $30,000 damages at New Brunswick. His attorney was Senator George Silser. Mr. Hurlburt on the night of June 12 was crossing Albany street, in New Brunswick, when an automobile owned by the defendant company, struck him and knocked him down. His spine was badly injured and for a time his life was despaired of. As a result of the accident he is crippled for life.

James Ayres, an aged veterinary surgeon residing in Highland Park, instituted a suit Thursday against the Public Service Corporation for $10,000 damages. He alleges that while returning from the Interstate Fair at Trenton last September the car started and threw him down. He declares he received severe and permanent injuries as a result of the fall.

Confesses Express Theft.

Hackensack, Jan. 30.—J. L. Deshon pleaded guilty in court Thursday to a charge of stealing money from the Wells Fargo Express Company. He was fined $50 yesterday and placed in care of a probation officer. He was formerly agent at the Maywood Station of the Susquehanna Railroad, and also was in charge of the express company's office at that place. He was brought here from Philadelphia Thursday by County Detective W. V. A. Blauvelt on a charge of grand larceny preferred against him by General Agent Andrew J. Young, of the express company. Deshon pleaded guilty to the charge of retaining $64 which he had collected on a package sent C. O. D. In answer to questions asked by the court, he said that he was married and living with his wife's relatives in Philadelphia. He had secured a position in the press room of the Philadelphia Evening Star on Tuesday, he said, and was arrested Tuesday night.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Falling from a car at Eighth street and Kaighn avenue, Camden, yesterday, Zachariah Harris, twenty-nine years old, of 742 Sycamore street, fractured several ribs.

Wilbur Justice, fourteen years old, of 228 Washington street, Camden, is reported to the police as having failed to return home after being sent to the grocery store on an errand.

Milton, the three-year-old son of Louis Van Leer, Jr., of Ferrell, came near dying from an overdose of medicine. It required the services of two physicians to revive him.

Mary Johnson, a servant at the home of Charles Jones, at Hurffville, fell in a faint on the stove and was terribly burned before assistance reached her yesterday. It is hoped by the amputation of an arm that her life may be saved.

Camden's new double-deck city prison was accepted by the Council yesterday. It contains twenty-four cells, is fitted with the latest appliances and is connected with the police administration building and recorder's quarters.

William J. Bapst, of Trenton, has filed a petition for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Mada Bapst, on the ground of desertion. The couple were married at the St. Louis Fair, in 1904, and the petitioner avers that the wife deserted him in that yeat.

Crushed between cars at Pavona, E. J. Mackin, twenty-one years old, of 320 State street, Camden, was taken to the Cooper Hospital last night in such a serious condition that his life is despaired of. Mackin, a clerk, tried to jump on a train, when he fell between the cars. He was crushed about the abdomen.

Lester Young, of Broadway and Thirty-eighth street, Bayonne, requested the police yesterday afternoon to ascertain the owner of an automobile which he found in his barn on Sunday, and does not know how it got there nor to whom it belongs. The machine is a Cadillac and bears a tag number N. J. 2966.

Accidental discovery of the name of James Hyatt, of Danbury, Conn., resulted in a meeting in Camden this week of two sisters, who had not seen each other for forty years, and who for thirty years have not been aware of each other's whereabouts. One of the sisters is Mr Hyatt's wife and the other is Mrs. Mary Pierson, who is living with her daughter, Mrs. A. L. Taylor, 1027 South Fifth street, Camden.

In freeing Charles Carr, arrested while stealing a bottle of milk for his sick wife and half famished children, Recorder Stackhouse told the prisoner that he had no right to take recourse in the unwritten law that a starving man has a right to turn thief. "The city will assist you, and there are many other organizations for the aiding of just such distress as yours, and a repetition of your offense will mean punishment," said the magistrate.

RUTHERFORD REJECTS PLAYGROUND PROJECT.

By a majority of 152 out of 583 votes cast, the residents of the borough of Rutherford have rejected the proposition to purchase the athletic grounds of the Rutherford Field Club for a park and playground. The special election was held Thursday. The Borough Council secured an option on the grounds, subject to the outcome of the referendum. A condemnation commission had fixed a price for the property.

The vote in detail follows: First district, 277 votes cast; 149 against the proposition; 128 in favor. Second district, 306 votes cast; 218 against; 87 in favor; one ballot rejected.

SUSPEND MONEY ORDER CLERK.

Austin Moore, money-order clerk in the Somerville postoffice, was suspended for an indefinite period yesterday morning by orders from the Postoffice Department. This is the result of an investigation which has been conducted by Postoffice Inspector Brigham, of the Philadelphia headquarters.

Serious charges of irregularity have been preferred against Moore, and it is said that further investigation will be made. Moore was appointed to his position about eight years ago when Alvah A. Clark was postmaster. He has continued under George W. Cooper and the present postmaster, John G. Gaston.

Skaters Went Through Ice.

While skating on the Hand Pond, near Feltville road, Thursday afternoon, Rudolph Petersen and Miss Edith Praed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Praed, of Park avenue, East Summit, went through the ice. They had a narrow escape from drowning. The young couple were skating hand in hand, backward, when they went into a large hole in the ice. With his left arm about Miss Praed's neck, Petersen succeeded in keeping her head above water. With his right hand he broke the ice for a sufficient distance to reach a shallow part of the pond. After lifting the young woman from the icy water Petersen got out himself and hurried Miss Praed to her home.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

John McGraw had a letter from Catcher Schiel Thursday in which the writer said he was delighted to be a member of the Giants and that the terms named in the contract sent him, were quite satisfactory. Schiel will be one of the early squad that McGraw will take to Texas with him the middle of next month. All of the new men, whether veterans or youngsters, will go to Texas with Manager McGraw ahead of the regulars. Schiel is especially needed to handle the big crop of pitchers which will be in the squad.

Charles Kuntzsch, owner of the Syracuse club, called on McGraw Thursday to see if he couldn't pick up a young player or two from the surplus. Manager Stallings of the New York Americans had a caller who was on similar errand. George Smith, the Buffalo manager, wanted to get a third baseman from Stallings' supply, but neither of the callers was able to do any business.

Joe Kelley and Magnate McCaffrey of Toronto were still both in town yesterday, but have not come to a formal agreement regarding Kelley taking the Toronto management. As Kelley is said to be booking spring dates for the Torontos, however, it is thought likely that he and McCaffrey have reached an understanding. It is understood that the Kelley-Dovey affairs have not yet been finally settled.

GOLF.

Golf won a victory over real estate Thursday, when leases were recorded in Newark whereby the Forest Hill Field Club secured possession of forty additional acres of land for a term of ten years. This means that within the next few months new holes will be put in commission and the course rearranged and lengthened so as to cover a playing distance of more than six thousand yards.

From present indications the new course will become the mecca for many New Yorkers, because it will be easier of access than any other out-of-town eighteen-hole circuit in the metropolitan district. On the recently acquired property is an old homestead containing twenty rooms and admirably adapted for clubhouse purposes. The building is situated only a few rods distant from the Soho station on the Greenwood Lake branch of the Erie Railroad, and when the new tunnels under the Hudson river, which are now nearing completion, have been placed in commission it will be possible to reach the clubhouse in thirty minutes from this city.

The plan is to abandon seven of the present holes, including the first five below the railroad. By the time the clubhouse is ready for occupancy it will be possible to open the 500-yard hole over the ravine. A bridge will be constructed across Second river from the clubhouse grounds to a point adjacent to the present fifteen green. The new home hole will be only 150 yards long, but as it will require a carry of nearly the entire distance over the river anything save a good shot will prove disastrous.

In a few days Tom Gourlay, the club's professional, will begin work on the course, and as each new hole is placed in condition for play it will be thrown open. It is expected that the trolley line will be extended over Verona avenue to Lake street to a point within two hundred yards of the clubhouse. This will make it handy for Newark golfers.

MOTHER, NOT FATHER, MUST PAY GIRL'S BILLS.

Mrs. Emma K. Colell, not her former husband, Robert P. Lister, of Newark, will have to pay the expenses of their two daughters at the College of St. Elizabeth, Convent Station. That was decided yesterday by a jury under direction of Judge Black at Morristown. The jury awarded a verdict for the convent of $930.80 against Mrs. Colell.

The suit was brought against Mr. Lister, whom Mrs. Lister had divorced. There was no dispute as to the correctness of the bill, but Mrs. Colell insisted that the debt should be assumed by Mr. Lister. He declined to assume it because, as he put it, he was paying his wife $20 a week. Besides this, he declared, Mrs. Colell had the interest on $25,000 and also on $10,000.

Demand Traffic Interchange.

Trenton, Jan. 30.—The State Railroad Commission has received a petition from a number of business men of Camden, asking that measures be adopted to compel the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Atlantic City Railroad to permit a general interchange of traffic between the roads on the Belt Line Railroad tracks running through Front street, Camden. It is contended that the railroads have not carried out the agreement contemplated by Common Council when the ordinance was passed permitting a connection between the two lines. The commission will give a hearing on the petition.

Plainfield, N. J., January 30, 1909.

The Daily Press needs a key to jokes that ordinary people understand without a struggle. In its effort yesterday to study out what was meant by a Courier-News item concerning a very busy Assemblyman, it lost the story of the sale of the French mill.—Courier-News.

Ah, don't take your "bull" so much to heart, brother. You are all right and we like to see you get along. Moreover, we congratulate you on getting a real "beat;" it was an unusual achievement and you deserve full credit for it.

LINCOLN CENTENARY WILL BE OBSERVED

The public celebration of the centennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln under the auspices of the Lincoln Association of Union county, to be held in the historic old First Presbyterian church in Elizabeth, will be a notable event.

The program as arranged will include singing of several patriotic songs, including one in German by the entire Liederkranz Society, assisted by a fine contralto soloist; reading of the Gettysburg address and a poem of eulogy published in "Punch," by Prof. Birbeck, an elocutionist of note; several organ solos by Wenham Smith, and the oration by the Rev. George E. Strobridge, D. D., a noted Methodist preacher, who has the power and the subject to stir his audience deeply. Ex-Chancellor William J. Magie will preside. The Rev. Dr. William Force Whitaker, of Elizabeth, will offer the invocation, and the Very Rev. Dean Gessner, of Elizabeth, will pronounce the benediction.

Every seat in the church will be reserved for the holders of tickets till 7:55 o'clock, but after that time any unoccupied seat may be taken by anyone. The reserved seat tickets, which may be had without charge, will be placed at several drug stores in Elizabeth and elsewhere in the county on Friday, February 5, at 8 o'clock a. m. Not more than six tickets will be given to any applicant.

The church will be beautifully decorated, and an elaborate souvenir program furnished.

To meet the expenses of the celebration, which is to be made worthy of the great occasion, considerable money will be needed. William W. Willett, of 440 Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth, is chairman of the finance committee and to him contributions may be sent.

Christian Optimism

A series of Sermons by Rev. Dr. Chas E. Herring

PEACE.

Peace. That is what the world needs more than anything else. We would soon tire of rest but never of peace, for peace is but another word for harmony, adjustment. There is peace of body when there is perfect health. The body is then perfectly adapted to the physical laws that govern it. There is perfect peace of soul when a man believes that God is directing his life and that all things are working for his eternal good. The Lord promises to keep a man in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Him.

Do you stay your mind on God in the midst of all your troubles? Yes, you are in darkness, but perhaps that experience in the darkness is wonderfully enriching your life. It was so with the Psalmist. He said, "Tho I walk thro the valley of the deepest darkness, behold, Thou are with me." Note, he says, the Lord conducts him not in the valley but thro it. He is a better man on the other side of the valley.

Peace does not depend on the absence of trouble but on the vividness of a man's consciousness of God's presence. Peace finds its basis not in outward thing but within the soul. The peace of God will guard your heart, so that the depressing things of life cannot take away your joy. A man's heart is like a ship's chronometer, which is perfectly poised amid all the reelings and tossings of the ship.

We learn more about peace as we turn to the New Testament and listen to the words of our Lord, "My peace I give unto you." Here we have a concrete example of peace in a human life. Think of it—"My peace." Not the peace He had with the Father before He came into the world as a man, but perfect peace that was His with all the limitations of His humanity.

Read the story of that wonderful life. Behold its wonderful poise. The plaudits of the multitude as He rode into Jerusalem, on Palm Sunday, did not disturb His wonderful calmness. He was perfectly tranquil amid all the discords of the world. He was a man of sorrow—of a sorrow deeper than we can fathom—because of the world's sin, but with it there was perfect peace.

Think of the strange circumstances under which these words were spoken. He is going out to His crucifixion. The disciples are amazed at the calmnes of His spirit in the midst of such trying circumstances, yet from Him came the words, "My peace I give unto you."

Paul, when he speaks, says of it that it passes all understanding. What did he mean? Simply this: it surpasses all the plans and preparations of men for peace. It is a peace above every human conception and device.

What is the condition on your part? Paul says first, be overanxious about nothing, pray about everything, then this peace shall be yours. Don't worry about anything. Pray about everything, and Christ's peace will fill your soul. Just think of it. You may have as good a thing as Christ had. It is doubtful if any man had a life so full of sorrow, yet he said, "My peace," and He said it while men were reviling Him. Look away from the surface of Christ's earthly life to the depths of His nature, and there is His perfect peace.

Get your Bible and read it for yourself in Phillippians, the fourth chapter. You can worry about a lot of things, but don't worry about anything. Exercise all your wisdom and forethought but don't be overanxious. Then pray about everything in your life, and pray believing.

"Speak to Him for He hears,
And spirit with spirit will meet;
Closer is He than breathing
And nearer than hands and feet."

And it is true that the peace of God will be yours. Don't you want it?

BATTLED WITH BURLY THIEF.

Special Policeman Novello, of Elizabeth, who does duty for Linden Township at the big Standard Oil plant in that place, had a desperate battle Thursday afternoon there with Albert Gemolka, a big Austrian, thirty years old, whom he detected stealing wood from the Standard's yard.

Novello held up the man and immediately received a blow on the jaw that knocked him flat. Quickly picking himself up, Dovello, who is short but stockily built, gave chase to his assailant, whom he overhauled. The policeman was armed with only a short billy. The two rolled over on the ground, but Novello wielded his club with such effect that he soon subdued the Austrian, whose head was badly cut. He was taken to the company's office. A telephone message was sent to police headquarters for the patrol wagon, which brought him to the police station.

He had three companions engaged in the stealing, who fled when the fight began. They were not captured.

THEIR EDIFICE RENOVATED

Renovations have also been undertaken in the church vestibules, Sunday-school section, and other parts of the building, but the chief point of interest is, of course, the interior of the church proper.

The magnificant pipe organ, which has already been described in these columns, is the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Hyde and is a memorial to her husband, the late Charles Hyde, one of Plainfield's most distinguished citizens. The instrument cost $25,000, and was constructed by the Skinner Company, of Boston, under the direction of Arthur Gibson, of New York.

Pays Fine at Last.

Harry Story, who, with his father, former Alderman Oliver Story, conducted a wagon express between Elizabeth and Newark, and who yesterday was fined $12.85 in the police court at Elizabeth, for cruelty to animals, is again at liberty. He obstinately refused, as did his father, to pay the fine yesterday. In consequence, Judge Mahon consigned the prisoner to the county jail for thirty days. Young Story weakened after spending several hours behind the bars and paid the money. It cost him $1.65 extra for his refusal to pay in the first place.

Fractured Wrist Bone.

Mrs. E. F. Dubois, of West Front street, slipped and fell on the sidewalk while walking along Somerset street, last night, and fractured one of the bones of the wrist. With some assistance she was able to reach home and a physician was called to set the bone.

FREEHOLDERS CONSIDER ROAD BUILDING PLAN

Many new ideas in road building were brought out yesterday at the meeting of the State Association of County Engineers in the Courthouse, Camden, Union County Engineer J. L. Bauer, and State Road Commissioner Robert A. Meeker, of this city, who were in attendance, have returned and the latter is prepared to report to Director King and the County Road Committee of the Board of Freeholders on several roads recently built in Camden, which were inspected by the engineers Thursday. It is probable that the director and the members of the committee, who are vastly interested in new methods of building roads, will go to Camden to view these roads, with the intention of ascertaining whether the same system could be adopted in this county as an improvement on the present road system.

Union county, as well as all the counties in the State, is looking for a kind of road that will withstand heavy automobile traffic, and in view of this the road committee makes a thorough investigation of every kind of road construction.

The roads inspected yesterday by the engineers are of such different construction from the usual type of county highway as to merit careful examination, and there is but little doubt that the Freeholder Committee will go to Camden for the purpose of looking at these roads.

One of the roads inspected yesterday is built of what is known as imperial pavement, the method of construction being as follows:

The road material, as found, be it sand, gravel, old macadam, clay or loam, is shaped into the proper cross section and then plowed up to a depth of eight inches. The pavement mixture, a patented preparation, is then applied to the surface from an ordinary sprinkling cart. The mass is then plowed up and harrowed, and this process is continued until three or four applications of the mixture have been made, and the whole mass thoroughly impregnated with the mixture. The road is then rolled with a tamping roller, which rolls, as it were, from the bottom up, and the surface is finished off with an ordinary steam roller. Great claims are made for this road, some of them being that it will not disintegrate with frost or heavy travel, will not become hard and brittle in the winter, nor soft in the summer, will knit together of itself, if opened for trenches, is dustless and very durable. This type of road has been tried in the West in several sections with great success.

In Camden and Gloucester counties there is a stretch of some two miles of this road laid, the cost having been only slightly more than macadam. The road has not been completed long enough as yet to form an accurate estimate of its value in this State. It is at present somewhat soft, but the company states that this is only a temporary trouble.

The other new form of road is what is called "Ameisite," named after its patentee, a Philadelphia man. This is a surfacing of about two inches thickness, of a patented preparation, which has been first mixed with stone and which forms a coating over every stone, as applied. The coating is applied at the point of the company, and the treated stones are then taken to the ground and made into the road. The lower part of the work is made in the same manner as an ordinary macadam road. The treated stones are then placed on the surface and rolled into compactness with a steam roller.

This roadway makes a surface just as smotoh as asphalt, and although hard is not slippery. The company claims that the roadway will never disintegrate from frost or travel, is without dust, and always forms a smooth, hard surface.

William Voorhees.

William Voorhees, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Voorhees, formerly residents of this city, died today noon at his home in Brooklyn, where he had been ill for some time. The funeral service will be held Monday night, and the hour will be announced in the New York newspapers tomorrow.

FIRE OUSTS 18 FAMILIES.

Shortly after midnight yesterday morning fire was discovered in a large building at Broad and Division streets, Perth Amboy, owned by Tube Diamond. Eighteen families were driven from their apartments The blaze had its origin in a grocery store owned by N. N. Newman, and before it was extinguished the store and its contents were damaged to the extent of $3,000. Newman carried insurance to the extent of half that amount. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

The firemen fought for two hours before it was subdued. No one was hurt during the fire and none of the tenants of the building lost anything except the Newmans. Diamond's loss was about $2,000; fully insured.

INJURED AT ROSELLE FIRE.

Fire Chief George Dravis, of the Roselle fire department, had his right hand pierced with a splinter Thursday while engaged in fighting a fire that destroyed the large barn on the property of Reed Gordon in First avenue, adjoining the Central Railroad. The fire did about $2,000 damage; covered by insurance. The Roselle Park firemen responded to an alarm and arrived at the scene of the fire at least ten minutes before an alarm was sent in for the Roselle firemen. The Park firemen, when they arrived on the scene and saw that the fire was in Roselle, decided not to lay a line of hose across the railroad tracks. When the Roselle firemen reached the fire the barn was a roaring furnace.

Joint Centenary Celebration.

The Presbytery of New York is already busy planning for the joint celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Brick church at Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street and the Rutgers' Riverside church at Broadway and Seventy-third street, New York, although neither church will complete its one hundredth year until April. Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, pastor of the Brick church, the predecessor of Rev. Dr. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, this city, and Rev. Dr. Robert Mackenzie, pastor of the Rutgers' Riverside church, are members of the committee appointed by the Presbytery to plan for the celebration which will occur the week after Easter on alternate nights in the two places of worship.

Church Choir Banquet.

The sixteen members of the Grace M. E. choir enjoyed a banquet in the church parlors last night. They had as guests Rev. and Mrs. Ora J. Shoop. Following the dinner the company spent a social hour, and were entertained by some piano selections by Miss Alice Carroll.

ARE YOU contemplating the purchase of a home? When purchasing a home there are a great many things to be taken in consideration. Among the many features are: Sanitation (only possible with a modern system of sewers), improvements, environments, social advantages, accessibility, etc. No place around Plainfield combine them in such perfection as Central Park. With its rigid restrictions as to building lines, cost and style of dwellings, business encroachments and covering an area practically from Prospect to Thornton avenues on Park avenue, running through to Hillside avenue, it assures to you an ideal home site. The foundation is laid and all indications point to larger and costlier homes. We would be glad to have you visit Central Park. We are offering attractive homes and plots of all sizes. Plainfield Forty-One Years Ago...

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

June 14—1868.

We are glad to learn that the nuisance of fish venders, etc., which we spoke about last week, is about to be abated, our town committee having taken the matter in hand. That is right. It should have been stopped long ago.

Read the advertisement of R. Dunham in another column. He is determined to sell clothing as cheap as the next man. Give him a call.

We notice that Hiram Hornish, in Cherry street, has commenced to make ice cream for the season.

Workman are tearing down the building belonging to A. Berry, on the corner of Front and Cherry streets. We understand Mr. Berry proposes to erect a large brick building in the place.

The Railroad Flagmen in Plainfield have proven to be public benefactors.

Between six and seven hundred coal cars pass over the Central Railroad daily.

Cherry street is being macadamized from Second street to the Railroad.

"Champagne Charlie"—a new soda water—a new specialty with Marlowe Reynolds. Go and try it.

The population of Trenton is estimated at 27,000.

Taxation is rapidly exhausting the resources of the American people. The only hope for relief is to vote out Radicalism root and branch.—Editorial.

New Paper—The publication of a new weekly will be commenced in Plainfield the first week in September next. It is to be called "The Central New Jersey Times." E. Dean Dow, Editor and proprietor. The Times office will be in the new building now being erected on Cherry Street, opposite the Post Office.

The size of the rocks dumped into Cherry Street for the purpose of macadamizing it looks to the uninitiated very terrific. We have, however, great faith in the ability of our friend Gillies to render the rough places smooth.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The magnificent first part of the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels called "The Fiesta of Flowers," has been Billy Clark, the Minstrel with the A. G. Field Greater Minstrels, at New Plainfield Theatre, this afternoon and evening.

fittingly renamed by a dramatic critic as "The Bay of Naples." Bursting as it does suddenly on audiences almost totally unprepared for anything quite so magnificent, the Fiesta of Flowers never fails to make an impression that is pleasing. Possibly the "Bay of Naples" would have been a better name for this magnificent depicture. Nothing not fully as beautiful as the world famous Bay of Naples can be compared with it scenically. A number of the best scenic artists have been at work on this setting for over a year. Design after design was drawn and rejected, until finally the artists caught and executed Mr. Field's idea. The Al. G. Field Great Minstrels is booked for this city for an engagement at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight.

Clyde Fitch has scored again. This time he has given the contemporary stage a farcical comedy which, it is said, is sure to prove a masterpiece. The farce, although it has already run for over a year in Germany and France, is still "going." It has also been presented in Austria, Sweden and Denmark and now New York is said to be laughing itself sick over the funny complications of the play. Of course the play is "The Blue Mouse." While the piece is being shown in New York—where it is likely to remain for a year or more—the Messrs. Shubert have organized a company equally as strong and are sending it on tour. With a cast including Willicent Evans, Geoffrey C. Stein, Wilton Taylor, Inda Palmer, M. Caroline Pearse, G. D. Macintyre, W. G. Reynier and fifteen others, "The Blue Mouse" will be seen here for the first time next Thursday night at the New Plainfield theatre.

TWINING'S HOPE OF A STAY IS WANING.

The remitter of the Supreme Court at Trenton in the case of Albert C. Twining, under sentence of six years in State prison for exhibiting false minutes of the directors of the Monmouth Trust Company at Asbury Park, has, on order of Prosecutor John S. Applegate, Jr., been sent to the Court of Oyer and Terminer in Monmouth county.

After the remitter was sent from the Supreme Court to the Monmouth county court Thomas P. Fay, counsel for Twining, took out a writ of error in the Court of Errors and Appeals, but as the remitter had already been sent to the trial court it cannot act as a stay, and Mr. Twining will be apprehended and brought to Freehold. He will be transferred from there to State prison unless unforseen proceedings are taken to stay execution of sentence, which the authorities here deem impossible.

Detectives are looking for Twining, who is believed to be in New York. David C. Cornell, secretary and treasurer of the trust company, who was convicted with Twining and sentenced to three years in State prison, was in court yesterday in compliance with his promise to appear when wanted. As Twining did not appear he was not held. He will return when Twining is caught.

Miss Carrie Smith, of Jersey City, who has been spending the past week here, has returned.

Mrs. H. B. Sutphen, of Newark, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Minton, of East Sixth street, returned home yesterday.

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Plainfield.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtures of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Plainfield. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, and kidney disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Plainfield sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

Mrs. John Driscoll, 753 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "The statement I gave several years ago concerning my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills was true and still holds good in every particular. I had a dull pain across my back which cdung to me incessantly. Hard work increased my misery and at times I also suffered from headaches and dizzy spells. I tried plasters and remedies of various kinds but without finding relief. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I finally purchased at Randolph's Pharmacy, relieved me and I heartily recommend them. I know of other persons who have used them with just as good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

AMUSEMENTS.

Blanche Ring, lately a star feature of Joe Weber's stock company, will return to vaudeville for the first time this season at the Colonial the forthcoming week, presenting some new songs, amongst them her famous "Yip I-Ady." Miss Ring probably has to her credit more song successes than any other artist in her line. It was her vivacious rendering of such "classics" as "Bedelia," "My Irish Molly-O," "Waltz Me Around Again Willie" and "In the Good Old Summer Time" which gave to them their tremendous vogue. Besides Miss Ring, Miss Annette Kellermann will continue to disport herself in the water tank, presenting her graceful diving feats as well as her attractive and skilful exhibition of "Diabolo." E. J. Connolly and his company will present George Ade's one act comedy, "Marse Covington;" Willard Simms and his company will be seen in a farce entitled "Flander's Furnished Flat;" Julius Tannen, whose likeable and easy monologue is a favorite headline attraction, will be on hand with some excellent new imitations and bright talk.

With all the wonderful weekday features the New York Hippodrome will have still more attractions when tomorrow night it will introduce in New York for the first time Lyman H. Howe's Lifeorama, presenting in great motion pictures the first views of the Italian earthquake. This will be the first spectacle of these pictures which Mr. Howe only secured after great energy and expense. The traveler has been all over the stricken country and his knowledge of the localities effected by the earthquake makes his selection of pictures the best and truest. In addition to this series other subjects of travel and historic interest will be shown. Mr. Howe, who is the best known of picture men, has met with remarkable success over the country. His arrangement with Messrs. Shubert & Anderson gives him his first opportunity to present his wonder pictures in New York. The Hippodrome's big week day show still continues to draw the largest audiences the big playhouse has ever known. The new circus is the most remarkable areic performance ever given in this country.

SHOWS JERSEY'S WORK IN THE WHITE PLAGUE.

Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, one of the greatest tuberculosis authorities in the United States, addressed a mass meeting at Trenton Thursday night on the "Care of Advanced Cases of Consumption—An Important Step in the Campaign of Prevention." Dr. Hatfield said in part:

In the State of New Jersey there were last year 3,500 deaths from consumption, and the city of Trenton has a high death rate from the disease. If the ratio is in proportion to that of Philadelphia, there are as many deaths from consumption here as all other diseases put together.

Dr. Hatfield claimed that consumption is a preventable disease and that from the preventatives already taken the deaths from consumption have decreased 40 per cent in the last 25 years. He advocated as preventative methods, first, the reporting of each case to the proper authorities; second, the disinfection of homes in which tuberculosis has existed; third tuberculosis dispensaries for those who are unable to pay for treatment; fourth, a nurse to visit patients at their homes; fifth, medical inspection of the schools, and sixth, sanitoria for curable cases and hospitals for advanced cases.

New Jersey has made a beginning. There is a State law which is not especially well enforced, requiring notification. There are State tuberculosis dispensaries, and an energetic campaign is being carried on by the State association.

Dr. Hatfield told of the importance of the care of advanced cases of the disease, and gave figures of the fighting of the disease in foreign countries and told of their hospitals. He advocated hospitals situated in or near cities on the plan of the Henry Phipps Institute, in Philadelphia, and urged strongly the carrying out of the movement in Trenton to set aside the Municipal Hospital for the care of tuberculosis. He spoke of the lack of funds, but urged a beginning to be made at once, to start with one room, if necessary, and for Trenton to show the rest of the State how the problem should be solved.

ARRESTED AFTER TESTIFYING.

Trenton, Jan. 30.—Frank Ferry, of 857 North Stillman street, Philadelphia, and William Costello, a Green street bartender, of the same city, were arrested here on the charge of perjury yesterday as soon as they left the witness stand. They had testified in the cases of Charles Rohrer and John Shevlin, New Yorkers, accused of being pickpockets, who have operated in Trenton. The defendants have powerful political influence from Tammany Hall and other sources.

Catherine Dowling, of this city, was also arrested as soon as she had testified that Rohrer and Shevlin were not in Trenton the time the Mercer County authorities asserted they were working their trade. The officials served notice that other witnesses would meet the same fate if they testified falsely. The prosecutor is determined that political pull will not free the accused.

CURRENT VERSE.

The Rose's Memory.

(One of the scientists declares that plants have memories.)

I wonder if each rose that lies
Between dim, long-forgotten pages
Has memories of dreamy eyes
That mirrored love in other ages?
I wonder if each petal pressed
Against a bosom wildly heaving
Can hear the hopes that are confessed,
And listens, joyously believing?

Can you long-treasured rose recall
The gay night when a maiden kissed it
And, having shyly let it fall,
Pretended that she never missed it?
How clearly I behold the scene,
Which pleasing fancy spreads before me!
Ah, many and severe have been
The storms that since have broken o'er me.

I wonder if this faded rose
Remembers how we danced together,
And whispered—ah, I trow it knows
We did not talk about the weather.
Perhaps—perhaps, if it were blessed
With speech it might, e'en now, be able
To tell me if 'twas once possessed
By Gladys, Joan, or Maude or Mabel.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Good Intent.

There are warriors crowned, there are poets wreathed,
And the crown is bright, and the laurel.
Though the song be hushed and the saber sheathed
And ended be the quarrel.

There are widening wills and divine desires,
There are fires of high endeavor;
Though they faint and fail, though the flame expires,
The light shall live forever.

Then we should not grieve nor allow lament
To be monarch of our madness,
When we backward turn to a dead intent
That lived and died for gladness.

For the thought shall live, and the high resolve
As an eagle fan the summit,
Though the deed it dares it may not evolve
And fate may overcome it.
—Robertus Love, in New York Sun.

Fortune's Wheel.

Turn, Fortune, turn thy wheel and lower the proud;
Turn thy wild wheel thro' sunshine, storm and cloud:
Thy wheel and thee we neither love nor hate.

Turn, Fortune, turn thy wheel with smile or frown:
With that wild wheel we go not up or down;
Our hoard is little, but our hearts are great.

Smile and we smile, the lords of many lands;
Frown and we smile, the lords of our own hands:
For man is man and master of his fate.

Turn, turn thy wheel above the staring crowd;
Thy wheel and thou art shadows in the cloud;
Thy wheel and thee we neither love nor hate.
—Alfred Tennyson.

The Innocent.

Through sunlit days she sits and sings
From earliest dawn to eventide;
Her spirit's sweet but ruined strings
Thrill to the light and naught beside.
The falling night, the storm and rain,
'Tis only these that bring her pain.

For then her reason flutters out—
She shrinks, and fears the baffled thing
That beats so helplessly about
With blinded eye and broken wing.
Could one but still that piteous sound
And cure the maiden's cureless wound!

Is hers a finer sense than ours—
Attuned to some more rhythmic sphere?
Since even in the time of flowers
She seems a saddened exile here;
So alien, vague and out of place—
A moon adrift in noonday space.
—Ada Foster Murray, in New York Sun.

I Heard a Soldier.

I heard a soldier sing some trifle
Out in the sun-dried veldt alone;
He lay and cleaned his grimy rifle
Idly behind a stone.

"If after death, love, comes a waking,
And in their camp so dark and still
The men of dust hear bugles breaking
Their halt upon the hill.

"To me the slow and silver pealing
That then the last high trumpet pours
Shall softer than the dawn come stealing,
For, with its call, comes yours!"

What grief of love had he to stifle,
Basking so idly by his stone,
That grimy soldier with his rifle
Out on the veldt alone?
—Herbert Trench.

Utopia.

There is a garden where lilies
And roses are side by side;
And all day between them in silence
The silken butterflies glide.

I may not enter the garden,
Though I know the road thereto;
And morn by morn to the gateway
I see the children go.

They bring back light on their faces;
But they can not bring back to me
What the lilies say to the roses,
Or the songs of the butterflies be.
—Francis Turner Palgrave.

Marriage.

To make a happy bridegroom and a bride
Demands not love alone, but much beside.
Relations one can meet with satisfaction,
Ideas that do not wholly disagree,
And marriage? Why, it is a very sea
Of claims and calls, of taking and exaction.
Whose bearing upon love is very small—
Here mild domestic virtues are demanded,
A kitchen soul, inventive and neat handed,
Making no claims, and executing all.
—Henrik Ibsen.

Rallying.

When you've whispered good-by to the dreams you once had
And turned to the hope of to-morrow,
You'll walk in the ways that are sunny and glad,
Forgetting the valley of sorrow.
When you've lifted the burden you tried to lay down
And answered the call of your duty,
A rainbow will gleam where the skies wore a frown
And life will unfold a new beauty.
—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Safer Way.

To steal a kiss is not amiss,
Though it may lead to sorrow.
The burden of my song is this:
To steal a kiss is not amiss.
But why become a thief of bliss,
When you can simply borrow?
To steal a kiss is not amiss,
Though it may lead to sorrow.
—Lippincott's Magazine.

LOVED AND LOST.

Once she was all the world to me;
I saw her last night at the play;
She seemed somewhat inclined to be
A little stout and rather gray.

I think I told her once that I
Would love her till death laid me low;
Yet she refused me then—just why
I have, somehow, forgotten, though.

Once I supposed no other maid
Could ever cause me to forget;
Now she is rather stout and staid,
And may remember with regret.

Once she was all the world to me;
I saw her last night at the play,
But I've forgotten whether she Was Gladys, Grace or Madge or May.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Feminine Charm.

Woman bustles into corner drug store. May she use their telephone? She may, certainly. She calls up: "Hello! Is this the Magnum Opus? Well, I want the drug department. Is it true you are selling the dollar size of soothing syrup for 65 cents? Well, you may send me up a bottle."

Woman gives her name and address. Hangs up receiver. Is going out but comes back. People of the place feel their hearts melt with good will when she says: "Let me have ten cents' worth of stamps. I forgot to stop at the postoffice, as I came along."

She is perfectly unconscious throughout.—Puck.

Domestic Economy.

"Nora, was that the coalman I saw making love to you yesterday evening?"

"Yes, ma'am; but I 'ope, ma'am—"

"Does he love you very much, Nora?"

"'E saye 'e does, ma'am."

"Devotedly?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, tell him that unless he gives us better weight than he has been doing we shall get our coal elsewhere."

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

A saucerful of quicklime placed in a damp cupboard will make it dry and sweet, instead of musty and fusty. Renew the lime occasionally, for it loses its power.

Discolored ivory knife handles should be cleaned with lemon juice and salt. Cut a lemon in half, dip it in salt, and with it rub the ivory. Wash off immediately with warm water, and wipe dry.

To keep mice away from pantries and cupboards, sprinkle cayenne pepper on the shelves. In boxes and wardrobes put lumps of camphor among the clothes, for mice dislike the smell of it. The camphor must be renewed every now and then, for it evaporates in the air.

Wash brass ornaments with strong ammonia, using a brush dipped in ammonia for the fancy parts. Rinse in hot water, dry and polish while still hot with leather. The polishing is done equally well when the brass is cold, but less rapidly.

Dresses, carpets and rugs, and all sorts of woolen fabrics, may be cleaned with potato water without injury to their color. Put a pint of water in a basin and into it grate two raw potatoes. Then strain this through a sieve, allowing the liquid to run into another bowl containing another pint of cold water. Let this settle, then pour off the clear part into a bottle for future use. Dip a sponge into the potato water, with it rub the soiled garment carefully, and then wash it with clear water.

COURT SUSTAINS DEATH SENTENCE FOR LANG.

The Court of Errors yesterday at Trenton sustained the conviction of Frederick Lang for the murder of his niece, Katie Gordon, in Middlesex County. The appeal had been taken by Alan Strong, counsel for Lang, on the ground that his client was insane. As a result of the decision Lang will have to be hanged in New Brunswick, as his crime was committed before the passage of the law establishing electrocution as a death penalty.

Judge Booraem, of New Brunswick, in the Middlesex County Court last fall refused application for a stay of execution on the insanity plea, but Justice Bergen allowed the stay, pending the decision of the higher court. Lang's crime was committed in April, 1906. He shot his niece when she refused his love-making.

EIGHTEEN MONTHS FOR N STABBER OF BARTENDER.

Clarence E. Case, counsel for Antonio Mormile, of Far Hills, who was convicted in the Somerset Court of stabbing William J. Dillon and many prominent people who were acquainted with the prisoner and the circumstances connected with the stabbing of Curry.

Judge Schenck sentenced Mormile to serve eighteen months in the State prison. Mormile, who had been out on bail since his arrest some months ago, was taken to the county jail to await his transfer to prison.

BUILT WITHOUT GRAFT

and municipal authorities, visiting officials from other places, civic organizations and the public at large. The building is now practically completed, but the furnishings have yet to be installed. It is thought that the court house will be occupied about March 1. Dedication services will be held at that time. Although the details have not been arranged, they will be of a simple nature. The building will be formally turned over to the county authorities by the building committee, and it is probable that one of the clergymen of Somerville will read a prayer of dedication. The building will then be thrown open for inspection by the public.

The committee under the direction of which the court house was constructed is composed of Freeholders William J. Logan, of Somerville, chairman; Thomas E. Gibson, of Princeton, and Richard W. Hoagland, of Frankford. Messrs. Logan and Hoagland are no longer members of the Board of Freeholders, but under the law they retain their membership in the court house committee until the structure has been completed. Plans for the court house were made by James Riely Gordon, of No. 402 Fifth avenue, New York.

In its external treatment the building is conspicuous for the simplicity and dignity of its style of architecture, which is of the Italian classic type. Although massive the structure is graceful. It is built of white Alabama marble. A wide stairway, broken by a landing and extended balustrades at each end, leads to the main entrance, opening on what is known as the judicial floor. There are porticos on the front and two sides, the great marble columns giving an appearance of both gracefulness and strength. The structure is surmounted by an imposing dome, which also is supported by white pillars.

Entrance to the ground or executive floor is gained through marble storm vestibules on the front and both sides, from which may be reached the ceentral rotunda, which extends from the ground floor to the dome and is thirty-eight feet in diameter. The rotunda is surmounted by a stained glass skylight, which is also arranged to have an important part in the ventilation of the building. On this floor are the offices of the County Clerk, Surrogate and Board of Freeholders, including committee rooms, private rooms, toilets, vaults, etc., in convenient proximity. The spacious record vault is arranged with ample windows and steel fire protection. Adjoining are the transcribing and recording rooms, every part of which is thoroughly lighted.

The judicial floor is reached from the ground floor by two grand stairways of marble, while there is a private stairway for the judges. Encircling the rotunda on that floor is a marble colonnade, leading from which are the court room and the suites of offices of the County Prosecutor, the Sheriff, the Probation Officer, and an unassigned suite. Adjoining the court room are witness, lawyers' consultation, judges' and jury rooms, all with toilets. The court room is connected with the jail by a tunnel. The balconies of the court room are reached from the colonnade rotunda on the third floor. On the same floor are the Grand Jury chamber, with witness and other rooms adjoining, and suites for the County School Superintendent and the County Engineer, including a record vault, and an unassigned suite.

One of the most striking features of the building is the court room. Particular attention has been paid to its acoustics, lighting, ventilation and convenient arrangement, which in some respects is novel. Its central dome is surmounted by a large ventilating stained glass skylight. The interior decorations have not yet been applied, as it was considered advisable to have the walls and ceiling thoroughly dried. The galleries supplement the seating capacity of the room and at the same time enhance the artistic effect of the chamber.

A storage vault for old records, toilet and other rooms are in the basement, which has a high ceiling and is perfectly lighted.

All the furniture for the Court House has been made to order. The building will be finished and furnished in quartered oak. The hardware is of bronze, burnished in Roman gold. The seal of the county is engraved and sunk on the face of each door knob. The building is heated by the plant in the county jail, which was designed for that purpose when it was installed in the latter structure.

Few public buildings have as fine a site as that of the Somerset County Court House. Somerville is a quaint old town, with quaint houses and fine well shaded streets. One of the prettiest sections is what is known as Court House square, extending on one side of East Main street from North Bridge street to Grove street. The county owns that property with the exception of the property on the corner of East Main and North Bridge streets, which is held by the First Dutch Reformed church. The latter is one of the oldest churches in New Jersey, having been organized in 1699.

There is a fine gray stone church edifice fronting in East Main street, and on each side of it is a brick chapel. Pending the completion of the Court House the chapels are being used by the county. The chapel between the Court House and the church will be removed and it is not improbable that the other one will in the future be faced with gray stone, so that the three buildings on the square will be of fairly uniform appearance so far as color is concerned.

At East Main and Grove streets is an old frame building used as a store and residence. Part of the first floor is being temporarily used as the Sheriff's office. That building will be removed and part of the corner cut away, forming a small plaza. On the corner will be erected a water fountain in memory of the late John H. Lord. The latter's sister, the late Ailene Ford, provided in her will that $12,000 should be set aside for that purpose. Mr. Lord was president of the Second National Bank of Somerville and was a public spirited citizen. He died about nine years ago.

Another building to be erected in the vicinity of the Court House will add to the attractiveness of the neighborhood. It will be an armory for Company M, Second regiment, New Jersey National Guard. It is to cost $20,000. It will be located on the east side of Grove street, just a little below the Court House.—New York Herald.
